Death Note maybe? a lot of people that liked DN liked CG and vice versa.

I've never seen anything that quite compares to CG, deathnote comes close, but not quite.

Code Geass is just genius but Death Note was awesome too.

I suggest against this. Just simply watching the same styles of anime makes anime less exciting. I suggest you change anime types between series.

i thought code geass was kinda like gundam,
i may be wrong tho

I've never really gotten into Code Geass.

Might have to check it out.

But if you like gundam style action- but with better animation check Eureka 7.

Well, I don't know many animes similar to Code Geass besides Gundum so I'll just recommend some good anime. Death Note is good, it's a detective story about a late-teen year old boy who finds a notebook that if you write someones name in it, they die. Love Hina is good even though it doesn't have ANYTHING to do with either of those. It's about a man named Keitaro who goes to live in his grandmothers inn but upon arrival he figures out it got turned into an all girls dormitory. It's more of a romance/comedy but it's great. Anyways, hope you find what you're looking for.

lol, you really need to diversify your list, don't get me wrong though, I started like that (but it was only for 1 week though, after reading issues of ANN, Anime Insider, Protoculture and monitoring scene releases, that all changed... ?)

If it's mecca, try Linebarrels of Iron, NGE, Parallel Trouble Adventure Dual, Rahxephon, Full Metal Panic, Gundam, Macross/Robotech, Vandread. They have all very different styles of story delivery, pacing and animation.

Diversify? And why is that? I like all different kinds of anime. I said I didn't know much mecha related anime so I told him some other anime's that I like.
