Thread: August 1st Mega Help Desk

Kill Joy - July 27, 2017, 10:23 pm

As we near August 1st, more and more people are going to be asking about what will happen, how to avoid any problems, and how to get out of any problems.

Things you can do to prepare right now
Move your Bitcoin to a wallet that you control the private keys!

Understand what Bitcoin Cash (BCC) is and who supports it

View wallets that support the User Activated Soft Fork here (this will be for SegWit2x supporters).

View wallets that support the User Activated Hard Fork here (this will be for BCC supporters).

Keep up-to-date on the news.

Beware of orphaned blocks and reorgs. Wait for 6-8 confirmations to avoid double spending and various other possible attacks on the blockchain(s).

The safest option is converting to fiat. This is your choice of course.

The Difference Between the UASF and UAHF
The User Activated Soft Fork will be supporting SegWit2x and your current BTC will be the same coin. This has been the more favored plan.

The User Activated Hard Fork will be supporting Bitcoin Cash. This is a completely new coin such as when Bitcoin Classic became legacy. This is an UNLIKELY OUTCOME due to the 100% support for UASF. Major exchanges and top mining pools suggested they will support BCC/alongside UASF.

It is vital you all understand everything about what is happening and what may happen. Post anything and I will try to help you understand.

Couple questions:

For UASF, do we need to do anything with our bitcoin? e.g. Move it from Coinbase to external wallet

Can certain services (pools, exchanges, wallets) not support both, UASF and UAHF, or do they have to support at least one of them?

SIM-82498 - July 27, 2017, 10:56 pm
I haven't managed to find the time to look up on the details for UASF and USHF, but your links are useful. Thanks KJ, appreciate the thread.

All UASF supporters will update their clients.

Yes, both can be supported by adding additional nodes. I know viabtc.com is supporting both: https://pool.viabtc.com/pool/bcc/state/

If I keep my BTC in multibit, will I be able to claim BCC for the same amount after August 1?

Percyi - July 27, 2017, 11:00 pm
I saw that Coinbase will not be supporting Bitcoin Cash. I currently have some money in Coinbase that I am not wanting to invest into Bittrex currently. If I keep my money in the Bitcoin Wallet on Coinbase, what will happen? Thanks for doing this to clear up any thoughts. Sorry if this seems like a stupid question.

Get your BTC out of Multibit. Multibit HD hasn't even been updated since March. Lack of updates and work by devs show no support for anything right now. If there are two chains you should be able to choose which one to go with.

Coinbase will update for SegWit2x. Coinbase also doesn't let you control your private keys so I suggest you get them out of there ASAP as they have had a backlog of transactions for awhile now. If you're looking to go with BCC, find a wallet that supports it from the resources I provided in the OP.

I haven't heard of Blockchain supporting the UASF, move your funds out of the web wallet to a place where you control your private keys completely. If you don't have the seed and didn't get the mnemonic already, you should do that now.

Shoes you supported Wallets and exchanges. With 100% support for UASF right now it's unlikely UAHF will happen. I should probably clarify this in the OP. I'm only talking about BCC since I've seen a few threads and several questions about it.

So it I put my btc in bittrex I'll get equivalent bcc?

Neal Caffrey - July 28, 2017, 2:06 am
I'm a bit confused in regards to how backing up wallets works.

So I've got a decent amount of Bitcoin spread across about 5 different platforms (Polo, Bittrex, Blockchain etc). If I want to consolidate them for Aug 1, how would I go about doing so?

So far, I've downloaded and synced a Bitcoin Core client, but obviously that wouldn't support Bitcoin Cash right?

Could you direct me as to how to backup so I'll have both versions of Bitcoin? :)

You can move all your funds to say, Electrum. Save the private keys. After Aug move import your private keys to whatever client you want to that supports whatever chain you want to be on.

Depends on where you store your BTC. Make sure you have your private keys so you can import them to whatever chain.

Correct. BCC may become useless to trade, it might not. Everything is up in air with what will officially happen. Trading legacy coins can become risky.

Safest option is just having fiat or waiting everything out for the clear winner, if there is one.

Well with the split, the value before should equal the value after anyway, but with more activity on one. I'm going to take a stab and say that they'll both converge to a price, but in total it'll be more than the value of what one BTC is on the current blockchain.

Value of BCC will be significantly less than the value of BTC.

Well any exchange that doesn't commit is essentially double-dipping, no?

I'm using Electrum now, seems easy enough to use. After I export my private keys into storage, will Electrum be supporting both? So if I re-import after the fork will I see both BTC and BCC in my wallets or?

Sorry, I'm slightly confused about the logitistics of all of this :(

If you have your mnemonic seed (usually 12 or 24 words) saved, then you can import that into any BCC wallet after the split.

Doesn't it make sense to take it out simply because the loss you receive from not getting BCC should be offset by the price decrease in BTC?

So if you don't withdraw, your BTC holdings will go down, but you won't receive BCC to compensate?

Please help me understand if I am right.
There will be a fork happening on 1st of August. Can I keep the BTC in Electrum itself and then wait for BCC to get annexed to it.
Now there are two coins on my single address, now I can transfer BTC to another wallet and export the keys of first wallet which has BCC in it to the wallet which supports BCC.

Do I need to worry or I am correct ?

I'd like to clarify that not all wallets listed here -> https://www.bitcoincash.org/ are legit.

I'm pretty sure "FreeWallet" is a scam. I remember reading about it in the past

https://bitcointalk.org/index.php?topic=1964190.0 +
https://bitcointalk.org/index.php?topic=1963839.0

Also, I wouldn't trust Electrum Cash either https://bitcointalk.org/index.php?topic=2053806.0

The fact that bitcoincash Dev team didn't do a proper research about wallets that support BCC is very alarming.

The best I can find on that is speculation but explanations. The OP of the reddit thread that seemingly first started the FUD posted later saying it might be an explanation, and later deleted his account as well as the thread.

Since its free money I already move most of the balance from coinbase and cloudbet to cex.io site since that exchange site support the bcc split.

Iregardless whether the new bcc is succesful or not, you have another coin to play/trade with. Eg. if 1 bcc trading price is 25 buck, if you got 10 bcc its 250 bucks, you sell the bcc you get 250 bucks. Extra money.

I am sorry if someone has already answered this but I'm kinda confused reading all the replies on the thread.

My question is, suppose I have like $2k in BTC so after the split I'll get to keep :

1) My $2k BTC as is and
2) BCC equivalent to $2k BTC

Am I right ?

I'll get BCC which would approximately be worth: $200 (if BCC is 1/10 of BTC as in the news).

Thus, I'll earn a profit of $200, is that correct ?

Aqua_fina - August 1, 2017, 4:29 am
I think users that switched their altcoins to BTC (especially ETH to BTC) just to get free BCC already lost money..

Ethereum went up 9.95%, so if you had your coins in ETH the value of your coins would have increased 9.95%

However, if you switched to BTC = If we assume for every 1 BTC ($2850) you have, you'll get a $200 BCC*, thats a profit of 7%

*(current price of BCC is $281, but I'm sure it will drop down when thousands of people sell it in same time) https://coinmarketcap.com/currencies/bitcoin-cash/

so to sum it up, if you kept your coins in ETH you would've earned 2.95% more

The main thing is has to do with other coins is the fact people use bitcoin to buy altcoins generally speaking so any changes on BTC can fluctuate other coins prices.

Well as a person whose giving help desk you should know that the crypto market fluctuates often, if you sold it for less than $250, then I'm sorry.. You should've sold it for $400 instead.

And regarding "Traded for less than $250", that was in a single exchange.. This is a decenteralized currency, so anyone can set up any price they want.. you should've known that as well. As of right now, the majority of exchanges sell it for $400

Your logic is if a single exchange is selling it for a specific price that means that price is its "Real value" ?

EtherDelta exchange is selling Ethereum for $27,070 a coin (yes $27k) https://i.gyazo.com/8ff3230d0660b030e46189377148fdee.png , should we say ETH is $27k now? Be sensible. Price of a coin is calculated based on the average of exchanges, not a single one.

Opened Electrum -> Sent BTC to a new address.
Downloaded Electron Cash 2.9.0 -> Opened a new wallet
Imported the Seed/private key, now it says my balance is 0 BCC?

Fixed the issue, nvm lol

What did you do to fix the issue?

I have now ETH and if I transfer it to BTC, do I need to create new wallet first or I can transfer to old one? Last BTC transaction was done on 31.07.2017. I send BTC for ETH. So balance on 1.8. was 0 BTC.

So new wallet needed or I can use it normally same as before?

hey paging alexjohn

now that bcc is $1300, would holding eth still have been better?

Is there a reliable wallet that I can claim my BCH with? I obviously have my private key.

Nope, because you still have unresolved scam reports for 4 years, one of them for as little as $400 https://hackforums.net/showthread.php?tid=3355637

so we don't need you to tell us how much you have, we can already estimate it

I also want to know this.

Why is it important to have your private key?
I have my Bitcoins in Coinbase and don't really care about BCC.
What should I do?

Because without it, control of your money can be taken from you.

well its past aug 1 anyway so its too late even if you did care
but you should use a different wallet

Hey, I'm not sure if you'd know what to do in this situation but basically I was transferring my NEM from Poloenix to my NEM nano Wallet and I have not received my NEM yet in my wallet also the NEM does not appear to be on Poloenix either.

On Poloenix it was "Complete: ERROR" and giving no cancel option. I did a test run before I send all my NEM and the first 100 nem went through fine..

I contacted support and still waiting on a reply. It's been 20 hours so far so not to worried but I have a funny feeling I won't be hearing from them IDK why. Any feedback would be much appreciated! Thanks! ?

You will want to create a thread for this as this topic isn't meant for this thread.

Additionally, their support sucks so you may be waiting awhile.
