Thread: Cheat Engine - Game companies lmao -

Mr. Robot - January 3, 2019, 4:52 am

So I don't think this belongs in the gamers lounge due to the nature.

It has recently been revealed that Riot Games / League of Legends client will find tabs open in your browser. It's something I have believed Runescape/Jagex to have done for years, detecting names of programs running/installed - hence why they don't tell people how they detect botters - to scare people away.

Right so what has been revealed?

If you open training tool in League of Legends - while having a tab open in your browser on google, searched for "Cheat engine" - the game will crash at the 10 second mark.

Vandril tested it on YT as have I(those screenshots above are mine) - he tested it by changing the title of any window in his browser to contain cheat engine.
He also tested it with changing a text file name to "not using cheat engine" and it crashed at 8 seconds just having it on his PC.

So let me test this, but if I name this thread to contain in the title "Cheat engine" - and you have this tab open in your browser, your game will crash.
-- Tested -- it will crash your game/should crash your game having this thread open while trying to play.

Just to be clear, I have had cheat engine installed on this current machine for a long ass time - They don't give a fuck if you install cheat engine, it will work fine - just don't have the title in a browser

Let's be honest the general public doesn't care about privacy, come to think of it most of the internet doesn't deserve privacy.

You aren't wrong but that changes nothing.

Like you already said, this has been done for years.

I miss the old time where you could use Cheat Engine to easily bypass Hackshield and even use anti-ban in Maplestory.

Pokerstars and FullTilt were fuckers for this back in the day. Their clients were basically legal spyware that could and very often would analyse, view, screen shot and generally take a shit on your rights and privacy. It is wrong and should be heavily punished IMO.

Sounds like a half ass way to try to prevent people from cheating, or maybe they're not legally able to obtain certain information which is why they tried to make a walk around.

it also doesn't help publishing what info your collecting since a lot of these parameters can be spoofed

Talking about anti cheat.. Bethesda's revolutionary implementation for FO 76 wasn't much more than checking for Cheat Engine.exe ?

The majority of gamers don't even read the end user agreement so they're surprised when someone discusses what these anti-cheats collect and everyone gets upset when they didn't even read the fine text.

Gamers shouldn't cheat.

Game companies shouldn't spy on your browser.

Two wrongs don't make a right.

Pretty grimy imho what they did.

The thing is though right, Cheat Engine doesn't work on League of Legends but is a valid tool for other games/offline as well as editing live programs easily by changing values around.
Also i've had it installed for a long ass time and that doesn't crash it, only when you have it in the title of a browser.

I feel like this is all being misconstrued. Games aren't spying on your browser, they're hooking into Window titles, browsers update their Window title to what ever tab is open. Anti-cheats aren't viewing your browsing history, nor viewing any content in your browser.

Unfortunately, old news. Modern anti-cheat behavior has been riding a very dangerous line since Battle Eye became popular amongst AAA titles. Even highly limited anti-cheats like VAC had gotten into a scandal a few years ago for harvesting client browser data. It is no surprise that Riot may have taken this step.

THE WORD CHEAT/ HACK ETC ARE TRIGGERED AUTOMATICALLY

r4mbl3r - January 3, 2019, 9:13 pm

Anti-cheat software has been doing this sort of thing for a long time. All of them are, to some extent, monitoring what you do at least while you have the game open.
The two things that annoy me about it is that they are not upfront about this and the pious INSTANT PERMABAN attitude they have.

Weird, I havent messed around with CE In years, but its funny to see its looking at whats going on.
