The main purpose of this thread is to share sources so you can study and learn.

Please do me a favor, don't just copy and paste the source codes.

Study the source codes and learn how the codes are working for real.

I will also recommend you to take a look at my other thread if you are new and wanna learn the basics.

Thanks :)

I just like to help, and I hope some users might find this useful.

NOTE: I will of course add much more when I get some more time, right now it is night where I am living.

Ugh more source codes... Very few actually learn from them anymore, they have become the target of c&p now-a-days. Sad really...

It's a nice thread, but I think that this is more of a learning resource than just entire source codes of programs.

So true, all we can do is to laugh at them when they get busted trying to sell their c/p software or release it for free with their own name.

Aesthetics - June 4, 2011, 3:36 pm

If you are going to study them then it is pretty good learning resources.

If you are just going to copy paste then you won't learn anything.
