"In February 2009, Toei announced that it would begin rebroadcasting Dragon Ball Z as part of the series' 20th anniversary celebrations. The series premiered on April 5, 2009, under the name Dragon Ball Kai, with the episodes remastered for HDTV, featuring updated opening and ending sequences, and a rerecording of the vocal tracks by most of the original cast. The footage was also re-edited to more closely follow the manga, resulting in a faster moving story, and damaged frames removed. As such, it is a "new" series created from the original Dragon Ball Z footage." - Dragonball KAI in Wikipedia

Might give it a shot, since it says they'll follow the manga closely (which was the downfall of Z when they deviated from the manga the first time). ? Thanks for the heads up.

ANOTHER Dragon Ball Series? Oh my lord.

Darkygamer - August 31, 2009, 6:35 am jep wel not really new but it is a remake of dragonball z with only 100 episodes :D

The Rated R Superstar - August 31, 2009, 10:20 am

I wish they would make a proper new series of dragonball.

FrayzZeUsher - August 31, 2009, 5:49 pm

dragonball doesnt need anymore fucking series ~ but DragonBallKai made it better.

It had endless possibilities but it would get stale.
