1101bINaRy1011 - February 25, 2008, 8:42 pm

after about a year of trial and error, I finally pulled it off. it only lasted for about 10 mins, until they fixed it though...

<http://i179.photobucket.com/albums/w283/Brandon335/SavedScreenshot-1.jpg>

I'm pretty proud of myself. lol!

S_R_S5 - February 25, 2008, 11:55 pm

I see you went to a site and in the url box put "http://www.google.com", but you made a mistake. Go to google.com and look at the url closely. It is "HTTP://www.google.com/", You left out the "/".

Good try though.

S_R_S5 - February 25, 2008, 11:57 pm

Sorry to burst your bubble. ?

1101bINaRy1011 - February 26, 2008, 12:11 am

what? naw man, I just typed it in to take the screenshot on another comp. ask anyone, I did it at 3:37 PM, it went offline until 3:46 PM

S_R_S5 - February 26, 2008, 12:14 am

I don't like liars! :angry:

Ireqom - February 26, 2008, 6:20 am

1101bINaRy1011 - February 26, 2008, 7:59 am

it only comes up AFTER you click away from the address bar. I just pressed enter. I'll tell you how I did it, then you'll beleave me...

Raseilord-Rika - February 26, 2008, 8:19 am

Ok time for me to kill this thread. Rasi Style

1.)Google gets about 36 million search queries per seconds.
Every 1 million searches Google's layout refreshes to prevent attacks. So thats 36 Refreshes a second

2.)When you visit Google. The / is automatic.

3.)Scaling an attack on a Google server with a Mac/Vista?? Be REAL. I know script kiddies better than that.

A.)You would need a Unix Distro.

B.)You'd Need a Cluster of Unix Box's just to access the server

C.)You'd need about 20 Tertiary Gateways just to keep them from NPID you then arresting you.

Nice Try Brandon. Amazing what some people from Salmon Arm BC would do.
But seriously. Don't come here and patronize us with such insolence.

Also::

I like your Back to the Future Hacks.

well, If you have screenshot software on a mac and do the "hacking" on a PC, it's fine. stupid fuck. and you guys call yourself hackers, whatever happened to the old days, where we were unique and understood each other... now all you fucking script kiddies are going all over bragging about how good of a hacker you are. You aren't true hackers, you just do it to get attention, and be able to say you know more than someone. I hack to learn, and to gain knowlege. why do you do it? to be a fake badass?

1101bINaRy1011 - February 27, 2008, 11:01 pm

to use a true hackers software that he worked hard on to make? I wont let some fucking 13 year old think he can outsmart me, by getting the latest software made by someone else, and saying "he" hacked it. you guys didn't fucking hack anything, you got someone else to do it, and you took all the credit. shame on all you fake bitches... have a nice fucking day, and have fun playing the actor in a kids show set up by adults...

Or leave..i dont really care either way...

Raseilord-Rika - February 28, 2008, 12:01 pm

At least the latest version of FurnCon Unix to do anything real.

Lol cancer you snatched my siggy.

LOL Owned, now you've learned 1101bINaRy1011 that you don't piss RaseiLord off. Rasei has a whole lot more hacking experience than you think. Infact I wouldn't be surprized if he's planning a hack on your system as we speak.

SS 'Kain' - March 3, 2008, 1:28 am

OK enough. If you Hacked google why isn't it on the news. What do you think how many people reference google in 9 minutes ? It would be a major news

RaseiLord you can hack anything from whatever OS you want, you just need to know assembly language well and you must be an absolute expert at programming so you can build an emulator not to mention you have to know networking protocols as good as their creators

Raseilord-Rika - March 3, 2008, 4:28 am

SS 'Kain Wrote:so you can build an emulator

That would be Hacking from another O/S. :/

You proved my point for me. :P

Purely, Mac to Unix is Impossible.
Sorry man, but Unix kernel is nothing like mac kernel.
Even if you built an emulator. It would not work.

SS 'Kain' - March 3, 2008, 5:48 am

RaseiLord Wrote:Purely, Mac to Unix is Impossible.

Nothing is impossible ! If they are both connected to Internet than it can be done. I am more worried about the difference in hardware ID and design on a MAC and on a normal PC than about the difference of their kernels. All computers work in a similar way so when it comes down to simple electronics they do not differ much from each other. I doesn't have to be a software emulator. I repair/program/design gambling machines so I have seen many "impossible" solutions.

I haven't said it would be easy but it is doable in theory but only a lunatic would try to do such a thing, in other words it would take you at least 5 years of hard work and I guess then you would become a very very rich man and you would not have to PaintShop Google ;)

Raseilord-Rika - March 3, 2008, 7:12 am

OK..Ok..Ok.

You still don't understand.

To do that. You would have to build a new operating system comparable to a Unix System from your mac system.

So guess what?? You just built a Unix system and thats where you'd 'Hack' from.

Meaning Your still not Doing it from a MAC!

Now do you understand?

Do you even know what a Kernel is?

-I Cancer - March 3, 2008, 8:10 am

OMG GUYS HE IS ON THE NEWS!!!

www.cnn.com/Google_Hacker

Oh is the link dead? Oops..sorry....

I guess thats where he'd be if he really did do it. fucking bitch. Now you gotta listen too SS KAIN. I visit google about 7 times in 9 mins...maybe more (depends on the day) and just imagine that...times 3 billion, or so. =/ YOUR A FUCKING LIAR STOP!!

Raseilord-Rika - March 3, 2008, 8:31 am

Give me my sig back or die...

Entropy - March 3, 2008, 9:35 am

I really don't want to get caught up in this shit storm but I have to let this out.

Mac OS 10.5 is now officially Unix compliant. <http://www.apple.com/macosx/technology/unix.html>

That means in theory, any software that can be compiled in Unix can be compiled in OS 10.5 and newer.

With that said I don't believe any SINGLE machine can do it. You would have to have some serious horsepower in order to compromise a company like Google.

You can now continue to your regularly scheduled programming.

SS 'Kain' - March 4, 2008, 1:38 am

RaseiLord you clearly don't understand how does a computer work.

If you can send him a package that it understands it will accept it so you don't have to build a whole kernel, you don't have to build a kernel at all, you just have to make your program work on UNIX kernel and send packages that it understands and translate packages that are sent back and don't tell me it can't be done because I am currently converting an WINXP app to work on Symbian OS (mobile phones) and how similar is that (testing has to be done on Symbian but I am still converting it using WINXP)

And even if you don't want to use this approach you still don't have to build whole kernel just pieces of it for your emulator but you have to alter MAC kernel as well so that would be inventing a hybrid OS. This could take you years

besides that:

Entropy Wrote:Mac OS 10.5 is now officially Unix compliant.

<http://www.apple.com/macosx/technology/unix.html>so it means when you come down to assembly you can write the same code on MAC for UNIX system and machine code can be run without using kernel and can even be run before the kernel even starts ;)

P.S. Kernel is a basic I/O system that provides the connection between hardware and software kinda like BIOS (Basic Input Output System) but much more complicated

Raseilord-Rika - March 4, 2008, 4:11 am

Hmm...How can I word this so that you will understand.

Taking a Mac Straight out the box them trying to hack a Unix box WILL NOT WORK. DO YOU GET IT NOW??

Surprising how people can not understand that.

I've been in the game since the early 90's. SO im

REALLY REALLY SURE I KNOW WHAT IM TALKING ABOUT.

Have you even tried hacking a Unix with a Mac?

Do you even know the Completely different Data Transfer Protocols??

And no im not talking about linux. Linux is not Unix.

uLtlmAtUm - March 4, 2008, 3:54 pm

Dude for the last time;

You did not fucking hack google you noob ass!

1) If you hacked google and did that shit, there would be hundreds of thousands of blog posts describing the hack, not just your sorry ass posting this.

2) As a few fellow members stated; it would take some expensive equipment, and software to even get into their servers.

3) "http://www.google.com" isn't right you fucktard! It's <http://www.google.com/>, NOTICE THE FUCKING "/" in the URL.

4) I'd say one or two REAL hackers have managed to do noticeable things to Google's search engine website, not some fake trying to unrightfully STEAL their glory. I'm talking about the hackers that are 30-45 years old, have spent well over $10,000 on a lot of computer equipment, a decade or more of programming experience, and on top of that, a decade or more of actual HACKING experience.

So just GIVE UP you sorry asshole. There is no way on the face of this earth that you will ever come close to convincing any of us that you hacked the search engine god, so fucking stop. Right now.

Oh and I almost forgot to ask, if you hacked Google, HOW THE FUCK DID YOU DO IT? None of this gay shit trying to get around answering my question, give us at least a basic description of how you "hacked" Google.

Raseilord-Rika - March 4, 2008, 4:03 pm

So true.

Im only 14 in Hack years. :/

Im no where near capable of that.

uLtlmAtUm - March 4, 2008, 4:19 pm

True, RaseiLord, but you still have accomplished far more than this ass-brain has.

It still is hard for me to come to terms with the fact that not only does this douchebag claim to hack google without any witnesses, or true screenshots, but he actually has the balls to continue lying about it!

I guarantee you this tard is going to post again trying to, once again, justify his "hacking".

SS 'Kain' - March 5, 2008, 11:52 pm

To RaseiLord:

Did you read my post. Have I ever said that it can be done easily and yes I have never tried to hack UNIX from MAC because I have seen a MAC computer only once in my life (just seen it didn't work on it because there are not many MAC computers in my country). Did you notice that assembly part that I was talking about. I can't believe you don't understand what I was trying to say but we are arguing in vain because I can't hack (at least not now) UNIX from a MAC (haven't got a MAC) and you can't prove me it can't be done so let's forget this until either you find a proof it can't never be done or until I hack it

I graduated high school on subject "Data transfer protocols" so I know what I'm talking about

Do you know assembly ?

Have you ever built something from one OS for some other OS ?

Do you know how computers work ?

Don't be so sure about yourself, you are much more experienced hacker than me because I started to learn about it 2 years ago (didn't have a good internet connection until then) but I ain't a n00b because I started programing 6 years ago and now it's a part of my job (so guess I'm good at it), started repairing computers 10 years ago so I guess I know how they work, and been almost a year at my current job so believe me you wouldn't understand half tings I do in day that are connected to electronic engineering. Made a PCB that emulates the keyboard through COM port or you think that is impossible too... because that I can show you

How do you know that MAC is straight out of the box ? If you can tell it just by looking at a screenshot then I have never ever learned anything in my whole life

SIM-5561 - March 9, 2008, 3:54 am all your 'bragging' is about fake things you've done. Quit it.

thenewbeginning - March 11, 2008, 3:14 am

Ok, first of all this is the funniest but most annoying thing I've read in a while. Someone please stop saying pwned and lol, it just gets repetitive, but true, it's really not worth lying this one out 1101bINaRy1011. First out, even though I knew it was wrong, I tested your initial theory of how you could prove you weren't lying 1101bINaRy1011 Wrote:it only comes up AFTER you click away from the address bar. I just pressed enter.And it really didn't work... That was a poor cover up. Try it yourself in case you don't believe me or all of us.

And you're 18? If you really are, I woulda thought you'd have had the sense to admit these lies by now, or at least back out in the beginning by saying "it's a test to see how good you guys are" or "it's a joke". That woulda worked fine. However, if you are not 18, this is just one more poor cover up attempt. RaseiLord does have some very good points - this would take some damn good equipment and connections, some ULTRA fast and well timed screenshots to grab that and that page in 1/36th of a second (and accidentally forget the slash...) and be extremely knowledgeable (which you obviously aren't if you keep lying). Come on - one script kiddie against thousands of professionally employed hackers, security guys, IT guys, etc? Your odds aren't looking good, especially with your level of security and traceability.

1101bINaRy1011 Wrote:what am I?Utterly stupid... That's about all that describes it. At the very least, if you don't want to get paid out for every thread you create, sign up under a different name. Not that that will help.

You're dragging the attention towards yourself more than all of us, and you started this thread to get attention. You hack to learn and gain knowledge? First of all, you don't hack, second of all, you've got absolutely no knowledge if you keep denying the truth. Terminatorhacker001 - March 11, 2008, 4:26 am

Good point there.

bebliss - March 14, 2008, 8:21 pm

I just had to register to post and make one point only: you people sound like you don't have any clue about what you're talking about! A nice little lookup on wikipedia would have made you look better - you should have tried that.

Mac runs OSX - which is a BSD based Unix system. Linux is a System V based Unix system, the same family ad Sun Solaris. The kernel is the very first thing a computer starts up after the boot sequence. Yep, you can create programs that run before the kernel - by having them pointed to from the MBR of your hard-drive as a bootable piece of code.

Hacking a remote computer - when not done by exploiting vulnerabilities in the services running on the remote end or in the clients run on it - is done by exploiting faults in the kernel modules. Such attacks may consist in messing about the Data Communication Layer or - in some cases - in exploiting faults in the management of drivers and physical devices.

But lets stick to the data layer, shall we?

Mac as Windows, Solaris as IBM AIX, Linux as the fucking Minix all share the same protocols when it comes to communication - at least that biggest part of it: we are talking about the IP stack (in all the different protocols that run upon it: UDP, TCP, ICMP, IGMP and the other about 200). And you know why they all share them? Because it allows a retard to claim he hacked google from his Mac, while a bunch of other windows and linux running idiots pawn him out of his way. All different computers, one same stack: TCP/IP.

I'm sure you're not n00bs, so I leave a couple of pointers to sharpen up your brains and start thinking about being serious:

nmap, hping3 and unicornscan: go fetch them, start practicing forging IP packets, scan around, see what happens. They run on windows, linux and mac, in case you're wondering.

Read a good intro on computer networks. Go spend some time looking up CVEs on mitre.org, if you have time left: packetstormsecurity and milw0rm will provide plenty of food for thought.

In case your attention span was too short I'll recap: Mac IS Unix, as well as Linux. The first from the BSD family - check opendarwin - the second from the Posix/System V side. Hacking is platform independent, it will simply require brains and some time to ponder. Brute force kind of attacks are no way to go.

Greets to the old school people watching over this forum, you know who you are,
over and out,
me

PS: Not worth checking the traces in the logs or the headers. They are fake and I come from an Italian NATted network of about 200000 machines... have fun finding me.

thenewbeginning - March 16, 2008, 3:29 am

Appreciate the input - but just so you know, I think you'll find about 4 people in this thread are already aware of nmap, hping and unicornscan, are familiar with IP Packet forging, and scanning (platform independantly as well), and are quite familiar with Packetstormsecurity and milw0rm, plus more. I can at least speak for myself here, and I'm sure at least a few others as well. I don't know who you are, and don't really care, you obviously know enough though, and that is my input. This thread has many different arguments now :) None of which are really mine. Oh, and by the way, I was quite aware that network stacks and protocols are independant - otherwise how would computers be able to communicate interdependantly? Have a nice day :)

The last photo on that page really made me laugh. I think, if you're gonna post a thread that obviously wrong, then lie about it here, and continue to lie when you've been proved wrong by the best of the best, and laughed at by over 50 people, you really want to be un-traceable. Apparently not. The saga continues...

Edit:

Rasei, I couldn't hear the music, cause I'm on firefox, but I downloaded the file. I remember it too, funniest animation! Rathergood.com wasn't it? Did you ever see "we like the moon"?

Jake13 - March 29, 2008, 4:40 pm

Rasei, I checked the site, well done. :P

Although, I checked the source and found two oddities.

56OIH I? XVC/J ZRU

(No idea what this is!)

<script src="http://www.google-analytics.com/urchin.js" type="text/javascript">

</script>
```

<script type="text/javascript">

_uacct = "UA-268699-2";

urchinTracker();
```

</script>
```

What does the urchin.js script do?

var _utcp="/"; // the cookie path for tracking
```

var _usample=100; // The sampling % of visitors to track (1-100)
```

This was in the urchin.js script. It scares me. :\

Also, right clicking>view background image is a fun thing to do... >_>

You typed in "www.google.com".

You forgot that when you do that, The http:// comes up automatically.

winxptk - May 4, 2008, 1:31 am

NOTE THIS IS FROM MY POINT OF VIEW I HAVE NOT DONE RESEARCH ON HIM

This Kid The One Who Lied 3 times....He says he hacked it yet he has no known experience That I could find, Has a broken handle cause the bin code before "binary" & after it means nothing...I think....& He stopped posting cause it was getting alot of attention & Someone get this kids IP cause I Know for damn sure he is not smart enough to tunnel his connection to admitting a hack like this one & two he didn't hack google.

Some say hacking google is possible some say its not, some say its a lot of hard work but what ever anyone thinks this kid din't hack google...I did...lol

No but for real I hacked google but only probble is Its done on localhost....

In the neat little place that no one mentioned for a windows machine there is a way to redirect traffic of on site to another IP....

(..Drum roll..)

The Windows HOST File....I redirect <http://google.com/> & <http://www.google.com> to <http://google.com/firefox> for example

This Hack Allows me to use firefox's default home page when typing in google in the address bar...

Anyway...I'm going to stop bragging before I become someones bitch like that kid....specking of which I need someone to do shit work for me..

My real post is next one

He Says He Hacked Google I Say I Hacked ESPN....Tell Me If I'm Lieing & There Are Three Answers & I will Not Say bash on wrong answers....I will just surprise you...wait...wheres my tunnel.....oh well I haven't broken the law by talking about it evil---bastage - May 4, 2008, 2:48 am

that was the most meaningless 25 pages i have read in my entire life....rasi has officially become my hero...i am however dissappointed though there is one more possibility nobody mentioned javascript....

Code javascript: document.body.contentEditable = 'true'; document.designMode = 'on'; void 0simply go to any website paste that into the address bar in place of the url click "go" and the place is yours....on your screen then go back up to the top of the page and hange the url to whatever site you want it to seem like you're visiting(yes i realize he didn't even do this right) well this is one epic thread to take an hour and a half of my time on my first day on the board for example

You did not hack ESPN (at least not in the way you've described) winxptk Wrote:No but for real I hacked google but only probble is Its done on localhost.... In the neat little place that no one mentioned for a windows machine there is a way to redirect traffic of on site to another IP....That's not hacking google, that's redirecting you're own traffic. Hacking google interferes with there servers - this didn't even leave your house. I can do the same thing to the computer next to me by doing a MiTM attack, and that's not hacking Google. Heck, I've got pictures/videos of when I put handprints all over the FBI page - but I didn't hack the FBI. Perhaps you can hack ESPN, however, the way you've described it just doesn't sound like you did. I don't doubt your ability (I can see that you do have ability as well as history), it's just you didn't explain your hack very well (if you did actually hack it).

So b1nary, which vuln did you find? On which script? Server based is it? What OS do the servers at google run? Not only does your post suck, but on top of that your picture sucks too... If you had the skills to hack google then you should take the time to learn to use PShop...

umm? he claims he hacked google with one box and held it for over 10 mins?

maybe you need to read this:

Comcast hacked by teens

paying close attention to these parts:

"Comcast boasts 14 million subscribers nationwide, and handling the massive traffic aimed at Comcast.net was no easy task. The hackers stayed up most of the night opening new webhosting accounts, and constantly moving the DNS to follow them. In all, they claim, they burned through 50 different hosts to keep their defacement alive. "You know how hard it is to find hosting handling that kind of traffic?" says EBK "The first one went in two minutes."

"EBK slept for an hour Wednesday night; Defiant for 20 minutes. Even as the attack was in progress, the hackers began to feel the weight of their actions. Both say they've been raided by law enforcement before. "I slept in my clothes, because the last time they came, I was in my underwear with my dong hanging out and shit," says Defiant."

Lol as shown in A,B and C(they are all true) its pretty much impossible to hack google and even if someone could do it, they wont have the stupidity to do it, google lawyers will be on your ass to sue you and send you to jail!

Yep, you are just as stupid as Raseilord Raseilord Wrote:3.)Scaling an attack on a Google server with a Mac/Vista?? Be REAL. I know script kiddies better then that.

A.)You would need a Unix Distro.

Seems Raseilord doesn't realise a Mac is a UNIX distro ???

SO he fails rather epically, and looking back on some of his posts he just makes shit up

Raseilord Wrote:Purely, Mac to Unix is Impossible.

Sorry man, but Unix kernel is nothing like mac kernel.

Even if you built an emulator. It would not work.

A Mac kernal is a unix kernal

And the kernel doesn't matter, you can hack from any OS

Macs, Unix, Linux, Windows doesn't matter

You are exploiting the vulnerabilities in your target's OS...which has nothing to do with your own OS ?

<https://hackforums.net/showthread.php?tid=13340>

you can't go on xbox live with a modded box, they immediately ban you after they check the HDD every time you sign in ???

you might want to check out the following link for proof

<http://gamerscoreblog.com/team/archive/2007/05/17/545414.aspx>

also this thread:

Perez Hilton was never hacked, search it on google and there is not one news story relating to it...exactly like this thread

Seems Raseilord is good with Photoshop as well ?
