Donaldwc - May 11, 2011, 11:11 am

I'm interested, but can you show video proof of updating blackshades victims and it working? Few .NET cryters I've used doesn't work with updating victims. ESCrypter being one of the ones that didn't work.

Vysse - May 11, 2011, 11:34 am

I haven't tested that out to be honest.... I am unsure how blackshade does updates so I do not know if it would work properly... but I can see where issues could arise... however to fix those issues means that your file would be dropped and could easily become detected... so you gotta consider which is more important... being able to update easily or keeping your file from being caught...

theres only so many places to install that wont make an av detect your file.

Version 1.4.2.0 released!!! Added in a nice lil feature to disable that popup that asks if you want to run this file. This is for your server that loads on each restart. Removed EOF support since it was causing detections for files without EOF. If your file needs EOF data I will be adding an option for this in the next release. Enjoy!!!

Vysse i got a question about the new update:

Why when i run it it crashes just like when you bind a file with the Crypter it gives you a error like VCrypt doesnt work anymore and must be closed now.

And when i check MSConfig it shows me it made a file called test1.exe in C:\Users\Suidacra1337\AppData\Local\Temp\test1.exe the Maker of the file is VCrypt.org and the name is VCrypt i unvinked it then started vcrypt again and got it back so im sure its from the new update.

Did you do something wrong or?

No and I dunno....if it does sorry...

Guys I am probably one of the most honest crypter sellers here. With that said I must inform everyone with the new feature added to VCrypt came an Avira detection. I know what line it is just gotta rewrite some code to make it work fud. I will be doing this before the day ends and apologize for this inconvenience and the updating one. Thank you for your patience.

Releasing a temp update to remove that new feature until I rewrite it to be FUD. Update should be out in the next 5 minutes...

Blackshades be sure to click the .Net crypter settings. Check the email you got when you registered in the program. It has a link to the panel for that kind of stuff. I had those detections earlier today and oddly enough I went to check the same scan again and they weren't there... it's some weird false positive nothing to worry over...if it keeps popping up decrypt the file. It may be the md5 hash at that point... I will look into an alternative solution until then.

tbh i have to vouche for Vysse i had no problems with the crypter or him and the detections are 0/33 for a few days already these are my servers atm:

the one i made on when i bought the crypter:

<http://my-avscan.com/result.php?scan=Mzk4NzM=>

And the one i crypted just 2 seconds ago:

<http://my-avscan.com/result.php?scan=Mzk4NzI=>

Its crypted with Blackshades

But i don't think its worth 65$, its doesn't has alot of features and as i understood from the poll, It got serious bugs.

I am rather interested in this. I might forget to check the response you may give me so feel free to PM it to me, I am just wondering how FUD this crypter really is?. Is it truly FUD from kaspersky, Avast, AVG or is it just FUD from scan sites which uses older engines?.

deezjee19 - May 16, 2011, 5:12 am

Unfortunately also I must report that it's being detected.

Scanning on NVT results into 1/6.. Tho it's now often being detected upon opening it.

Vysse> Please update.. :-)

You mentioned something about small files being detected.. Please include a file pumper specify 'small'..

I'm pretty pleased with 6½", but my ex gf still found it small so yea..

I then took my crypted server and tested it in a couple of different environments. One is in a Vmware sandbox, with Spyware Dr with Antivirus installed, also have a snapshot that has regular Spyware Dr and AVG antivirus installed. The other is an older laptop that I use just to test things out with. It has Nod32 and Trend Micro installed, which I take turns disabling to be able to test against both.

My Blackshades running with both bots installed:

The Nod32 scan with the server running:

Spoiler \(Click to View\)[IMG]http://i51.[censored].com/b7xteo.jpg[/IMG]

The same happened with Trend Micro. Neither detected the server while it was being loaded on the machine or when it was ran.

On the Vmware machine, It was the same for AVG. It did not detect scantime or runtime, or during a scan while the server was running. Spyware Dr with antivirus didn't detect it scantime, but when it was activated threw up a warning and a "blocked" message The interesting thing is that while it showed it as blocked, the server still installed and ran, and Spyware Dr didn't pick it up in the ensuing scan. So, it was only at the moment of injection that it was detected, but was not able to be stopped.

In this image is the server running with Spyware Dr.

Spoiler \(Click to View\)[IMG]http://i53.[censored].com/29nf2us.jpg[/IMG]

For those of you that may not know, Spyware Dr with AV, when kept updated, is EXTREMELY hard to fool. But again, the interesting thing is it failed to STOP the server, even though it said it did. Worst case scenario I can live with that, because if it doesn't catch it until it's injecting, and it says it blocks it but doesn't, then fails to see it on a scan afterward, then the only downside would be that whoever I sent it to would not trust me as a file source.

All this was my very first crypt with Vcrypt. I would have done more, but it was like 4:30 am and I was beat.

I have to give this product a vouch. Upon payment, I was up and running in 5 minutes. I got pretty good results so far. I am going to play with my settings a bit today, and test against more AVs. When I have more results I will post back with my settings.

Well I would say about 300/350kb is added. I am trying to find a way to reduce image size however this would require more risks of being detected.

This is more detailed than anyone has ever gone with this thing. Also a few notes guys. There are out there some antiviruses that check for every little thing happening on a persons pc. I have a possible bypass for these but I need to do some testing first to get a good idea on what I am up against. The bypass would basically make those Warnings never popup even though the AV would still throw them. At this time there is nothing I can do since there is no other safe action to run your crypted file.

NoVirusThanks is a pretty shitty scanner.... they barely have any AV's on their list and shouldn't be used to determine if something is fud. Regardless the issue seems to be your pc. I just checked and I am fine. The only detections are with smaller files like cybergate which I will have a fix for later this week.

Something I learned from using the Online Crypter: when you have one of those off-brand AVs giving you a positive when the rest are saying clean, most of the time what you have is a false positive. Usually, you can take the exact same server and encrypt it with the exact same settings and the next time it will scan clean. I know how that SOUNDS..a false positive when you are scanning a virus..but it happens. Keep reading below.

Now using that crypted server, I ran a test on a fully updated Windows 7 Pro install, complete with Kaspersky Internet Security.

[Video: http://www.youtube.com/watch?v=DRBfg1kV_SQ]

In this video note that I show you that Kaspersky is on and running, and fully updated. I show you the virtual machine info, to match what I will post below. And I show you that there are two instances of explorer.exe running.

So, YES you can achieve runtime FUD with Blackshades and YES you can defeat Kaspersky. And, if you read my earlier post, also with Nod32, Trend Micro, and AVG. I will return later with word about Norton and Avira.

Hope that helps.

Ya I made the change yesterday. I will be updating later today with a fix for that and hopefully a file pumper.

Bought to release update that allows you to crypt .net files again :D need opinion for next update order these for ideas.

File Pumper(This will help with smaller files that give detections)

File Drop Option(This will make it so if you get corrupted servers you can drop as a last resort)

Extension Changer

MultiThreaded Crypting(Will allow you to move the form and minimize while its crypting.)

Will sell one lifetime license for 50 must be through paypal and done before tomorrow.

(May 17, 2011 07:24 PM)dlxchrome Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) Well Its FUD on web scanners, but not with norton and windows security essentials -.- Yes you have stated that..as well as in the PM you sent me. I noticed you have not yet answered me back, so I will pose those questions here:

Okay. First of all, change the exe name to something like "goggleupd" or something like that.(instead of "windowz.exe")

Second : what did you bind it with ?

Third: what file info did you use ?

fourth: what icon did you use ?

I asked you those questions for a reason, the reason being : THEY MATTER.

Why do you think those options are in there ? You can get a hit on an Av ON ICONS ALONE.

I understand you want your crypter to work..you want it to be FUD. But there's a little more to it than just point and click. If you've read this thread you should know that. File size matters. File info matters. Icons matter. All of these things are now taken into account by AVs, and tweaking them a bit may very well be the difference between having a slave and having an empty connections box.

With this last update, I get past Nod32, Trend Micro, AVG, Kaspersky, and (get this Vysse) Spyware Dr with Antivirus (cudos on that one bro). My only problem now is the UAC challenge is popping up. I'm hoping he can come up with a workaround for that. If not, gonna fall back on social engineering but that's always been 80% of using RATS anyway.

One last thing dixchrome. You have invested your money in this product. If you want to get your full money's worth, the best thing you can do is give detailed, intelligent feedback. By that I mean tell him a little more than "it gets hit by Norton and Windows Security Essentials". Tell him what your settings were, tell him what you bound it with, tell him how you set up the info, tell him what icon you used, tell him ANYTHING you did that may affect the outcome. Vysse has released - what?- two or three updates today alone? It should be pretty obvious that the man is working on the problems that show up.

Vysse, if you don't have your lifetime buyer yet, PM me. I'll do it right now.

I used this with blackshades and had MSE with active monitoring enabled. At first it got a detection that can not be helped (this is because of the fact that once I run the file what it does from there is not my choice) I inject it into the memory of another process and thats where it gets detected. Oddly after trying this again I did not receive the detection. It seems that this may be something that is a fluke. I can show you if you'd like me running blackshades crypted on my pc with MSE open with me getting no detections. Also this should be the same with Norton since they share a database.

Tried it a few times. Someone must of scanned on virus total. Already on it thank you for letting me know. And soon policy will allow for you to only scan with an in-built scanner so ya :D.
Just a little update... I found the source of the detection however it is gonna be a pain to fight it off...
I am working on it immediately however...

Using DarkComet v3.2 on Windows 7 / 32bit.I had a similar problem with my router, which is a Linksys.

What I had to do was go in and clear out all of the port forwarding, save it, then go back in and redo my settings, including the new port I wanted to forward.

If you haven't tried that, it may work for you.

Sorry for the wait guys. Here is the situation. After finding the detection I decided to his 3 birds with one stone(update). After working with Charon who was nice enough to be my guinea pig I was able to bypass runtime kaspersky, and fix the errors you guys had. I also obviously removed the nod32 detections. Soo I will be releasing this all soon just gotta recode some portions. Sorry again for the wait. I know it hasn't even been a full day yet but still I feel shitty about not having a quicker update.

ok guys updated the crypter. The output is going to a lil larger than usually. This is because the file I am using to inject to is vbc.exe and is 1mb alone. I put it with it because if you delete your server via the client in blackshades it deletes that file. I will have an option to choose whether to include this in a later update. It is fully fud runtime and scantime.

Hmm I am later adding options to not ship it with it. The issue is once you delete your server it deletes vbc.exe this is a failsafe so people do not lose victims atm...

The new update works GREAT man. I made a video showing how to use the crypter/binder, and then showing it getting by Kaspersky.

I will post the video tonight.

Great work Vysse !

Okay, here is a video showing how to use Vcrypt to crypt your Blackshades server and bind it with another exe. I went step-by-step, and I believe I have explained everything so that even a noob can use it with success.

Also, this happens to be the latest update, and I'm showing it going right by Kaspersky. ???

I have a question tho..
atm I can't test it, but the 'extention changer' only works on Vista and win7..

Does this mean that other Oses just wont show it as jpg (or whatever) and as a regular exe, and will run it as a normal exe.. or wont it also not run?

Gimme about 10 minutes and I'll test that for you

TheBROCode - May 23, 2011, 1:01 am

it will run but no one will fall for it i think then and btw when you rar that file it just shows it as yourname.exe not yournamegpj.exe or so it removes that :S

Charon0831 - May 23, 2011, 1:12 am

Yeah, it runs. And you're right...the exploit doesn't fool a RAR.

Side note: for those of you that test on a VM (and you should), Vmware won't let you drag a reverse-extension file like that in. You have to use a USB. So, when you test it the first time, I suggest you NOT choose "infect USB" as one of your server options LOL

Oddly enough while it should work with .Net applications (I made some test ones to try it with) it instead corrupts them. I am assuming this is because of the way it works doesn't flow well with reflection but I am unsure...

I just got 1/33 with latest version. Crypted DarkComet 3.2

ESET NOD32 Trojan.MSIL/Injector.GL

I tried crypting it three different times in case it was a false positive or something.

In the first page it says 10% discount but when I try to buy it there's no discount? Is the discount still up?

Also do you have any recommended settings to use with BS RAT? I want to use it with it and I will only buy a crypter that works 100% with it

Is there a way you could have the crypter run a scan for active antivirus programs running and make people shut them down before using the crypter?

That or make the crypter scan a user's computer for antivirus software whenever it is used. Then, maybe send the report back to you so that you can keep track of which subscribers are actively running antivirus software and ban them if they're the ones doing stupid crap.

How do these detections happen so fast? Someone scanning on VT?

Charon0831 - May 23, 2011, 8:57 pm

If someone were scanning on VT it would get hit by more than one..not the same AV three times in 2 days.

Someone has Nod32 on their comp, and they don't have Threatsense.net disabled. the damn thing is sending samples home to Esset.

This really sucks to hear.

I am really considering buying the crypter cause it does everything I want/need but I'll wait till this gets situated cause I would hate to pay $60 and then the creator decides to kill the project.

I'll check back on this and see if my decision changes depending on how this is handled.

I already have the changes to make it fud...the only reason it isnt in yet is because I am making some harsh changes to VCrypt to protect the fud life of its outputs. It will be drastic but is necessary. Btw sorry for not responding to your pm before I have been rather busy. Also if you were wanting to buy lifetime the offer right now is if you contact me before tomorrow I am selling one license for 50 to pay for a sticky...just need the money straight to my paypal... if you'd like to do this pm me asap with your paypal email and stating you agree to the tos and I will respond with my paypal.

What sort of harsh changes are being made? Will it affect VCrypt's ability to crypt anything that is currently supported?

I can answer that : no. I'll let Vysse tell you what he's doing..it's his baby, but I can tell you right now what he's doing is making sure that stupid leaks like this don't happen again. I for one don't blame him. I have purchased several crypters on this Forum, and (not to take anything away from any of the others) this is the best one I've found for what I need to do. And it will continue, with all the functionality in place.

@truroxx

Okay..binding to mp3s and jpegs I get errors, even when I try the drop option. I can successfully bind and execute with any exe, and I am putting up a video right now. Until it gets finished uploading, let me give you my Cybergate settings:

Vysse preaches against using Persistence, so you might not want to use that option. I don't know what the deal is with mp3's and jpeg's. I'll ask him about it when he comes on.

Actions that can be considered malicious are picked up and there is nothing I can really do. If you edit a hosts file or something an AV is likely to pick it up. I do what I can to protect your file until it is ran after I inject the bytes into another exe though what it does form there I cannot control.

Okay, just came back online for a minute. I got the Cybergate downloaded. It's like 3:45 am here and I'm beat, so I'll be running tests tomorrow.

As for what Vysse did with the crypter : it's drastic, but what else could he do ? SOMEONE just doesn't understand how to keep their AV from killing the crypter. And it's recent. Before this, it was staying FUD a cpl of weeks at a time.

It's a change, and it's something to deal with, but it's also the best way to protect YOUR and MY investment in this crypter. I am not official support, nor do I make a dime off of any sales, so the money I spent for this is just as important to me as yours is to you. If I have to go through a few extra hoops to help keep some fucktard idiot from screwing it up for everybody, so be it.

Truroxx, I sent you the MSN add. I'll get with you tomorrow.

Vysse - May 25, 2011, 1:07 am

The binder isnt guaranteed to bind everything perfectly I really worry more about preventing detections than making every single file work...however if something doesn't work try dropping it. As for the latest AV check thing it had to be done... finally if you try to use the crypter on another pc it will not work since it is hwid locked but as suidacra said you can change your hwid...

TheBROCode - May 25, 2011, 1:39 am and vysse there is something wrong to it sometimes works but sometimes it corrupts the server :S dont know what has been changed.

animosity - May 25, 2011, 2:37 am

I think ya'll are getting me wrong about the av thing lol, I don't mind if I have to use a pc without an av installed. It's actually a really good idea, I just don't see why it tells me invalid login all the time. I even changed my HWID and it's telling me now.

(May 25, 2011 08:00 AM)ISOForest Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) You probably wont get it straight away. iv bean waiting nearly 24 hours for plimus to send it i never got the mail i went to plimus and did some stuff there and had to send the mail manually so look at plimus and put in something with your ID and then you can send it dont know how i did it anymore

Vysse - May 25, 2011, 12:01 pm

To those still waiting on Plimus usually if they take to long you can bug me and I will get annoyed and send you the dl link :P. As for the random corruptions I did not change the code much only what I am injecting into. If you are not binding another virus drop it since it wont showup as a virus anyways. I need to figure out this detection with the binder since I am confused on how the binder can be detected but not anything else...

Oh and anyone who needs a hwid change contact me.

Nope, SEPA is down ATM. They're having MySQL errors. It took down every program using SEPA-Licensing. I'd say Irion is working on that Lifetime license bug. Fixing it. It was hard drive failure, ordered a SSD MySQL server so this shouldn't happend ever again :)

deezjee19 - May 26, 2011, 12:07 am

Even those can break.. I'd say get a nice active-active twincore DC in place.. ;) ..kidding Ok nice to hear it's (being) fixed man :)

Irion - May 26, 2011, 12:09 am

They can break, but you can hot swap SSDs, so even if it breaks, it should cause no downtime. Datacenter also has my authorisation to swap disks even when I'm away so such a thing shouldn't happend.

Where I got unlucky is that it broke at 1am my time...

You should be able to login now.

If it's telling you invalid login that's not due to server problems... It's because your login isn't valid. Either username, password or HWID.

Nothing to do with us.

It's not just you. I went over that with Vysee this morning. he'd been up all night reworking the binder so it wouldn't get detected. He's gonna grab some sleep and then get right back to work on it.

If you'll read back a bit, you'll see that Vysse has put AV protection on the crypter. This is because some idiot was letting Nod32 have samples.

Charon0831 - May 26, 2011, 12:01 pm

For those of you that may be joining late....or for some reason just won't read the thread....here's a recap:

1) Vysse has put an AV detection in the crypter. If you have an AV installed (doesn't matter if it's turned off or not) the crypter will not work. This is because some fucktard decided to leave his Nod32 running and get the crypter detected 3 different times in 2 days.

2) If you decide to run the crypter in a VM because of this, you will need a new Hardware ID..read back in the thread to find out how to get it.

3) The binder was getting a detection, so Vysse completely rewrote it. WHILE he was rewriting it, the SEPA auth server went down, effectively disabling ALL programs that use it. At about 6:30 am my time (3:30 am Vysse's time) I was able to use the crypter again and discovered a problem with it corrupting the servers. Vysse knows about it. He will deal with it today. He has always been on top of updates and problems, but recodes take some time and the man has to sleep. he will be on. Until he comes on, he WON'T be on.

Vysse - May 26, 2011, 12:02 pm

The problem that you run into is this: there are only so many places you can insert a file that won't set off an automatic flag by the AV and/or trigger the UAC prompt.

In your particular situation, what you need to do is make the changes you need once you have successfully dropped the RAT onto your target's box. This should not be hard, since i know you are going after one specific target.

.darkcomet works fine without start up option (when uncheck module startup options in darkcomet settings) ,...if i make it with startup (if checks modulue startup option in darkcomet settings)i have to check "drop the file" (which option isnt recommended unless corrupts the server) option in Vcrypter..but if i select drop option that means it wont(crypted output) runtime FUD anymore...and slave uses nortan AV lol .so its must be run time fud as well as scantime

Hmm, SEPA has been taken offline and defaced, this thread's first post has a "The Defaced" header. My guess is his PC got compromised and things went south. He's probably temp-banned until things can be resolved.

truorxx - May 28, 2011, 8:55 pm

hmmm well i can see that ... :(now what ??? he's having a big deal here....

Charon0831 - May 28, 2011, 9:16 pm

Okay, here's the deal :

the Defaced evidently had a nice little weekend planned. They took down the sepa-auth server, and they also got the Hosting Server that Vysse's support website is on. That is why his sig changed - the image is hosted there. His sig changing is why he got banned...it's a temp ban from what I understand, until things can get sorted out.

Hopefully, Irion will come back on the rebound with the Sepa-Auth server.

Stay tuned. As soon as I know anything else I'll post it.

truorxx - May 28, 2011, 9:42 pm

no words to say....i think we should be patience

witchitized - May 28, 2011, 9:53 pm

Whoever owns this and is willing to give me a test crypt, please contact me via PM.

The crypt does not need to be FUD, so you can use an older stub or w/e you want, I just need to crypt my exe and see if it will run smoothly or crash.

Best Regards,
Witch

Charon0831 - May 29, 2011, 12:50 am

Okay folks. I have been on with Vysse. He has to wait for Omni to come on to lift the ban. He WILL be back, and everything will get handled.

For now, you CAN use your Vcrypt, but if it says there is an update DO NOT UPDATE...PERIOD. DO NOT UPDATE UNTIL VYSSE HIMSELF SAYS IT IS OKAY.

As a side note, for you Darkcomet fans out there, I have managed to get the settings right for darkcomet to work. I will do a video tomorrow. It's almost 4am here.

Thanks for sticking it out. Vysse got hit with a lot of shit all at once, but that changes nothing about the way he does business. he will make sure everyone is taken care of.

EDIT : SORRY should have specified This is Darkcomet 3.2

ppppparanoia - May 29, 2011, 9:52 am hmm, my scan was not like this, let me try different options, thx Charonn

Charon0831 - May 29, 2011, 10:24 am

No problem. Darkcomet works a little differently than other rats, so it's a bit more sensitive with the settings. If you need some help, let me know and we can hook up on TV.

I was really glad to find another option myself. With Blackshades being down since Friday, I realized I was gonna have to have a backup plan. Darkcomet seems to fill the gap nicely.

Yeah, I'm glad you did..I had forgotten to specify that it was 3.2. darkcomet 3.3 has issues with Vcrypt.

As for apologizing, okay, but there's something you need to understand. I don't get paid to do any of this, which is fine, but when you come to me for help and then want to argue with everything I tell you before you even TRY it, then I'm not gonna waste my time. You said you had one target : your GF. I was trying to give you a solution for the issues you were having, but you wanted to keep on about PHP rats and how Cybergate wouldn't let you RAT her after you tried it on yourself and yadda yadda yadda. I don't have time for all of that. So, I told you to do it yourself.

Now, since I'm assuming you STILL haven't managed to pull this off successfully, (go figure) are you ready to listen ? If you are, then I'll be glad to help you.

Vysse - May 29, 2011, 2:01 pm

Just so everyone knows Yes the VCrypt support forums got hacked...no they did not hack my pc...

ISOForest - May 29, 2011, 6:49 pm

Anyone having problems binding with darkcomet 3.2? iv tried dropping the file aswell

Charon0831 - May 29, 2011, 7:22 pm

The only thing I have bound it with so far is a blank exe. When I had injection checked in the Darkcomet settings, it corrupted. the settings I posted above are the ONLY ones I had checked, and that was successful for me.

I just got back home..been gone most of the day. I'll do some more tests.

ISOForest - May 29, 2011, 7:30 pm

You went offline just as i replied lol

Still FUD:

I'm thinking that I forgot to tell you to uncheck the FWB bypass option (inject into explorer.exe) in Darkcomet, but we can get together and see what's going on. I worked with IsoForest last night and we got his server working, but at first we had some of those same problems.

Vysse is out for the day, and he's on West Coast time, so he probably won't be back until late. Also, if you look back through the thread, you will see that you can change your own HWID through Sepa Auth.

SORRY BUT IS NOT RUNTIME ? sorry for my bad english i am french

Vysse - June 1, 2011, 1:20 pm

It is runtime though some after it runs some actions can be picked up by viruses and are beyond my control. There is also a weird issue where KIS I think it was picks it up unless you bind something to it... I am looking into the reason for that.

I test it constantly against Nod32, AVG, Trend Micro, Spyware Dr with AV, and Kaspersky Internet Security..all runtime. If I run into a detection I report it to Vysse immediately.

If you look at the first post you'll see a couple of videos of me running it against KIS.

JUST tested vs KIS runtime - not a peep.

i also did some tests

its fud scantime but runtime these AV's found it:

Avira found it.

KIS found it.

and Norton found it as a WS.Reputation.1.

I used Appdata settings rest just normal and no icon no file clone.

Second Test:

Fud Scantime to and runtime:

Norton found it as a WS.Reputation.1.

and KIS found it again.

didnt test avira yet something is wrong atm with my VM

I used Appdata settings test normal added a icon and a File Cloner

Charon0831 - June 3, 2011, 12:16 pm

To let you all know:

I came on and talked to Vysse for a bit. he has to head out for a while, so while he is gone I have reverted my VM and I am installing brand new KIS, Norton, Avira, Nod32, and Trend Micro. I am going to be testing against all of these runtime. So far, I have had no runtime detections, but I always bind with a small blank exe. I find that works a lot better than just crypting the server solo.

I will be reporting back my results. If I find issues I will pass them along to Vysse so he can try to find the problem.

IN THE MEANTIME :

Those of you that are having connection errors or detections, please tell me what server you are crypting (Blackshades, Cybergate, Darkcomet etc), whether or not you are binding it with anything, and if so WHAT you are binding it with. Those that wish to can add me on MSN (Charon0831@hotmail.com), and I will work with you to try to find the problem and/or possible solutions. A lot of times the issue can arise from assembly, or even what icon you choose. I know that I myself have not had any detection issues, so I would appreciate anyone who is getting one giving me all the info they can so I can try to duplicate the results.

Thanks you.

Okay. This took me a little while to do, but here we go.

What I did was to go get brand new versions of Norton, Kaspersky Internet Security, Avira, Nod32, MSE, and Spyware Dr with Antivirus. I installed and updated all of them on my Virtual Machine. Side Note : KIS and Avira don't play well together, and KIS doesn't play well with hardly ANYTHING, even if they are disabled. I wound up having to split off a snapshot with just SWD and KIS. So, if you decide to do your own testing, Norton, Nod32, Avira, and MSE can all be on the same snapshot, provided you keep all of them disabled as you install the next, and only run one at a time.

I made a Blackshades server with these settings : (They are the default .NET settings for Blackshades)

I crypted the server three ways, one was from this morning, set to be installed in the appdata folder in Vcrypt's settings, and bound to a 15 KB blank exe. It is named zlbuy.exe. The second was set to drop in the Temp folder, also bound to the blank exe, and it is named zmbuy.exe. The last was not bound to anything, just crypted and set to drop in the Temp folder. it is named znobuy.exe.

The first two servers worked. The third, the one crypted without being bound to anything, was detected. More on that in a moment.

Norton

The first server I ran through was bound to the blank exe and set to drop into appdata. It was detected, but not as a known malware product. This is the message I got :

Spoiler \(Click to View\)

http://img818.imageshack.us/img818/8554/nortonmessage.png Uploaded with ImageShack.us

So, evidently there was no SIGNATURE detection - for some reason Norton flagged it because of it's obscurity and the fact that it had high-risk features. What's funny is, when I was talking to Vysse, I was telling him about this, and I tried to recreate it so he could see it. I reverted to snapshot 5 times, running the same server every time, and it didn't hit again. Here is the exact same server working:

Spoiler \(Click to View\)

Uploaded with ImageShack.us

The other two servers worked fine. Also, all three worked fine versus Spyware Dr with Antivirus and Microsoft Security Essentials. I won't post the screenshots, I think you get the idea

So, I got two detections : One odd one by Norton that did not repeat (but only in Appdata, it never hit in Temp binded or not) and one by Kaspersky that hit only the unbinded server. This has been a problem with Kaspersky for awhile, and Vysse is working on it. So, in the meantime, Vysse is going to re-add the Appdata choice along with a warning that you MAY get odd hits. He is going to try some other techniques, but USE IT WITH CAUTION.

Also, if you want to make sure that you can get by KIS, MAKE SURE YOU BIND WITH SOMETHING. I have uploaded the 15kb blank exe that I use to my Mediafire account, and you can use it to bind to if you don't want to bind to a real program. It does absolutely nothing, so feel free to scan it all you want. Here is the link :

<http://www.mediafire.com/?c4qe4vcbe871r1b>

Use this as a temporary fix until Vysse can nail down that KIS detection. He and I will be doing some more testing tomorrow.

Later.

Vysse - June 4, 2011, 12:10 am

I have had a long day. My lil sister graduated and I spent the day with her. I will take care of you tomorrow truroxx I promise. A few things to note. It is usually best to not change any of the settings I have as default for VCrypt. Assembly renaming CAN CAUSE DETECTIONS as can file names etc. Another thing about that Blank2.exe I made that just for Charon since he gets KIS Detection only when he doesn't bind. I am looking into ways around this with Charon who is always helpful for AV testing. I really wanna thank him for this as hes been great for this product. I am going to look through my code tomorrow and see what may cause non-binded servers to be caught... I am also going to look into something lesser used for injection to help bypass runtime. I wanna point out that because of many of the methods I use to keep things FUD VCrypt last a longtime without detections even though there was a crack out. I intend to keep it this way and while some decisions may seem like I am removign features or not adding them in it is really only for you to always have a LONG-LASTING FUD SERVER. Anyways guys I wanna announce that we have reached over 100 customers and I intend to reach 200 before this months end. I am now going to finish this scan client for Cloud Scan then work on implementing one into VCrypt. Soon you guys will not have to pay to scan your files ever again.

Hey guys just wanted to post some updated info about things that are happening. As you guys know I partnered up with Cloud Scan to benefit the both of us. Well I almost done with their scan client which means I will be making the one for VCrypt next. I need opinions on how to distribute it. Since I would like to have you guys be able to just click a button in VCrypt to make the scanner run I was thinking of distributing it embedded in VCrypt... another option is download and execute which will make the VCrypt exe smaller than if I embedded it. Another thing I wanted to mention was I will be looking for 2 Live Support members soon. These people will already need Lifetime licenses and will need to be Ub3r or L33t. You will not be paid in a normal sense instead I will give you the opportunity to resale for a percentage VCrypt through Plimus. This can make you a good amount of money if you bring in enough sales or can just be extra cash or not used at all your choice. I already have one person in mind I just gotta ask him if he is ok with it though I am pretty sure he is. Also the reason I want you to already to have a lifetime license is so I know you are doing this for the love of the product rather than a free license :P. There will be no free licenses given for this. Moving on I wanted to note we have been FUD for a long time due to my recent techniques and can't wait to see how long this lasts. :D Finally I am always looking into unique ways to make this crypter the best and will soon have a suggestions area. I refuse to host another forum due to the recent attack and my limited knowledge on MySQL injection and exploits to prevent another. Anyways lots to do I am very excited about how popular VCrypt has become and can't wait to see where it goes.

truorxx I will need your account name again so I may fix your serial and such...

No, you don't have to...if you had 1.4.6.3 you would want to..you should be fine

deezjee19 - June 6, 2011, 11:15 am

Although I normally really appreciate your support Vysse, I'm sorry to say.. But this is really shitty feedback man.

Out of the blue you drop a message:

"Anyone who did that update should reformat"; without any additional info.. :(

Please specify the "THAT" in your message. Like, what is the latest GOOD version? When was it released, what is it's MD5 hash or whatever.. Since when are trojaned update out there..? What does that mean? Can people still use the latest good version? What should/shouldn't they do? What actions have you done/will you do to fix this? What will be done to prevent this from happening again? After a few days of outage this happens.. Will there be any compensation? etc etc

I have always really appreciate your efforts and feedback and everything.. And I sure don't mind paying for such a thing.. Not at all.. But this is pretty poor feedback so far man.. Sorry, no offence.. Just my 2 cents :)

Hope to hear some more info soon :)

HELP iiiiiiiii

"If you downloaded the supposed version 1.4.6.3 I would clean you pc.

If no the good"

Whats is this ???? why say that ??? I am very confused

Charon0831 - June 6, 2011, 11:36 am

Okay, good point. In Vysse's defense, he wanted to get a warning out as soon as he found out. The bogus update had nothing to do with him.

If you have 1.4.6.2, you're fine. 1.4.6.3 is a bogus update generated by the Defaced. They made a post yesterday at 3:14 am claiming to have cracked several programs hosted by Sepa Auth, one of which is Vcrypt. They included a download link for the cracks. It is not clear at this time where the actual "update" issues from, especially since I have been using Vcrypt constantly and I have not been prompted to "update". If you tried to use a crack, you are most probably infected. If your version says 1.4.6.3, you are most probably infected. If your version says 1.4.6.2, then you are fine.

The MD5 hash for 1.4.6.2 is 770b5c2004888a6df36e4a419abae114

If you want some help determining if you are okay or not, live support is open

That is correct. Do not update until Vysse says to do so.

Our main priority right now is making sure everyone is running the correct version, and has been checked out if they were running the bogus version.

We were not the only ones affected by this. If you are a customer of P4radigm Crypter, Attworm. or bLaZeDs Shitcash Downloader, they have compromise issues as well.

Vysse - June 6, 2011, 2:12 pm

Here is what happened. They got into the Sepa Database and changed the version to 1.4.6.3. They also changed the download link. Now if you downloaded this update you will know since its a 1.5MB file with no icon. It is a virus they are trying to get you to run. I am going to as soon as possible write a program to remove it. I am sorry to say these things can and will happen when you use any type of malicious things. As far as what I am doing about it I warned you guys as soon as I knew and will as I said write a program for removal. For the rest of you who need immediate removal either reformat or visit the Hijack This section. I would say I can look at your HJT logs since I generally know what I am doing however I do not think I am allowed to do so officially. I always do the best I can for my customers and I have talked with Irion in advanced about this. He assured me this will not happen again. Finally people I ALWAYS announce updates so please check here to see if I did an update. I will now also post the latest versions MD5 on the first post.

Update: I have updated the main post with MD5 Info. I have also made a nice program to compare so you guys do not have to worry about it yourself.

Okay, you have an older version, which is good..it means you have probably not been infected at all.

If you want to be sure, here's what you do : Download Malware Bytes and run a scan...if you find anything clean it up. Afterward, uninstall Malware Bytes and either PM me here or add me on MSN (Charon0831@hotmail.com).

You cannot have an AV installed. Disabling alone is not enough. If you read back in the thread a bit, you'll see where Vysse implemented that because of someone who had , ironically enough, Nod32 installed without disabling Threatsense. It was sending samples back to Esset, and we wound up with three different Nod32 detections in 2 days.

Hope you get to feeling better Vysse.

Finally got my VMs all set back up and running..Got Norton, KIS, Nod32, Avira, AVG, Trend Micro, MSE, and Spyware Dr with AV set up to test against runtime. Latest update passed with flying colors.

I am testing out some techniques to try to find a non-code workaround for the issues with Cybergate 1.07.5, and Darkcomet 3.3 Rising Devil gave me a great tip on the Darkcomet problem , which I'm going to try out later. If I have some success I will post back here.

Vysse - June 8, 2011, 3:57 pm

I just wanna state for everyone since people do not get it. Once your file is ran I cannot promise it will be FUD since your file may do things that will trigger an AV. I can only guarantee that it is FUD up until it is ran... after that your actions determine if it triggers a detection.

The appdata thing was removed since it caused detections. I don't mind if you guys drop files and get detected as that is your choice and it won't make the crypter detected sooner however if people get hits every time they drop to appdata it affects all of us. If I find a way around it I will code it in until then sorry but it won't happen.

Lifetime is for Major Releases, if he change to 2.0 i think it will be a major release to this cryptor and 5$ is not so much for that.

So , if the next update after 2.0 is 3.0 , he can ask again for 5$ more , right?

If he make big changes to the crypter then yes if you will look in HF threads you will see that Lifetime is for a major change in product and pass from a 1.0 or 1.2 to 2.0, this changes a made not so much i think at least 6 months is a life of the product

But that's not gonna happen.

The change Vysse is talking about will be a major version change...and he's not gonna do ANOTHER major version change right after that. This isn't about crabbing 5 bucks out of you. If he can implement what he is trying to implement in the new version, it will be well worth the $5 upgrade charge.

If I put this in you will be able to use your programs startup options and they will actually work. It will also fix the issues it DarkComet showing a cmd box on windows 7... it MIGHT also fix issues with persistence not working. It is amazing new more stable RunPE. I have done my best to make this the best product out there. I intend to do a full recode. Up the prices. Lifetime after version 2 will be 75-85 and monthly and 3 month will go up at least 5 dollars. So lifetime members paying 5 dollars for something I think is worth at least and extra 15 isnt that bad. It isnt like I am throwing something new in there. It will probably take me some time to recode this thing and make it better than it was before. And also I do not think it is sales trashing or anything for you to bring up lifetime but I did state way in advance it was per major version. It wasn't so I could get extra cash from you guys its for a major investment that I cannot do alone. If I was just doing a recode I might not even charge but I will need to purchase this new method. I PROMISE itll be well worth it.

deezjee19 - June 11, 2011, 3:36 am

Vysse..

At the day of the new major release, will people with a month or 3month membership be upgraded to v2 for the remaining days? Or will they need to rebuy?

In that case, please give an estimated release date, so people can consider what to do.. thnx:)

Well I am unsure atm how I am going to do this. I do know I want to gather as much funds as possible to make this happen. I may consider donations with an early release for donators rather than just charging people more.

deezjee19 - June 12, 2011, 3:39 am

I'd possibly be interested in the donation thingy.. And ofcourse in v2 in general :-)

Just wanna prevent upgrading for ie 3 months and having v2 released 7 days later without access to it :)

Anyway, good to hear about the developments.. Keep us posted :)

ok, so i downloaded the new version...but it was a little disappointing.

I crypted my DarkComet server, which i crypted before and worked perfectly (settings: disable module start up, select nothing from module shield) but this time, it didn't load, it just said that the program stoped working :(

http://img716.imageshack.us/img716/2339/imgytv.jpg[/img]

now i tried binding with empty program, and it worked...but the detection rate is 1/34 by NOD32. and the server size is 1.57mb which i don't prefer

AV Scan (Click to View)http://cloudscan.biz/report_image.php?report=CdaRP8[/img]

It should have been doing that for several versions...this is for those who do not know to upload to virustotal... it blocks it :P... just things I do to keep it fud.... you can always use the MD5 Hash Checker which always has the latest hash and also compare hashes with the first post.

I am considering not entirely rewriting the code just yet so I can focus on it better when I do release it. If I did this then Version 2 would be released on Tuesday the latest but would look not different than version 1 and function just the same. However the new install trick would be in there...what is everyones opinions?

Hmmm I think you are right as the GUI already looks very nice and the crypter does what a crypter should do. Everything works.

Crypter is 1/34 now :(.

I am guessing runtime. This has to do with a stupid policy of "not widely used" files... just use the File Info of another file that is widely used...

Okay, Norton SONAR has stepped up the game a bit. To make the explanation simple, it goes like this:

Norton keeps a database of all programs used by NAV customers. The AV automatically sends usage statistics back to Norton to be added to the database. This includes MD5 Hash of known executables.

What you're going to find is that Norton is NOT flagging the signature of RAT. The crypter still disguises that. What it's doing is looking at the rarity of the file (ie : how many OTHER Norton users have used that same file) combined with the risk of the file (IE : what is the file capable of doing). Therefore, if you have just the RAT binded with a blank exe, it will flag it because it is very rare and takes full access. The best route I have found ATM is to bind with some common exe...I have used utorrent and audio manager for example. We're looking for a way around this, but it's gonna require some creative thinking and a lot of testing. But we're on it.

I am compiling a list of exe's that I can successfully get by Sonar with, and when it is done I will post it here. In the meantime, try using the INFO of some other commonly used file for assembly.

no, i think you would probably use: No injection, and no persistance but man, use Dark Comet, it is WAY better!

I'm so happy that I bought a lifetime license for only 40$ (IndustrializedTM sold it to me)

VCrypt is the BEST crypter!
I have a question....

I have a slave on my blackshades NET that I am removing everytime.... But everytime he startups hes pc the RAT runs again..

I think this is because i used .NET crypter settings when building my server, and the RAT startups everytime..

Is there any .exe that will heal this? I'll run it on the victim's pc.

Its because its not deleting the right file... check his temp and find a file with the same name as the one you used to give to him. This is one of the many things that the new version will fix...

All prices are increasing after tonight... tomorrow I am releasing the update...
Version 1.5.0.1 Released!!! Great new stuff added on VCrypt. First I have made it so you can disable the cmd box that shows up when crypting certain things for example CyberGate. Also added the ability to use your rats startup option. This is still being tested and while I have yet to run into issues it isn't guaranteed to work as well as using my crypters method. It also may cause runtime detections so do not even begin to bitch about those. Version 2 is still going to come out I just am going to make sure it is a very well done release rather than a quick half ass one :P. Other than that we are still FUD and Enjoy Guys!!!

Also those who bought before the update will not be charged any difference. If you bought with the monthly plan youll still pay 15 or if you got 3 month its still 35 however if you buy it now you will be charged the new price.

lol 2 min

takes like less than 10 sec for me! that sucks for u man!

a question, if i want to buy next month or once my time finishes, will i still pay $15 since i bought one month, or $20

BTW, the new update is awesome, one thing u should include is to make it not even autorun for the server, cause there is two options either installer startup, or crypter startup...add the function of not even including a startup, for example like with Istealer which i don't need it to autorun!

No I just did a test and it does not seem to work sorry guys... however it seems this is a BlackShades issue since unencrypted it doesn't protect either... moving on I have made a video demoing the new feature with BlackShades... I will say BlackShades is the only non piece of shit that works with this... DarkComet and CyberGate have major issues... I will post the video momentarily.

As of July 2010 (almost a year ago)

Well over 90% of the PCs in the world have some version of the .NET Framework installed.
Over 65% of Windows PCs in the world have .NET 3.5 SP1 installed.

This year:

The latest projections have the number of .NET 2.0 users at 87%.

What scanning site you know which 100% doesn't distribute? And if they do, why don't you auto-block it with Vcrypt like novirusthanks is blocked? (hosts file)

Also, I found out that not changing the icon and/or file info will result in a 1/34 (AVG - Luhe.Packed.D).

Now much I can do about that detection since its more than likely the icon or info your using... also I do not enough evidence to support blocking one of the most popular scan sites on HF...cloudscan doesnt distribute I talk to the owner all the time but theyre in between servers atm...

Also my server gets detected by the worst anti-viruses such as "antivir", the guy did a scan and my server came up and deleted me, i was having fun with him too, what's up with that? Is this why you are recoding the software or is it my fault?

That should not be happening... I will do a scan asap... as far as the recoding it is because my output has become well known by avs it seems...

still clean are you dropping any files????

Arabian - July 3, 2011, 1:28 am do u have more update? or how i can update it fizzpop - July 3, 2011, 3:50 am

Hmm, was working fine with DarkComet 3.2, now comes up with "explorer.exe -.NET Framework Initialization Error" "Unable to find a version of runtime to run this application"

I've fiddled round trying to change settings and everything, but still get this error. Which is weird cause it was working perfect 24hrs ago :L

Anyone know what im doing wrong/ whats going wrong?

Thanks

Yes I usually drop the file if the crypter doesn't work with the bind, ill test it without a drop, I am sure that is the problem since on his AV the report came out as a Trojan.Dropper

After I crypt it and change it to a .com, I no longer can keep the icon to the file. I tried using the build in extension changer and it does weird ass things such as change the file name to "exe.23234.com", which is not what I wanted, I wanted "23234.com". Any clues?

The extension exploit is simply a visual ruse to fool the victim into thinking it is something besides an exe - it doesn't ACTUALLY change it to a .com. It uses the reverse-character exploit.

Okay, did some testing with a Blackshades server. Used Blackshades install and startup, and protect process.

Are you suing Blackshades ? And what OS do you have on the VM ?

Vysse - July 11, 2011, 12:16 pm

Do not use the file pumper on Blackshades. There is a size detection and I am working on the fix. This is why the binder is disabled. I will hopefully have something soon to handle this.

I suggest using Virtual PC 2007 with Windows XP. It's VERY easy to use and you can just make a COPY of the actual Windows XP and continue to corrupt the Virtual PC (assuming that you can't get it back to normal).

It doesn't crash and is very easy to use.

My main OS is Win7 x64 Ultimate.

That shouldnt make a difference... also its a size issue...nothing more... thus why the binder had to be temporarily disabled while I recode everything...

Quack - July 14, 2011, 11:50 am

Hey Vysse. So I'm using the file extension changer which works great as well as file pump and icon change. When I upload my file to lets say mediafire, it does the trick:

[img]http://img543.imageshack.us/img543/7928/capturelgq.png[/img]

However when they download the file, the exploit no longer works:

[img]http://img148.imageshack.us/img148/4477/unled11y.png[/img]

Any reasoning and a fix to this?

Hey. When can we expect an update with FILE BINDER?

Also, are we ever going to see some features such as: Botkilling protection, Persistence, Custom Installation location, Hide File, Injection to process?

I am working a new version that should readd the file binder... as for these other things I do not wanna bloat the crypter with features that will make it more detected and it already injects into a process... so I doubt you will see any of those.

alias31 - July 17, 2011, 7:49 pm

You can inject into a process??! HOW? so can i inject into like svchost.exe or explorer.exe?

No I inject into vbc.exe for stability and other reasons I do not allow you to choose the process you inject into.

I'm having problems running the crypter. First I uninstalled all my scanners(KIS and MalwareBytes) but still get an AV detected error. I then tried to run it in a clean Windows XP VMWare sandbox and I couldn't get it to run. Any ideas? I launched a ticket but haven't gotten a response yet, hence the reason I'm posting here.

deezjee19 - July 30, 2011, 6:21 am

Yes it is working.

For me its not FUD anymore tho (CG 1.4.8) though I know other have reported it to be still FUD.

Support normally is really good, just now we have been waiting quite a while for an update..

avensim - July 30, 2011, 6:28 am

What kind of an update? An update to make it completely fud?

deezjee19 - July 30, 2011, 6:48 am but as far as I know he is workign on a major update, goign to v2..

Hi guys I am still working on the update. The reason I have not finished is I am recoding everything from scratch including the entire GUI. I have finished most of the GUI and soon I should have finished everything else... I have not forgot about VCrypt or you guys I just want to make a step forward in crypting and use an unused storage method to make crypted files last longer...

Just my opinion, not meaning to trash talk you, but if it's going to take this long I'd at least put out a FUD copy while we wait for version 2, because it has been over two weeks now.

deezjee19 - August 5, 2011, 3:07 pm

Vysse>

Yes, I do understand what a recode is..

However, not knowing anything about an estimated release date is kind of frustrating, as the current version isn't fud anymore :)

Therefore, in case we can do anything to speed things up, let us know..

With having Duke Nukem Forever released, we do need a new leader for the vaporware charts though... hides ;-)

Vysse - August 6, 2011, 2:08 pm

Really not much can be done. I am sorry for it taking awhile but I refuse to waste time fudding something that will just get detected shortly after. The antivirus companies have gotten too familiar with the stub overall that it detects some of my main methods. For this very reason I am doing a recode. Just be patient.

zero8 - August 6, 2011, 3:15 pm

Unsure and yes it will be free.

Ok so I got most of the stub done and its fud. I am going to use compression for binding only I think since to small of a file stored causes a detection... once the stub is done just gotta implement a few more things and it should be good to go. Sorry for the wait guys I am working hard on this and you will notice some speed increase in the program due to my hard work.
