Thread: Just cashed out 3.8M DGB for $144500

Cryptic™ - June 13, 2017, 7:35 pm
I just cashed out 3886238.706948 DGB for $144500 (51.95079109 BTC)

I spent $20841.841584 (12.00488310 BTC) on getting all those coins between May 7 and May 18.

Full details: https://i.imgur.com/3zQTcmt.jpg

I could have gotten around 80-85 BTC had I sold a couple of days ago when it was in the 1900/2000+ satoshi range but I got a little too greedy, waited for it to increase more and then a massive crash came.

I'm not interested in holding DGB any longer as I have other coins that I know for sure will make me a lot more profit in the same time frame it will take DGB to get back to the ~2400+ satoshi range.

Profit on this investment was: $108500 (39.81637811 BTC)

Previous investment(s):
I also just cashed out all my XRP. Made $27450 by Cryptic™

Cheers.

Nope. $150K is nothing. There are people with millions of dollars worth of money on Poloniex and other wallets.

And the whole point is to keep growing it by reinvesting it.

Cashing it out to the bank technically does not 100% secure your money. And it just sits there doing nothing. It's better to put the money to work by investing. Of course, you should always set aside an emergency fund for yourself incase you lose everything. So keep an emergency fund that will last you 1-2 years.

If there is a world war that happens tomorrow, guess what, all the money gets seized by the government to do whatever they want with it.

Keeping money in the form of crypto currency is the best, why? because it is decentralized. No one can steal your money from you unless you are an idiot that get's ratted. lol

If you have a ton of money in Cryptos and don't know what to do with it, best thing to do is store it in a hardware wallet like a Ledger Nano S in the form of Ethereum.

Ethereum will only continue to grow. Better than sitting in the bank. :)

From that statement alone you value your Cryptos more than the US Dollar? Lol take some profit into real cash and make real investments man Crpyto market won't be around forever trust me on that stuff gets regulated once the government gets involved.

Btw not hating or anything good job on the investments but if I were you I would actually cash that out to real money and invest in Real Estate or something because once a coin crashed you lose money.

The Crypto world is still a baby, and it's already at a 100 Billion dollar market cap.
Literally <1% of the world is involved in this stuff right now.

Most people don't know about this stuff, and out of the ones that do, only a fraction of them are involved.

Experts and analysts are saying BTC Will be ~ 100K USD each in 10 years, what does that tell you? The Crypto market cap is going to grow like hell. At least 25x of what it is right now.

Don't store coins on any exchange, best thing to do for LONG TERM investments is to withdraw your coins from the exchange to an external wallet.

The 50+ BTC I have on there will be converted into some new coins, and then I will withdraw them to an external wallet.

In regards to the SIA and other coins I have on there, I have not gotten around to moving it to an external wallet yet lol.

You don't.

Let's say you have 10M dollars worth of Crypto.

Your too lazy and don't want to invest it in anything at the moment.

Just store it in the form of Ethereum or some other coin that you know will continue to grow for sure, and just cash out what you need.

If you need to buy a car for 30K, great.
Just sell 30K worth of "Ethereum" locally for cash.

Or convert it to BitCoin and sell it on LocalBitcoins for cash.

Cash is king.

The whole point of Crypto currencies is to be decentralized. Screw taxes.
Do all deals in cash.

There are people in every major city that buy tens of thousands worth of BTC/ETH daily, all u need is to find one of those people and once you build that connection, your set.

If you were to send it all to the bank, you would have to pay a ton of taxes.

In my city I have to pay 50% taxes on 50% of the profit.
If I made 10M profit, I'd have to pay 2.5M in taxes. Screw that. lol.

Read up about the coin and the technology behind it.

Think of Bitcoin like a car from the 1950s. Really old, inefficient, outdated.

Think of Ethereum like a Tesla. Modern, Electric. Hella Efficient.

Second of all, Ethereum is what a ton of tokens and new coins are based on.

And eventually, within the next decade, Ethereum, or something better that comes along, will replace Bitcoin as the #1 coin. Maybe not in price, (as BTC's value will continue to grow and analysts/experts are saying it will likely be $100,000 USD per coin in ten years.), but in usage/utilization.

Ethereum is far more efficient and faster at confirming transcations (10 seconds) as opposed to the many hours or even days BTC transactions take.

If ETH get's very popular, won't it get clogged just like BTC? Or do they constantly update it?

Nope. ETH wont get clogged. The technology is completely different.
BTC has a certain number of transactions it can fit into one block which causes the huge bottle neck.

Ethereum does not have a certain number of transactions it can fit into one block. It is dynamic.

Quote:Bitcoin has a hard limit in its protocol that does not allow more than 1 MB of transaction data in each block. Since a block is generated on average once every 10 minutes, that means that on average the transaction data limit is 1.67 kilobytes per second, or about three transactions per second.
Ethereum does not have a hard limit on the size of its blocks. Miners decide the limit collectively, and can nudge it up gradually by creating-bigger-than-average sized blocks.
So no, Ethereum doesn't have the same problem as Bitcoin. It will however need some innovations to make it scale efficiently, which is needed both for maintaining decentralization at higher transaction throughputs, and to encourage miners to accept greater transaction volumes, and those are planned and being worked on.

Read here for more detail
https://www.reddit.com/r/ethereum/comments/5ydyzd/is_it_possible_that_ethereum_can_have_the_same/

Quote:I currently have around $5k USDT on the exchange, wanted to buy ETH at dip. Should I buy some ETH right now, or should i keep waiting for a dip?

I mean, I personally would not buy any ETH right now because you will only 1.5x-2x your money in a year from now.

I'm personally not interested in such small profits. You could take that 5K and turn it into a hell of a lot more in the same timeframe by investing in other altcoins.

But if you have money lying around and don't want to invest into other coins and just want it to grow slowly, then sure. Buy ETH. It's better than it sittting in the bank collecting interest.

And how would you justify that to Paypal? They don't bite the story "I'm exchanging BTC" even with proofs, they just limit :\

GAME is a 10x coin. Meaning this time next year it'll be 10x what it is right now.

They have a huge plan which involves targeting the Indian market before they target anywhere else.

India has around 1.3 billion people, it will make a huge difference.

GAME's platform is going to be a huge thing in Asia/Europe.

The market cap is 233M right now https://coinmarketcap.com/currencies/gamecredits/

Quote from Jack Kuveke:

Quote:Jon doesn't expect massive right into the release of the store (end june-july), but he does expect GAME to do a 10x or more, hovering between 2-5 b marketcap by the end of the year (conservatively). There will be a stream of announcements and updates even with marketing not going into affect until at least July (marketing from MGO funds, somewhere around 30-35 million in value).
(Jon is the CMO).

Quote:India has basically no access to the mobile gaming market and is barely a 1 billion in size.

One of our desires to capture the Indian market early on before they boom and grow rapidly.

Also, marketing in India is dirt cheap, so user acquisition could be extraordinarily high.

There's more but that was the main thing.

You advise. I invest.

Haven't lost any money yet off of things you've openly posted about investing in.

Very modest of you to be so open with the community about your choices, I respect that tremendously.

From that statement alone you value your Cryptos more than the US Dollar? Lol take some profit into real cash and make real investments man Crpyto market won't be around forever trust me on that stuff gets regulated once the government gets involved.

Btw not hating or anything good job on the investments but if I were you I would actually cash that out to real money and invest in Real Estate or something because once a coin crashed you lose money.
Not quite true...
