The remains of alleged "non-human" beings were presented on Tuesday (September 12) at Mexico's first public congressional hearing on Unidentified Anomalous Phenomena (UAPs), also known as UFOs. The two stuffed bodies recovered 2017 in Peru were 700 and 1,800 years old, with only three fingers on each hand and elongated heads. The hearing aimed to rule on the phenomenon in the Aerial Space Protection Law, which would turn Mexico into the first country in the world to acknowledge the presence of aliens on the planet, local media reported.

Pretty crazy no? ? What's your guys thoughts?

Same to be honest. Apparently they've tested the bodies from a health specialist in the Mexican army, confirming that these bodies are at the very least real and also not human by DNA standards. Part of me wants this to be real, because this opens a path towards so many possibilities for mankind towards the future, then the other part of me is scared how the rest of the world(mainly the religious fanatics) will react to it. Will definitely be interesting to see how this develops going forward. ??

If there wasn't a hidden agenda, we would've never been given this information.

Looks so generic and dumb. Clown world.

Interesting post.

The bodies bear a great resemblance to the protagonist in the 1982 movie "E.T".

I want to believe, so i hope this is the real thing.

I feel like it's a really cool idea, but obviously there's a lot of grey area over the whole "aliens exist" topic. I'm happy to know the government has finally admitted to them existing, but like what another member said. What's their agenda behind it?

Aliens. Hard to prove, but hard to ignore.

This is the same alien from 2 years ago that was debunked.

this would have been mind blowing if it didn't look exactly like every alien ever shown in mainstream media, also they look pretty dead to me so not really that crazy even if its real
