You do realize this would evade the whole point right? .Net reflector was made to view .net code. It can analyze it and depending on the plugin even debug it. But this is the source code for it. If you want the compiled version download it from the site. People have been modding this since it was found. CodeCracker on tuts4you has a very excellent version available for download.

It's a source code.

Which means, you can open it up in a coding program and edit in the source.
Customize it.

You can get the newest version for free on their website.

This is a source code of the program.

Not the program itself.
