Thread: Realistic dream cars?

30y old boomer - August 22, 2019, 11:48 am
Mine is an Audi A4 3.0 V6 Diesel, 300bhp stage 1 and 430lbs.ft torque shit fucking goes and because of the AWD there's no wheel spin, it just launches you
Or a Mazda 3 MPS (Mazdaspeed 3) if i wanted hot hatch but as I do motorway miles it's diesel-gang for me.
Best thing is if i save for 2 years I could have a good example of either of these, insurance would be the issue as i'm a young driver.

What about you guys?

Nissan GTR R35 & Tesla Roadster.

Lindros - August 22, 2019, 12:02 pm
I would say the new C8 corvette. A sick looking mid engine super car for under $60k. What is not to love?

I wouldn't consider 60k realistic but it's a lovely car

I mean it is definitely more realistic than a lambo or Ferrari. That is the average annual household income in my state.

I would like to see how practical the 2020 roadster will be before saying I really want one, but I do think they are pretty cool. The future is going to be electrified either completely or with strange hybrid setups.

Not going uni, hopefully joining Navy which would give me the money to buy the car/bike I want but then I have less time to drive/ride them :/

It's a beautiful car hands down without a doubt.
But my eyes will always have that extra love for the R8 tbh.

Im just inlove with the idea to be in a multi functional car, that doesnt look sporty, at the same time just ghosting everything.

Yeah true, it literally looks like a "family/ish" kind of car tbh.
The R8 on another hand is a bit more sporty yeah haha!

my DREAM car is a mazda rx7 FD and do a mad 3/4 rotor build

I believe the future is going to make us buy electric cars. Technology is the future, electric cars are the future anyway.
Also the reducing of CO2 emissions are great. I dream that we will have electric cars turning CO2 into oxygen.

I really like the BMW x5's and the sport versions like the m50d. Give me that black with black rims and I'll be set for life.
I'd really hope they'd make an electric version of it. An electric jeep would be nice as well. I really do like the Tesla Falcon though

MMA Fighter - July 31, 2020, 11:58 am
