Thread: Do you prefer spontaneous or planned travel?

Traveling looks different for everyone.
I like a balance. I usually plan the main points, but I leave room for spontaneous activities or stops.

Do you like to plan every detail or do you prefer to go with the flow when traveling?

I'm with you on that balance! Having a plan helps ensure I don't miss out on key attractions, but leaving some time for spontaneity often leads to the best experiences. Those unexpected moments can become the highlights of the trip. Do you have a memorable spontaneous adventure from your travels?

I'd plan the main things and then the rest is just spontanious tbh.

I like to have some general guidelines of what I want to do and where I want to go when I travel, but I'm also open to just exploring wherever life takes me.

Honestly I'd say a bit of both. I've planned trips a year in advance and I've planned others a week in advance.

It depends on the trip. If it's just me and a friend it could be last minute, if it's with family it will probably be planned farther in advance

I totally agree with that. Depending on who I'm going with, and how long I'm going for, the time spent planning my trip is going to vary considerably.

A mix of both is nice. I like to have a plan, but do enjoy winging it a little too.

I plan my travels out. When I get there I do spontaneous things.

Planned definitely. I wouldn't enjoy it otherwise.
