

Forum:Hack Forums

Thread: My school is shit.

Glare - April 9, 2011, 2:30 pm

We now have a new rule at my school saying, If you get caught with your phone, They take it and you can't get it until one of your parents go to the office and get it. And, if you refuse. You're suspended.

I was fine with that part, But now.. If you take your battery out before you give it to them (Which is what i usually did because I know they go through your phones) Then you get suspended for 5 days. Is that fair?. They shouldn't be allowed to go through your phones so why would it matter if you take your battery out or not..

The Stig - April 9, 2011, 2:31 pm

Then sue them. It is USA right?

Sabeche - April 9, 2011, 2:32 pm

take out the sim card. They won't know it, because the phone still turns on.

Kenji Harima - April 9, 2011, 2:32 pm

Dude my school has been doing that for years. Your school sounds easy while my school is in debt 26 million.

Destreza - April 9, 2011, 2:33 pm

Maybe they want t see what kind of pictures you got on there???

Fucking pedos.... That's what I instantly thought.

Glare - April 9, 2011, 2:33 pm

I'm from Canada. And what would it matter if i take the SIM card out?.

HakkuR - April 9, 2011, 2:34 pm

The rule at my school if its taken they can keep it for a week then a parent gets it back.

The Janitor - April 9, 2011, 2:34 pm

Do this:

"Hey give me that phone! "

"Sir you are violating my private rights, you have no right of looking in my phone and/or taking it, if you even DARE taking it i will step to the police for invading my privacy."

"Okay carry on..."

x04a - April 9, 2011, 2:34 pm

Just password protect your phone if you can.

Trance™ - April 9, 2011, 2:34 pm

If you get suspended, call the local news about it. Do everything you can to get the media watching them, and talk to a lawyer. ESPECIALLY do all of this when you have nothing incriminating on your phone.

I don't wouldn't take that kind of shit.

yeikel - April 9, 2011, 2:36 pm

(Apr 9, 2011 02:32 PM)Panda™ Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) Dude my school has been doing that for years. Your school sounds easy while my school is in debt 26 million.

In my school is the same (and I am in Spain)

Glare - April 9, 2011, 2:38 pm

(Apr 9, 2011 02:34 PM)Trance™ Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) If you get suspended, call the local news about it. Do everything you can to get the media watching them, and talk to a lawyer. ESPECIALLY do all of this when you have nothing incriminating on your phone.

I don't wouldn't take that kind of shit.

This is what i wanted to do, I'm going to try to get suspended but i can't take the battery out of my phone since its an iphone.

The Janitor - April 9, 2011, 2:39 pm

(Apr 9, 2011 02:34 PM)gtaclick Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) Do this:

"Hey give me that phone! "

"Sir you are violating my private rights, you have no right of looking in my phone and/or taking it, if you even DARE taking it i will step to the police for invading my privacy."

"Okay carry on..."

This.... Just try it mate, we have the same in our school..

pushl %ebp - April 9, 2011, 2:40 pm

Don't text in class? Simple.

Destreza - April 9, 2011, 2:41 pm

(Apr 9, 2011 02:38 PM)Glare Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) This is what i wanted to do, I'm going to try to get suspended but i can't take the battery out of my phone since its an iphone.

If it is an iPhone then fucking password protect it.

Trance™ - April 9, 2011, 2:41 pm

(Apr 9, 2011 02:38 PM)Glare Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) This is what i wanted to do, I'm going to try to get suspended but i can't take the battery out of my phone since its an iphone.

Put a password on the phone.

If they crack it, then your rights to privacy are violated, because they had no probable cause or a warrant.

cybr - April 9, 2011, 2:41 pm

Just turn it off? They can't go through it. (Apr 9, 2011 02:34 PM)gtaclick Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) Do this:

"Hey give me that phone! "

"Sir you are violating my private rights, you have no right of looking in my phone and/or taking it, if you even DARE taking it i will step to the police for invading my privacy."

"Okay carry on..."

That doesn't work in school. You need to read some rules and laws.

Pharaoh² - April 9, 2011, 2:43 pm

Most schools do that, there has been many threads on this. Once you walk through your school doors you lose some rights like that.

If you take your battery out, they can just make you give it to them.

If you password protect your phone, all they gotta do is make you unlock it for them.

zivid - April 9, 2011, 2:43 pm

My schools policy on phones:

If you have phones in school and you are spotted with them, you get them taken away.

At the end of the day, you have to go get your phone.

On the second offense, they call your parents and your PARENTS have to get them.

Third offense, you don't get your phone back till the end of the week (or month)

Crucifix - April 9, 2011, 2:43 pm

You know what my school did? They held my phone for 6 weeks, yes I know FUCKING 6 weeks long.

Mous - April 9, 2011, 2:44 pm

He can't sue, he's a minor, therefore has no legal rights to anything until he's 18.

They can do whatever they want.

Sabeche - April 9, 2011, 2:45 pm

(Apr 9, 2011 02:33 PM)Glare Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) I'm from Canada. And what would it matter if i take the SIM card out?.

without the sim card, the phone won't have anything in it. All memory is stored on the sim card. Without it, it'll turn on, but there won't be anything on it.

Glare - April 9, 2011, 2:45 pm

(Apr 9, 2011 02:43 PM)† PhaRaoH † Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) Most schools do that, there has been many threads on this. Once you walk through your school doors you lose some rights like that.

If you take your battery out, they can just make you give it to them.

If you password protect your phone, all they gotta do is make you unlock it for them.

LOL, if they asked me to unlock it for them i'd tell them to go fuck themselves.

And i already have a password on it, It's just funny that they suspend you cause you took the battery. Also if they get my pin wrong 10 times it erases all the data on my phone.

Robbin in the Hood - April 9, 2011, 2:46 pm

(Apr 9, 2011 02:30 PM)Glare Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) We now have a new rule at my school saying, If you get caught with your phone, They take it and you can't get it until one of your parents go to the office and get it. And, if you refuse. You're suspended.

I was fine with that part, But now.. If you take your battery out before you give it to them (Which is what i usually did because I know they go through your phones) Then you get suspended for 5 days. Is that fair?. They shouldn't be allowed to go through your phones so why would it matter if you take your battery out or not..

Same rules at my school?

cant changem. i just take the suspension (RPC) is what they call it.

fuck them

9 Toes - April 9, 2011, 2:47 pm

Make it so its a term the have to put in instead of just the numbers. that way they'll be fucked either way.

hacc - April 9, 2011, 2:48 pm

Yeah you can get them in SERIOUS (I mean fucking serious) shit for going through your phone.

If you don't care enough to fight against your school (I would fight it IMO), you can either password protect it (most phones can do this), or if you have an iPhone, you can register with mobileme and track everything they do on it and turn on and off the phone and lock it and blank out the screen and send messages to the phone and shit.

BacoNbitZ - April 9, 2011, 2:49 pm

I'd take it out and tell them to fuck off if they don't like it. But in a nice way :p

Captain Crunch - April 9, 2011, 2:49 pm

(Apr 9, 2011 02:30 PM)Glare Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) We now have a new rule at my school saying, If you get caught with your phone, They take it and you can't get it until one of your parents go to the office and get it. And, if you refuse. You're suspended.

I was fine with that part, But now.. If you take your battery out before you give it to them (Which is what i usually did because I know they go through your phones) Then you get suspended for 5 days. Is that fair?. They shouldn't be allowed to go through your phones so why would it matter if you take your battery out or not..

They are allowed to take your phone but I do not think the have the right to suspend you for removing the battery. Unless you want to start some high drama and take it to the supreme court then just leave your phone off in your pocket or try and set a password to lock it.

Zpirit - April 9, 2011, 2:50 pm

(Apr 9, 2011 02:30 PM)Glare Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) We now have a new rule at my school saying, If you get caught with your phone, They take it and you can't get it until one of your parents go to the office and get it. And, if you refuse. You're suspended.

I was fine with that part, But now.. If you take your battery out before you give it to them (Which is what i usually did because I know they go through your phones) Then you get suspended for 5 days. Is that fair?. They shouldn't be allowed to go through your phones so why would it matter if you take your battery out or not..

By law they are not allowed to go through your phone, anyway I wouldn't let them take nothing off me.

Grammar Rays - April 9, 2011, 2:51 pm

Haha! I have a story regarding this type of rule.

I was receiving a text message regarding my grandfather who was in hospital (now dead) and a teacher caught me, instantly I knew I was in trouble and the maths teacher asked me for my mobile phone, I refused and she kept asking for it, it got to a stage where I was ignoring her while she was going mad.

She went to get the head of maths and the same thing happened, she requested the phone, I declined and ignored her from that point.

The head of maths went to the head teacher and got her involved, same thing happened, she asked for it, I said no and then she asked me to come to her office.

Long story short, I got the phone taken off me by my dad, put into isolation for the remainder of that day and suspended the next day.

twister100 - April 9, 2011, 2:51 pm

(Apr 9, 2011 02:34 PM)gtaclick Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) Do this:

"Hey give me that phone! "

"Sir you are violating my private rights, you have no right of looking in my phone and/or taking it, if you even DARE taking it i will step to the police for invading my privacy."

"Okay carry on..."

The perfect getaway. Here (in Belgium) you can do that easily.

Crucifix - April 9, 2011, 2:51 pm

(Apr 9, 2011 02:49 PM)BacoNbitZ Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) I'd take it out and tell them to fuck off if they don't like it. But in a nice way :pPlease fuck off I really dont like it.

Like this?

Maurice Moss - April 9, 2011, 2:51 pm

If US, they cannot legally go through your phone.

Supreme Kai - April 9, 2011, 2:51 pm

(Apr 9, 2011 02:44 PM)[AnimeFaN!] ~ Mous Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) He can't sue, he's a minor, therefore has no legal rights to anything until he's 18.

They can do whatever they want.

So if someone rapes a 13year old boy the boy cant sue becaus he is under 18 ?

Jake the Dog - April 9, 2011, 2:52 pm

(Apr 9, 2011 02:45 PM)Sabeche Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) without the sim card, the phone won't have anything in it. All memory is stored on the sim card. Wlthout it, it'll turn on, but there won't be anything on it.

Are you dumb? The sim card only stores your contacts and allwos you to make calls. What stores the data on the phone is the SD card.

?aragon - April 9, 2011, 2:52 pm

Wow.. That is one fucked up rule, dude!

Mous - April 9, 2011, 2:52 pm

(Apr 9, 2011 02:51 PM)michaeljackson Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) So if someone rapes a 13year old boy the boy cant sue becaus he is under 18 ?

Nope.

The parents can sue on behalf of the 13 year old, but the child most often can't even testify on his/her own behalf in court.

Usually the rapist will just be charged with rape, and not get sued at all.

Zoobiker - April 9, 2011, 2:54 pm

Well if you live in the USA you could sue and easily have them pay you off. You would just have to have parents that would allow you to sue and you have to be smart. If your texting and not disrupting anyone then I don't see why you cant have it. BTW my school does the same without the battery rule.

Captain Crunch - April 9, 2011, 2:54 pm

To all these people saying its the USA they can't do that they clearly do not know what they are talking about. When you come into a school you lose many rights. If you don't believe me pm and I'll be glad to link you to some court cases though I really don't feel like doing it now.

lexar - April 9, 2011, 2:56 pm

well teachers cant go through your fone only the principal if he/she has a valid reason other than that they really cant go in it i found that out from some teachers so if a teacher does even press the power button they could be in some trouble : P hope this helps

Mous - April 9, 2011, 2:57 pm

(Apr 9, 2011 02:56 PM)lexar Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) well teachers cant go through your fone only the principal if he/she has a valid reason other than that they really cant go in it i found that out from some teachers so if a teacher does even press the power button they could be in some trouble : P hope this helps

Yes they can.

Teacher's are the authority, just as much as any principal.

They can pretty much do whatever they want.

The Bawss - April 9, 2011, 2:58 pm

Just set a passcode/password and you're good lol. On my iphone I have it so it doesn't display texts until you unlock the phone, and you can just put it on airplane mode and lock it

Fallenour - April 9, 2011, 3:00 pm

If its the us, its illegal for them to go through your phone without a lawful search warrent, its direct violation of your rights unless you explicitly signed a waiver for them to do so.

Jiggly Puff - April 9, 2011, 3:01 pm

(Apr 9, 2011 02:33 PM)Glare Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) I'm from Canada. And what would it matter if i take the SIM card out?.

When I saw this topic, I was assuming it was more of a national thing, but fuck man, your school must be shit.

My school says "No phones.", but if they see you with one, their like "Whatever."

If you have an iPhone, you can put a lock on it.

Rowson - April 9, 2011, 3:03 pm

Real issue here seems to be the only way to get caught with it is to have it out, your at school to learn not to be playing on your phone and updating your facebook or what ever it is you would like to do. Turn it off put it in your backpack leave it there until you are off school grounds. Not that hard to do.

DiGwEeD - April 9, 2011, 3:04 pm

Seriously guys, what the fuck is wrong with your schools? First I heard about the Facebook stalking (in which teachers check students' FB to see if they're posting rude comments and whatever), and now this thing. How the hell can they suspend you for taking out the battery? In my country (Romania) you can do whatever the hell you want with your phone, worst case scenario the teacher takes it from you and returns it at the end of the hour. Geez...

zo_bad - April 9, 2011, 3:17 pm

At my school your allowed to use phones, ipods, etc. outside of class.

Donkey - April 9, 2011, 3:22 pm

That is illegal, next time state that you have confidential information in your phone and if they look through it they would violate privacy laws, as it is illegal to go through a phone once you have stated that it contains confidential information such as banking information and allows you the right to legal action. And so to prevent compromisation of your personal banking accounts you are taking the battery out and if they want to argue they can talk to your lawyer.

-Bryce - April 9, 2011, 3:26 pm

Our school (highschool) is so cheap, they had to knock down the middle school, so the 7th and 8th graders are there now, and this year they implemented a uniform policy on which you HAVE to wear a Red,white, or black polo, white or black undershirt, Khaki pants, and a belt. With our phones, if you get caught with it, they keep it for THIRTY days, or you pay 5$. Imfao.

prt1999 - April 9, 2011, 3:27 pm

They charge you 25 bucks if you want your phone back after it's taken up , or wait a week for it.

They have no rights to look through your personal data.

King Kendrick - April 9, 2011, 3:28 pm

I don't know what they do in your country, but in Sweden we can sue them if they browse through our stuff..

xXMr.CleanXx - April 9, 2011, 3:28 pm

Tell them no. They don't have the right to look through your phone unless they have some evidence you are doing illegal activities in the school. Password protect your phone and make sure you only use it when you can. My school is pretty good, they rarely take our phone away and if they do it's just for the class then they give it back. Phones are way to popular now to ban from schools. (Apr 9, 2011 02:57 PM)[AnimeFaN!] ~ Mous Wrote: CITE Yes they can.

Teacher's are the authority, just as much as any principal.

They can pretty much do whatever they want.
Criminal Code of Canada

-Everyone has the right to resist unreasonable search or seizure.

Just like police can't JUST search you. Teacher's can't JUST look through your phone. They need solid evidence or they can lose their job.

LancerImpact - April 9, 2011, 3:35 pm

(Apr 9, 2011 02:34 PM)gtaclick Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) Do this:

"Hey give me that phone! "

"Sir you are violating my private rights, you have no right of looking in my phone and/or taking it, if you even DARE taking it i will step to the police for invading my privacy."

"Okay carry on..."

Dumb post.

School rules say no phones, and you sign this "contract".

They have every single fucking right to take it.

Dawncore - April 9, 2011, 3:40 pm

Why don't you just take the memory card out of the phone...

TickTack - April 9, 2011, 3:53 pm

(Apr 9, 2011 03:17 PM)zo_bad Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) At my school your allowed to use phones, ipods, etc. outside of class.

It was the same in my school.

In fact, it's pretty much this way in most high schools I think. OP probably a 7th grader.

Nihilicity - April 9, 2011, 3:56 pm

Ever heard of putting a password on your phone?

Try it.

If your phone doesn't have that capability, invest in a new one.

MalwareMop - April 9, 2011, 4:05 pm

If you were to read that sheet of paper they make you sign before every year, It states that they can compromise your 'Phone', or anything that compromises your learning ability. At least that's what they had at my school, I bet they have something like that for your school as well. But as for going through the phone? I don't believe they can do that unless you are caught with drugs, on school campus, etc. But they will abuse their power, because the chances of a student/students parents, pressing charges against the school, are very slim, plus they may just win because they are a school. But yes that school rule does suck.

Hecker21 - April 9, 2011, 4:08 pm

If I was you I wouldn't give them my phone even if I did get suspended.

Two years back my phone went off, and my teacher took it, when I went to get it back the screen was cracked.

Anyways now at my school if your phone goes off they just tell you to turn it off, and most of the time they won't take it.

Wild Card - April 9, 2011, 4:11 pm

Is this only in class or even during passing periods and lunch?

In my middle school it was like that but at my HS you can use it before school, during breaks, and lunch. Also if the teacher is cool you can use it during class.

Nihilicity - April 9, 2011, 4:17 pm

At my school it isn't a big deal.

You get it taken, they never look in it, and they give it back at the end of the day.

Unfortunately they send a note home and you have lunch detention, but its not a big deal when your parents don't think a phone is evil.

Un-Named - April 9, 2011, 11:00 pm

same rule at my school except you have 1 warning, and then you pay $15 to get it back

If you get it taken up 5 times, then they sell your electronic device at an auction.