Thread: [Viewing Private Facebook Profiles \[TUT\]](#)

ClareBear - May 6, 2011, 3:12 pm

Ever tried adding someone on facebook but they just wont accept your friends request ?

- 1.) Go take a look at your slaves friends list
- If you know a bit about this person and who they are friendly with this could be useful.
- 2.) Choose a friend and save their profile picture.
- 3.) Now make a replica account on facebook of that person you have chosen.
Name/Location/Likes/Groups (this will help it look more legit but you don't have to)
- Make sure everything is set to private, you don't want your slave taking a sneak peak and realizing something isn't right with the profile.
- 4.) Once you have checked over your privacy settings write a status .. something like "Heyy got a new profile, will be deleting my old one next week :)"
- You could post other stuff to make it more legit.. Totally up to you :)
- 5.) Add your slave -- you can put a personal message with the friend request so make out it is something you are copying to everyone like .. "Hey all, this is my new account :)"
- 6.) Keep a close eye on your notifications. Hopefully they should accept soon :)

Tip: It is probably best to deactivate after checking over the profile you wanted to see, especially if you are wanting to see it again.. You can always reactivate and deactivate whenever you want and however many times you'd like to look :)

Hope this helps. ?

You could just add the person to your friend list without making new account, they would probably accept unless they only accept people they know.

Can't see there being an exploit to be honest and if there is it will most probably get patched instantly :(

helpSeeker - May 25, 2011, 2:53 pm can they find who made the fake profile?

yuzhnnny36 - May 25, 2011, 3:45 pm

Lolz...thats s0me uses of a common sense.. :D
