Does the spreading happen through the actual minecraft client or a minecraft related website?

Thanks for taking interest guys. but all the vouch copies are now gone.
Some time in the near future I may allow more and you guys will be the first on the list.

The program runs through the minecraft protcol, meaning it runs through MC without having to have the client open.
(Aug 26, 2014 08:49 PM)Tidal Wave Wrote: [CITE] What kind of results have your customers received with this software? Clicks, Installs etc.
From my experience I have had nearly 500 clicks in 10-30mins on my website as i was using it for website traffic, it depends on the time of day and how active the servers are at that time. :)

My customers have had said some pretty good stuff too!

KillaProDiGy - August 27, 2014, 5:20 am
I put this method to use a bit ... with a encrypted bot and gained like 3 installs LOL but I got some hits.

Ill have my second review with a crypted server in a few days with some hard spreading.

- My experience using this software was..... Pretty nice ran it for a little bit spreading a uncrypted Dark Comet server, got a few installs lost them too due to antivirus and forgetting to put start up on the damn bot. :/ ... I will crypt a server and fix that up then post some pictures soon. This is effective and if you are lazy this is a GOOD SOFTWARE to get you some EASY bots. Minecraft is made from kids and they download and go to anything that sounds good so I am extremely confident you will EARN with this software. Easy bots. Easy way to spread a miner or CPA virus to make money off bots so im pleased.

I have a link to my original thread on the this one.
This product is definitely worth it, considering it originally sold for 35$ but I've cut the price in half.
(Aug 28, 2014 02:20 PM)e4stwood Wrote: [CITE] So how does it work? What does it actually do?
MineBot is a program that offers the capability of mass spreading on many MC servers. It scrapes a series of servers from multiple source sites then relays/spams a designated message of your choosing to each server. This is great for spreading, advertising, or accumulating traffic for your website by spams the URL to your website. There is little to no ban rate on the program and the program is 100% fully functional on the newest version. The only requirements you'll need is patience, java, .netframework, and a Minecraft account. There is no need to have your Minecraft client open during the spreading as MineBot intelligently runs through the MC server protocol.

Well, putting it this way if you were to purchase it a month ago it would've been twice as much.

With our plans for a new update we are going to increase the price, but that's not going to be In development until version 1.8 of MC comes out.

Compared to other spreading softwares like the well known Omeagle spreader, this out performs it drastically and it's cheaper. ?

(Aug 30, 2014 11:29 AM)Nexal Wrote: [CITE] Looks like a nice product OP, however many server-owners disable links in chat.
This isn't a problem, there are still many servers that allow it and you can always bypass the link prevention by adding a couple spaces in between the characters in the URL.

But even then you don't have to always put a link,
You can also try adding many people to a skype account by using MineBot then mass messaging all the skype users with Clown Fish to go to the link or send them your file (for PPD/CPA use, etc.)

This isn't basically a spam bot.
It is a bot, but it does quite a lot more than repetitive spamming.
It scrapes a series of MC servers and then relays messages (your own input) onto each server in a time sequence. Then if you choose to, you can then have MineBot cycle through the list of servers again or "loop" to allow for a second message to be posted on the same server.

Technically it's not spamming if it's done on many different servers.
? thanks for allowing me to clear that up!

? thanks for allowing me to clear that up!So you're telling me it's completely autopilot, and I don't have to login to each server individually and start the bot on each one?

What makes this better than simply looking on sites and getting server IP's and then spamming your link?

Ya I'm telling you it's completely auto pilot lol.
It makes it better because it completely autopilot and you can spread/advertise on a mass scale.

MineBot doesn't even need to have the MineCraft client open for it to spread/advertise, it runs through the MC protocol.

Yes! Thank you.
We are actually working on implementing a proxy support, although it isn't really needed and there is little to chance of being banned. We are also working to revamp the GUI significantly!

In a way it is a spam bot, but not really considering it hops from server to server before posting again. This is a great program for advertising your server regardless.

That would require a whole refactor of the coding, but you can always use a combat ability software like mono.

We've decided that there's no need to update it right now as it's perfectly fine and up to date, but when version 1.8 is decompiled we will then proceed to update it.

This is very very effective.
MineBot's scraping feature is temporarily on hold, the spreading functionality should work just as well though.

You will need to integrate the servers manually into the servers.txt folder, which shouldn't be found difficult at all.

No it is not needed, your account wouldn't be banned from this.

If your worried, just use a VPN.

Reticulum - October 13, 2014, 10:35 pm
So you're telling me that going on someone's server and spamming messages won't get the account banned? Lol that's a good one!

It doesn't just go onto one server and spam a million times then go to the next one. It'd be the same as me going to server to server typing the same thing, but manually.

Ya I'll update the thread. It's just that I'm so F'ing busy with school, sports, and everything that it's hard to leave time for my little hobby on HF. I'm actually not really interested in the money to be honest, I just like the whole aspect of selling something that people are interested in or might enjoy.

HF is really just a vice for me, but I'll try and fix it as soon as possible!
