Invisible folder link toolbar, re-sized to center the icons.

I think there's a application that does it too but cbf to find it.

Use the archbang fork of it, its just arch with openbox pre-setup hence why its Arch(bang) similar to how Crunchbang is.

Will save you the trouble of getting xorg/GDM/openbox/sudo setup.

Just don't try setting it up from a USB, its not fully supported atm.

Well, I somewhat got it working from usb on my own, but I ran into an issue where grub would hang indefinitely when installing.

May just be my effed up partitioning.

What I did was used UNetBootIn and selected the img (archbang iso) installed it to my usb (Format it in fat32 ahead of time) then afterwards renamed it to "ARCH_201102" (Has to be that or it wont work).

Then it will load up like a normal live disk (But it will skip the login) and you will be on an openbox desktop, right click anywhere and choose install.

If you have trouble figuring out which drive is which open up the disk manager (Its somewhere in the right click menu) and look at your drives from there (Will be labeled sda/sdb etc)

I'm not really a fan of rainmeter for the most part, personally, I think rainmeter makes the desktop look worse 99% of the time. I have seen a few desktops that use rainmeter that I liked though, but that's because they don't cover half the screen, and just keep it hiding in the corner. I'm more of a fan of simplistic desktops.

Do have to say I also prefer the more dark desktops than the very bright white or blue (which really hurt my eyes) still not understanding how dark desktop colors can hurt the eyes but hey everyone their own preferences.

And love the desktop with as little as possible on it. Me myself always aiming for it but since school is almost forcing me to have everything on the desktop I always make a mess of it ><.

The tweaks you did make the wallpaper look great with your taskbar. I like both dark and light desktops, none of theme hurt my eyes. Now what does hurt my eyes are people who put a shitty taskbar color, with a wallpaper 10x to small for there screen resolution, with icons spammed all over it as their desktop.

Imho its better to have a wallpaper too big than too small, upscaling looks way worse than downscaling.

I use shine 2.0 for the visual style if I remember correct, and sauve icons. Then I just moved my icons to the center, and used Windows 7 Start Orb Changer to change my start orb to a black image.

Also, just got Awesome window manager set up on Cruchbang, I still need to add some more widgets and change some stuff, but here is how it looks so far. I also am thinking about adding conky to fill up the large blank spot on the left.

FooBar2000 is nice and customizable, by default it's fairly odd. But if you find a skin from deviantart, or customize it yourself you can make it really nice. It's also pretty light weight.

>Too bad I got all my songs on itunes already.

All you need to do is add your music folder to fooBar settings and it will be "on" fooBar2000.

I agree, I couldn't find any suitable wallpapers with Dead Master in the background. Also with Winamp, it's probably the best media player I've tried. For me, it really beats iTunes since Winamp loads very fast and is not really bloated. You can also sync in Winamp, and there are lots of skins to choose from (there are many anime skins as well).

Most skins fro Winamp look pretty ugly in my opinion, especially anime related ones. Finding Dead Master wallpapers should be that hard, check Konachan.

Agreed 100%. I use my taskbar to pin my most used programs, my start menu to pin my other used programs. Than I have my folders organized so I can hit "win + e" and easily get to them due to some being favorited and some being my contained in my library folder.

Yeah, the only issue I have come across so far is that some websites won't accept the links. If you didn't notice, they don't end with a file extension or anything. Works for embedding, linking, anything like that.

For example, if I were to upload my avatar on puush, Hackforums wouldn't accept the puush link I entered in the Avatar box.

Thanks for the feedback. I don't like seeing icons on the desktop though, since I find that it looks cluttered. Of course, we all differ in our tastes, but it's nice to see suggestions. It's always subject to change, and it might fit depending on the wallpaper I use.

I used to have program/folder shortcuts on the desktop then moved on to a dock but then I realized that it was unneeded since I could use the taskbar and now everything I need (1 folder and 1 program) is pinned to the taskbar. All other things are in other folders since I don't use them that much and I access it through the start menu.

So that doesn't leave much to stick on the desktop.

Yeah, I need to organize my desktop, I don't like having files n stuff on it. I'll keep the icons on it but only a few of them...

I take a simulation and game design class in college so I downloaded visual studio, 3ds max and adobe flash cs4 software for class. I just chose to get Game Maker to dabble with stuff but I'm also developing a game with a number of my class mates. So far we've been thinking about making an action-adventure game; I'm working on a fighting game and a side scrolling RPG (like Pokemon) independently.

Explorer.exe isn't even running.

Its a shell unto itself.

Its runs around 1/3 of the resources explorer does and eliminates any kind of start menu.

It can also be run without a taskbar and simply be in right click menu only.

The way it looks was done by me, a theme I coded:

I would go with Xoblite then, seeing as bb4win_mod is a bit more of a chore configuring.

And you will most likely want to download/install Xplorer2 to replace explorers file manager (or explorer.exe will restart every time its used.)

If you need any help with it just message me, I've set plenty of people up with it.

Also used to prefer a clean desktop, but it's much easier to work with a filesystem on your desktop.

After years of clean desktops I've now settled with that and don't think I'll add or remove a single folder from the top row for the next few years.

I also make tons of avatars. I might post them too.

Also the font color for my username there was directly taken from a palette of Miku's hair.

I also did alot to my X-Chat but nothing anime related.

Just pointing out that you merely like to see yourself post, regardless of whether the material is relevant to the subject.

Also that your desktop is boring, not appealing and not creative by any stretch of the imagination. And don't group me with the rest of these users. Liking anime does not affect ones attitude towards others. I, and I alone, am making these comments and in no way reflect the attitudes of other anime fans.

Since when does mad=suicidal? Quit being an idiot and post something worth while and on topic, instead of this useless, unrelated dribble.

Read the name of the thread dip-was, it says "Anime related desktops".

1) You posted yours simply because you're a narcissist/post whore and...

2) Why would you wanna show off something you put 0 effort into?

Some of us (not just anime fans) like to go to all out in customizing out desktops just as people like to customize cars and would thusly like some recognition for our creativity and effort. You on the other just want post count.

I see, I see. I probably would go on those boards more often if I didn't already have enough things to keep me busy.

When I see people who use wallpapers that aren't the right resolution or just look like ass-in-a-bag, I normally throw them in the "dimwit" bin with all the other chromosonally imbalanced inbreds.

Hah. Loving that wallpaper, mainly because I know where it's from ;)

I changed mine up a bit by adding a VS and another Rainmeter plugin:

Oh. I thought that was Linux not windows. Distro is a linux term. I wonder if that theme works for W8.1. Will have to check on that. Can you link your wallpaper btw? :D

Ah I see.

If I had my PC right now I would screen cap it and give you a link, but on my mobile atm. Give me a while and I might find it on the web.

If you don't use your desktop items often, hide them to clear the desktop a bit. Try and find a good VS to fit your preferences (there are loads on DeviantArt) and it'll look much better :).

I'm not going to post a giant image spoiler in the thread like everyone does.

Anime: K-On, and I'm currently rocking the Pokeball Start Orb.

Sure. Here's the VS I use:

<http://chungkan.deviantart.com/art/Coua-white-297610657>

Rainmeter Skins (incomplete):

<http://cahilart.deviantart.com/art/Rainm...-138102859>

<http://www.deviantart.com/art/multiFEED-...-343755882>

I modified both of those to fit the background, but I won't include those here.

I forget the name of the Now Playing plugin I use. I'll get the name of it and update links when I get home.

Since it seems people have dug this thread from the grave, I'll post my current setup. It's not much different from last time and I found the Rainmeter skins redundant so I removed them - not that I looked at my desktop much anyway.
