Thread: An uber member is still same as a regular member...

#OccupyHackForums - October 3, 2010, 2:14 pm

I don't get why people trust other people in hackforums because of reputations and the rank tags like ubers and leets.

A uber member is still same as a regular member.

- You have never met the person in real life.
- You don't know where they live.
- You don't know what they are capable of doing.

I seen a lot of apple call-in threads and people are getting scammed by ubers.
Are you seriously gonna give someone like $200 or more to a person that you have never ever met or seen? You don't know his name, you don't know his phone number or address, You don't know the person, you just don't know him...

A uber upgrade costs $30 only! Posts counts and reputations can be earned so easily. People gives out reputation for no reason at all..

If a uber with 1k+ posts and 500+rep makes thread like Apple-call-in, I bet lots of people would wanna buy the service from him/her. That uber could get like at least 5 people buying his service without any actual proofs because of him/her being a uber and with the post counts and reps. 5 X $200 = $1,000. That uber can just leave and take that money to himself and get out of hackforums.

Here are the benefits of uber:

And much more.
Where does it say in there that ubers are to be trusted with $200? Where? Do you see it? NO!

Proofs and Vouches:

Are you telling me that you're now gonna buy something online to a person you have never met and doesn't even have a proof? Always look at the proofs! Don't just assume that the uber is trust worthy by his post counts and reputations.

Many people vouches other people's thread just because they have dealt with that person before..Guess what? People change!
Look for the vouches from people who have actually bought that specific service and vouched. Don't just look at vouch that says, "vouch, legit person. sold me blah blah before.."

Common Sense:

Why would someone want to sell those service? Clearly, that uber could just ship the iPhones or iPads to their home and sell it on ebay for like $600 to $800. Doesn't it seem weird? That uber is basically selling a new iPhone 4 to you for only $200? They could make more profits selling in ebay rather than selling it here.

Obviously when you sell/buy something from ebay, you have sellers/buyers legal protection. You can also chargeback! But in this case, the ubers want these demands:

1) Must send all money at once

2) Must send as paypal gift
3) No escrow service
4) No listening to the call-ins

Reputation means NOTHING when you are dealing someone that you don't know in real life, with over $200.

Let's look at your recent reputation.

Being ub3r means that,

You can sell little stuff >$30 which others would trust you with. ($30 > $2 stuff)

Anything $50<
should be weary, seeing that the return for ub3r/l33t from scammers is much higher.

Things to look out for now:
Shady shell booters. (fresh ones especially, ones that have "discounts")
PID call ins.
Some Codedom Crypters (.Net) -> scantime. Pr0t0types is legit, I'll admit. (happy?)
Real Life items
Anything they can sell fast, and can stall you for a few days.
Etc.

I think I trust UB3Rs less than other members... they seem to always be the one to screw me over the most.

I've had them screw me over for even $5 and $10 while I'm sitting here having people trust me with up to $580 (LR - irreversible :o) and don't give them any problems. Every person is so different but most will screw you for any decent amount especially if you're powerless.

And read my rep if you think it means nothing - always read rep and decide its quality. Good choice.

No,
If Ub3r is $30, they can go ahead and put up a thread selling__ for $100.

$100 x 5 = $500.

Except for the fact of having to pay $30 and be chosen by omniscient, ub3rs are usually trusted.
There are always going to be the exceptions, I mean think about it... With all the members on this site of course there will be those 100-150 untrusted ub3r members but there are very few if any regular members I would trust with $200.

But honestly, most Uber's are. The reason that they don't have the Iphones shipped to there house is because they don't want to get v& by apple so they take there expertise and make money off of it in a way that makes the odds of getting caught very low.

What's your point? If I trade with a regular member, I get...

1. Still, NO contact information. Being an upgraded member or regular member does not mean more trust.
2. Higher chance of a scam.

You need to accept the fact that either way, upgraded or not, I still don't get the phone number. Lots of regular members scam too.

The point is a regular member is same as uber member when it comes to buying/selling $200 or more.

Nope. A lot of people feel more comfortable conducting deals with upgraded members, a less chance of a scam.

Would you rather trust a random person with an iPhone or a reputable person?

They are not trustworthy. They are only more helpful to the forums. Being trustworthy on dealing with $200+ and being helpful to this forums is very different.

I still don't understand how you don't see this. An upgraded member instantly gains a bit more trust because he has contributed to the site and likely is going to be a trustworthy member, where as a person with 20 posts can just scam some one without losing an investment.

eBay and Amazon are perfectly secure. It's a big company. At least you have a option to chargeback in there.. But with ubers asking for $200+ as paypal GIFT, is not something that I would trust..

If you look at buyers section, ubers are doing this apple call-in service for $200+ and asking to send money first as paypal gift..

Gain trust? Sure they gain trust for like $30 to $50, but $200 and asking to send as paypal gift...meaning can't chargeback..

We all know no one would even bother trading to someone 20 posts for $200 but people do trade for ubers with more posts and reps which is perfect reason to scam..

Most people have the money in paypal balance. Half the forums people in here doesn't even have a credit card. They use virtual credit cards to get more sending limit.

Sending gift is something that you actually send a gift, these services the ubers do are Services. So, when the buyer wants to buy their service, shouldn't they choose the option as Service when they are sending money to paypal instead of gift?

but if you can't charge back you can get scammed as well. imagine like 20 people buying that uber's service which means like $4,000 and the uber can just bail out on the service..

or what if apple did find out about the method and the buyers had to return the products, most likely, that uber, will not send everyone their money back...

the best solution would be to use a escrow service approved by the admin and has verified paypal account..

So ub3rs are untrustworthy because you're to lazy to push out the extra $100-$200 and use eBay?

If you want something cheap from us then you buy it the way the seller says.
If you want something with guarantee then fuck off and find somewhere where you can buy it for full price (If it's new as well).

You can't have your cake and eat it too.

Actually there is many difference between normal members and leets and ubers.

leets and ubers tend to rep abuse :P...mostly ubers rep abuse to behonest though.

About the scamming :
I look at - vouches
official reviews
'trusted member' reviews

however ubers are no more trusted then normal members, it is all down to the reputation you make yourself here even as a normal member if you make a good rep with everyone, it does not make a difference.

I would spend $30 just to prove you it doesn't matter, but sadly I only came here to make a list of members that don't really belong in a cute forum like this.

Post count actually shows a bit more than "uber" because uber I can get really fast just by paying what most of the members here make in a month ($30), but if you have a lot of posts and history then you really have something to lose here when scamming.

Ebay has buyers/sellers protection. Hackforums doesn't have those. Buying/Selling for up $50 is one thing but $200? And you have to send it all as paypal gift and no escrow service and no listening to the call-in.

I totally agree, people think you need like 1,000 post and ub3r or l33t before they can trust you.

eBay has full information of the buyer/seller/shipping.
You also cannot sell cars on eBay without meeting person to person.
eBay also has buyer and seller protection and not a sketchy site like here.
eBay also has noob proof security.

I find this entire conversation interesting as back when I was more active here Uber did not exist it was just l33t and thats it. Since then Omni has obviously added alot of other groups. I honestly have no idea how to even get Uber though I am quite interested in doing so. Back on topic however....

Some points to note.

Omni has a no BS attitude so anyone with a Paid Membership here is less likely to screw you over as they went through a sort of screening with omni to buy that membership.

Those who can afford to buy things are usually more trustworthy than those who can't. I know this is hard to explain really but fact is a rich man is less likely to steal $5 our of your wallet than a poor guy.

Finally I find your argument less valid as your not Uber yourself thus only speaking from the biased view of the other side.

Just thought I would chip in my two cents...

DALINA - October 7, 2010, 6:08 pm
You can't really just say "would you trust an ub3r with $200" as ub3r is a very broad spectrum. It depends on which ub3r. As for me I would just ask around to see if the person has done any deals and followed through before, or to see if he/she has scammed someone.

You don't know which uber is the right one. Just because they have done deals with $200+ and no scamming reports doesn't mean that they will be trusted again... People can change and sometimes uber's account gets hacked...

It just means they are MORE trustworthy. And if they change or have been hacked that's your shitty luck.
Also @ the person above me, if you look through his threads he scams people all the time.

I agree, if i started to buy on this forum, I would be so cautious it's not even funny. Even if it was just up to $50. It's still somewhat a large sum of money.

Not all ub3rs can be trusted. And yes it is really easy to get rep on here.

On the other hand, the majority of them can be trusted. You just gotta watch for the jackasses on here.

I agree with you and disagree with you.

Ub3r members cannot be compared to regular members. They are the high point of the community and have earned their spot on the Ub3r group. You make it sound like being Ub3r is nothing at all and there is no difference. I am not saying there are no scammers in Ub3r, because quite frankly I think there may be even more. But you also have some Ub3r members that High Quality members and have earned everything you see on their profile.

I do however agree with you about the reputation and posts. People get reputation for no god damn reason. Some people will go out and positive rep for having negative rep, which is honestly the dumbest thing I have ever came across on HF. And yes, people can spam to get a higher post count, but use common sense and check their posts before buying from them.

gulle55 - October 15, 2010, 2:29 pm
i totally agree with this. Look at my rep, i'm at -3, that was because of some "important" über who was selling steams, i wanted to see pics of them so he did send me. i wasn't looking for any of those games, so i said no thank you and he -rep'd me. i was like wtf and everytime i try to buy/sell anything people want sell/buy because of that. I think that's shitty because of an "important" über who i wasted 2 minutes of his live..
sry for my bad english.
i also disrespect the übers for -repping this guy, wtf he just don't like/trust you. is that a reason to -rep?

Avion - October 15, 2010, 3:23 pm
any member of any category can go rouge and do anything. Not all Ub3Rs are special. Most of them are good people but do make mistakes. Others just want money and nothing else.

The Elite - October 15, 2010, 4:18 pm
The OP is correct. I know many people that have hacked 50+ Brazzers accounts, gave them away for free. Got over 150+ reputation then scammed $350 USD, and repeated. Sadly I didn't know their usernames. Yes, they had UB3R also.

Donate $30, scam $200.

Yeah if being ub3r means you're trusted in this community, I wouldn't trust an ub3r as far as I can throw him(Which I can't throw through the internet, so).

Reputation has nothing to do with the Marketplace, therefore it should have no impact on a members "trust".

HF should really make a member group that you have to earn by proving you know shit and posting useful threads....I had a lil 14 y/o the other day hit me up asking for a free account from my for sale thread, his reason being because he is uber. Funny some kids (not all but a lot) think that because they are leet/uber they are better then the rest on here and can be trusted 100%, but when I see ppl on here that are banned from other forums for scamming with leet tags, and lil kids who don't know much about the computer underground world cept keylogging and phishing with uber tags on here, makes it not even worth buyin 1.

Now if there was a member group that you had to earn by demonstrating knowldege and showing you know your shit....and once an admin or mod notices that you'd be offered that member group and you could chose to pay a couple bucks for the new member group or not, I'd deff be down for doin something like that. What I do on my forums is I offer vip accounts to anyone who'd like to purchase 1 and gain access to the vip area....and then I have a user group called Super elite members, which it can only be earned by ppl that I know have multiple skills and know a thing or 2 about the whole "hacking game"

(Oct 3, 2010 03:10 PM)Josh Wrote: [CITE] i see this shit all the time, here are a couple of methods i use to make sure the seller and the buyer dont get scammed.

1) NEVER NEVER NEVER EVER SEND AS PAYPAL GIFT!!
2) if the purchase is more then 25$ get to know the buyer, try to get some backround knowlage about him. use yout gut feeling to deciede if you personally trust him/her.
3) use a TRUSTED middle man if you need.
4) look on other forums to see if he has any previous scam reports.
5) dont go first unless the person has decent ammount of vouches
6)DONT GO BY REPUTATION, people do Rep for Rep with friends all the time,
7) look at the rep and see if any of them say things like "good transaction" and stuff along those lines
8)make sure the seller has 100% proof of the item, not stolen or carded.
9) if your a buyer and your afraid of them doing a chargeback, hold payment up to 24-48hrs
10) lastly, Ub3r,L33t and normal members are all equal. just Ub3r and L33t means they have the money to upgrade, and omni accepted them to be ub3r.

i use these 10 steps in all transactions, doesnt matter on the item or price.

Hope this helped :)
