Thread: IT & tech staff rank among world's least motivated workers

Global research highlights a troubling trend: IT and tech service professionals are among the least motivated workers across all sectors.

The Motivational Maps assessment covers a diverse sample of employees from over 100 countries, though participation levels varied by country. Motivation scores are derived from the level of fulfilment across nine motivating factors.

Findings point to a strategic opportunity: employers can elevate motivation by implementing regular assessments and designing roles that align with purpose, development, and impact.

Is the case that the more the work is out of tune with nature. The less fulfilment a person is likely to get?

Many tech workers apparently feel their roles are reduced to task execution rather than strategic contribution, leading to loss of meaning and motivation.
