You will have to discover a vulnerability in a Google product or have a security incident to report. When you have properly notified of legitimate issues, Google will do their best to acknowledge the report and thanks you for the valuable assistance by putting individuals/organizations on the Hall of Awesome work and worth bragging mate congos, do they really offered the money??

as their title say "The following people reported security vulnerabilities that didn't qualify for a reward, or helped us out before the program started. Thanks to these named individuals for helping Google security!"

Please don't take any offence i am just asking.
