In my opinion this is probably worth the $20 for a lot of people who are getting into AI and want to explore possible business ventures or even personal projects. With that being said I also feel like a lot of the ideas are geared more towards personal use/personal projects, But they can be a good starting point for brainstorming your own ideas, or pick out the ones you like from here and feed them to ChatGPT to get more ideas you may like. And honestly thats probably what you should do or else everyone who buys this will be working on the exact same ideas. Keep in mind you will need programming knowledge to implement any of these at scale since theyre all based off using the gpt. Otherwise each method has to be implemented by hand for every client (could work on a small scale but not feasible at a larger scale)

Edit: I reread it and compared to chatgpt results. Turns out GPT4 will generate a lot of the same/similar ideas as in this ebook

Final thoughts: The layout/design is nice and easy to read, but I shouldn't have to say that since every page looks exactly the same as the one in the OP, some of the content is rehashed (lots of the steps to implement repeat the same thing as other steps and are very basic/a general overview). This still can be useful for people new to chatgpt or just the ai scene as a whole, but if you have a lot of experience with chatgpt/prompt engineering it may not be worth it for you

Just wanted to clarify that the ChatGPT API is NOT required for this guide.

ChatGPT can be accessed for free here: https://chat.openai.com/chat/

Happy prompting!!

Unless you plan on starting a business that relies on using chatgpt by hand for every client, yes implementing the api is absolutely required. Any business at scale would have to do this

How long roughly until you start seeing profits? Obviously depends on which method you implement but an estimate would be good.

There are a few factors (like the method you choose, your execution, etc.) that determine when you'll see your first profits, but realistically I think you can expect to see profits within 1-2 weeks of buying.
