It would be better if possible to download https or socks proxys. Does this test proxys as well?

I'm assuming this solely scrapes proxies? So a good amount of them could be dead when they're scraped?

The program doesn't test the proxies but the sources that the program scrapes proxies from tests the proxies.

This only scrapes proxies but from sources that tests the proxies.

Due to limited information given to us by the proxy sources, this is not possible for all the proxies you scrape.

Removes dupes: 2,424 remaining
Tested on my private checker
Results:

Overall: If you're lazy to scrape your own, this is a quick way to scrape proxies quickly and easily. The program is fast. I suggest a dupe remover to be implemented maybe on your next update. And also to fix what I mentioned above IF possible. Bottom line, for $5, it isn't that bad. Maybe try adding more quality sources to scrape from. It has plenty of potential.

I have just tested the proxy scraper right now and I am seeing no issues. It will be frozen at around 70-80 proxies for a couple of seconds and then the proxy count will jump straight up to the 10000s range.

It scraps from proxy sources that update proxies so you should be getting a lot of working proxies.

Checker isn't necessary as there are much faster proxy checkers online for free that is more reliable than checking using your own internet connection.

The problem itself seems simple tho.

The website you are scraping is having some kind of anti-scrapper it seems like.

The proxies also needs ports, which is not provided in that file, which they should be - if I am right.

You should try a few other sites, just to see if it's the site you're currently using, that's fucked.

The proxies are public since they are scraped from free proxy sources. There is no way of filtering to only show http proxies since all the different types of proxies are mixed together.

Those are false positives due to the licensing system we use (NetSeal) and the protection we add to the program to prevent it from being cracked and leaked.

Look up .NET Seal 2 licensing system on HF. It's known to show up as false positives. Even the licensing system creator can confirm. In their next release when .NET Seal 3 comes it, these false positives won't show up.

I tried playing nice with anti-viruses by intentionally leaving the update components unencrypted and unobfuscated so their engineers could clearly determine that Net Seal is not malicious. This should resolve any possible false detections.

Just bought the product! Will update you with results.

Vouch for this seller and program. I received a serial code for the program instantly after purchasing it. Didn't need to set it up at all. A well-coded program. Scrapes around 3500 proxies for me. Would recommend other users to buy this program!
