How spammed are the blogs you're targeted? Max number of OBL (outbound links)? Are they mainly blogengine or a mix of WP, Movable-Type, etc?

Thanks

ClickBankMonster - July 3, 2011, 12:15 am

I use a mix of all types of blogs. I usually don't bother checking OBL when I'm doing my personal blasts as the volume of fresh blogs I use would eat too much time. When I do check OBL, the lists I use average >50 OBL when they are fresh harvested.

TL;DR

I use a high volume of all types of blogs that result in a great number of backlinks.

Vouch, Again thanks for the back links my dummy forums gets 2000-2500 hits a day each. With all the adfly and spam money i get from forwarding, i may be able to work only 5 hours a day now. Here's a hint for your other costumers use adf.ly to send someone to goo.gl/.. and send them to spam link and on to the destination link. They don't realize what hit em, make me about $1400 a month from all 36 forums i use your back-links and SB on. nice right. Thank you, man your word and services are priceless.

Sabre Corporation - July 17, 2011, 11:19 am

How long will you stay continue doing this? You say permanently, but if you stop next week.. it was permanently as long as you provided that service. ;)

So if i get it right, when i place my site on your list, it will get fresh backlinks every day? So the site would climb in google search results? Which results in more visitors?

rlogin - July 17, 2011, 11:23 am

Still not entirely sure what back links do, do they increase your GPR?

ClickBankMonster - July 17, 2011, 12:31 pm

(Jul 17, 2011 11:23 AM)rlogin Wrote: CITE Still not entirely sure what back links do, do they increase your GPR? Backlinks do a number of things for sites and their SERPs. Backlinks are what register in the search engines when one site links to another.

The search engines use backlinks and a number of other factors to determine how a site ranks for a certain search term.

They take into consideration, how many sites link to your webpage, and consider it to be a kind of "vote" for your site. I mean who would link to a site that had no useful info on it, or provided no value?

Another thing that gets factored into the equation is the quality of those backlinks pointing at you. Do you have 30 PR0 sites linking to you? Perhaps you have twenty or so links from sites on the same IP? (All from your other websites, it's assumed) Perhaps you have mastered the art of blog commenting to the 9th degree, and have 10,000 of those, and only those?

It's a good idea to have a healthy mix of backlinks; your goal here is to target three things.

1. Quality –you can't beat a high PR backlink from an authority site in your niche after all.
2. Relevance – having a site in your niche link to you carries more weight than having one from a website on a totally different topic.
3. Quantity – Do you know how to outrank your competition? It's easy! Build more quality links than them!

Still selling. I have decided to further reduce the price if you pay via LR.

If you pay $5 LR, you get UNLIMITED BACKLINKS to all the URLs on your site. This is great in itself. I'm also including 2000 free visitors as an optional free addon.
