Thread: Curious about poker site exploit

Hello.

I am a professional poker player that plays on a lot of sites including one very niche one. The small and niche one is running on software called Poker Mavens.
It appears like it has been exploited before and am curious about a tool to do so.

Given my results and long time history as a professional, there is one specific player that plays absolutely abysmally but acts as if he knows my hole cards and possibly board runouts. This is the first time I genuinely believe I've been cheated on a significant scale in my 6 years as a professional player.

I mostly am just curious how viable it would be to exploit it to allow some combination of access to opponents' hole cards or access to the board runout.
(cards to come) I am notably convinced I have been cheated by one specific player. He begs me to play nonstop on this site only and has offered to pay me to play here. I countered by offering to pay him instead and to play any other platform which he refuses.

Should a tool be developed, I would only use it versus this particular player as he's confirmed scammed many users on the site and staff refuse to do anything or look into his cheating. Also, after draining his acc via using the tool for massive advantage or other sources of draining his account, I would look to make a video demonstrating its' usage to completely dismantle the sites' and the softwares' integrity. I have no intent of doing damage to innocent users other than this player that is almost certainly cheating me and if not, gets all his money scamming in the first place.

New to this space and not exactly sure where to look.
