

Forum:Hack Forums

Thread: Office 2010 serial key question.

OKB - March 28, 2011, 5:27 am

Hey,

I have a program where it lets you see serial keys of programs registered on the PC.

If i took it to college and got the office 2010 keys do you think they are single use?

Ie, could I use them at home/sell them on etc?

I mean, 2000 computers with it installed on, I can't imagine them using 2000 keys.

thanks in adv.

Kikarian - March 28, 2011, 6:02 am

Well most schools don't have 'Single' use serial keys, as that would cost a bit more and take much longer...

So basically MOST Schools have one serial that will work with a different Computer.

Also, say a School buys a serial key that isn't single use, they usually lock the serial key (Which makes it invalid, they do this by ringing up Microsoft and telling them that they want the serial to be locked...)

So if you get serial keys from a School always check it first. Just download a trial of Microsoft Office 2010 and input the serial you gained from the school.

Oh and I'm guessing you read this thread?..

<https://hackforums.net/showthread.php?tid=1157925>

Thanks

-DeadlyStealth

OKB - March 28, 2011, 6:11 am

yah that was the thread I saw.

Thanks for the help.