Thread: The Final Blaze Of Glory

Omniscient - June 6, 2011, 11:33 am

There has always been times when a member decides to go out in a blaze of glory. I use this term to describe it when a member creates a thread going all out on the site, staff, policy or even me. They rant about how the sites run poorly. How new members are low quality. How some new policy is complete shit. Or maybe that scammers run HF and all I care about is money.

These members are trolls. They are making their last posts knowing they will get banned. These are often long-term or even well-reputed members. For many reasons they've decided that it's time they leave HF and instead of simply logging out and moving on they decide to get one last rant about everything they don't like about HF.

These events are often triggered by a rep fuck, ban, new policy, or a recent scam. They feel disgruntled and want to be heard. They want to express their anger. It's understandable but let's be honest. It's not productive. It's actually counter-productive as few of these threads produce anything of value. The same complaints are made and even if they are valid complaints there are rarely anything constructive about how to cope and correct these problems.

I hold no ill-will toward members that want to leave or have a grievance. But you contact me personally if you want to take stab at me. Creating a public thread in an attempt to gain member support is cowardly. I won't stand for a mob mentality rising up against my policies or how this site is run. HF is not a dictatorship. HF is not a democracy. HF is not a government. It's a website I personally own that is a large and active community. I've never advertised it as anything else. With 200,000 members this place cannot be run by members. One person must make decisions.

Ultimately I'm the only guy that faces consequences based on the sites failure or success in policies. If I make members happy I make more money. If I piss off the community I make less money. So my intention is never to make less money. It's to grow this community as best I can. This goal doesn't always make all members happy. It's inevitable that a certain group is going to get ticked off at my actions. However I'm not going to pander to a select few members. I'm going to focus on the overall community. Even if these few are vocal and don't recognize why certain policies are vital to the sites longevity.

I'm aware of problems here. I know full well our weak points. I've read every complaining rant. I'm not so arrogant to think HF is perfect. Matter of fact all the problems we have plague me daily but solutions aren't nearly as easy as stating the problems we have. Solutions for members mean less problems for me. So finding solutions is ultimately very important to me personally.

With all that said. I think it's time to officially ban these "Blaze of Glory" threads. I'm tired of attention seeking disgruntled members deciding they're going to attack this community, me, and staff. End result is always the same. Their account banned. So I'm officially banning these threads and the only course of action will be the perma banning of the account and the junking of the thread. They only create drama and serve no positive purpose here.

I'm sure some will express how this isn't fair or that I'm trying to stop complaints. That's not it. There are ways to express a problem and offer suggestions to improve HF. I even opened the suggestions area a few weeks ago. So that argument is null. I'm not trying to control speech either.

I'm just tired of the drama stirred up by disgruntled members on their way out.

If you feel yourself coming to the edge. Here is a solution. Log out. Come back if you want at later time or don't. But when you go out in a Blaze of Glory you can kiss your account good bye.

Thank you.

Finally. This mixes with my suggestion to have harsher punishment on the conspirators, but to ban all the morons who think HF is "dieing" is better. I'm fed up replying to those butthurt fagg0ts, and there's a lot.

If a member PM's you a rant at Staff, yourself, or the site in general does that equal the same punishment, or any punishment?

Omniscient - June 6, 2011, 11:48 am

(Jun 6, 2011 11:38 AM)Mr. Anderson Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) So if someone has an issue we can just talk to you about it?

Depends on the situation. There is a feedback area and a suggestions area.

If your general feedback is "This site is shit" then just log out because I'm going to close your account.

If your suggestion is "I'd like to see higher quality posts maybe we can do..." then post it in suggestions.

If you want to tell me how poor a job I'm doing and say how much staff sucks. Sure, PM me. No guarantee what response you'll get but 100% if you post I'm closing the account.

I'm just tired of the drama being stirred up all for nothing. The member is going to get banned anyways and they know that. Considering we get 1500+ new members per day and maybe one or two BOG threads a month I don't see how I should give a shit that .001 percent of members don't like it here.

King - June 6, 2011, 11:50 am

I was expecting this thread to be honest. I agree with you. If a member doesn't like HF nor its members, then he should leave it without creating these drama threads.

Rhythm - June 6, 2011, 11:51 am

I'm assuming this is regarding Paniks latest thread. I agree with him, but not with his approach. His post was basically an unproductive rant.

Minus-Zero - June 6, 2011, 11:52 am

Omniscient my problem with you is...

We don't talk enough, I gave you chocolate and flowers on valentines day. Yet you give me nothing for my birthday or even look at me during anymore!
I desire your attention!

Ethereal - June 6, 2011, 11:53 am

I feel that it's prudent to point out that banning these threads won't actually affect the user - they would be banned anyway.

However, if it gives you grounds to instantly remove those threads, I completely agree with the rule.

You also have to consider the fact that anyone who has a jaded view of the forum and how it is run may take this as a confirmation to darker deeds. By no means is this an accusation, and you'll probably state that you don't care about it.

However, you don't put out the fire by turning off the fire alarm.

Just my two cents.

Previous rants have resulted in small bans and limitations. Most idiots make them because they know they can come back. This would scare more than half of them.

That's your assumption. Just because Op made an attention thread does not mean he was perfect.(
He brags about his troll thread about Hf being hacked as a parameter to gauge his efficacy?) He had 8 pages of warnings! In-fact, as his thread proved, it was all about him, his post count, his inability to get the Protector award even after reporting in 4 digits?

Modus operandi of these attention seekers is so clear now. They need Oxygen to survive on HF.

When they realize that they being unsuccessful in their efforts, they fall back on the tested and tried method of being a nuisance and evoking drama.

I seriously fail to understand this here. Dramatics are short lived always.

I always just reported these threads as flaming as that is what they normally are. Though it is entertaining seeing members who think they are holier than thou and that every thought of theirs needs to be written. I think people should just do what MyNamels940 did, just log in and post less. People will eventually forget about you and then things are all good. :)

I say, Omni or staff take the account off that person, reset it all and do a monthly contest. Where each member takes a number, the correct number wins and that account gets merged with winners account.

Eagle 95 - June 6, 2011, 12:24 pm

I don't know if this will stop rants since they know they're getting permanently banned, but you made something to express yourself over those threads. By telling us to use PM system to take shit on you is really brave from your side and it's showing that you do care after all.

Mermaid - June 6, 2011, 12:28 pm

I say to get one HF flaw out of the way is to promote a Marketplace Moderator.

Industry - June 6, 2011, 12:29 pm

I 100% agree with this. No matter what there will always be the members that want to be positive and contributive. Then there are the users that will finger out every single flaw on both as you as an individual or on us as a whole community.

They knew the rules long before they posted these whiny threads. Most members deal with their problems where these user's only make them worse. You can't create a cure by making another problem.

Omni, ffs, you need to get priorities straight.

This forum needs work, and we know you're working on it, but you take the time to make threads like this less than 24 hours after Panik's thread (don't tell me this wasn't a response to his thread, we all know it is.)

We need section moderators, a vouch system, and there are so many amazing suggestions in the suggestions section that just get ignored and brushed under the carpet. Some of those suggestions would improve the whole site, whereas this "no blaze of glory" thing will effect .0001% of members.

I'm not bitching, and I know you're trying, but not much is really getting done.

Deal - June 6, 2011, 12:40 pm

I think it's a mental condition, the members are afraid of you while they're on the forum, I'm a bit afraid of you myself, mainly because you seem angry, and because of all the rumors, so the members are kinda afraid when they're here, and when it's time to go they let go of all that fear, and wants to show how hardcore they are, and they do that by making some kind of hate thread, or by stating things like "I don't give a fuck it's just the internet" "Rep means nothing" "Omni is just a human"

I'm not implying that it's the kind of fear where they are afraid to do anything, and the kind of fear that fucks them up, it's a fear of what you're going to say if they pm you, or what you're going to do by their new suggestion thread and so on.

However fear is needed on such a big forum, because when it all comes to the end fear = Respect.

This is just my thought, agree with it or not. :)

Not hating on anyone.

Most of these threads are made by some kids crying, like yesterday, a kid crying about rep then saying that HF is hated. Not because YOU get a neg rep and hate HF that mean it sucks... -_- . So I am happy that they are banned, nice decision!

Skill - June 6, 2011, 12:47 pm

You would think such an announcement will prevent members from going ahead and creating a nonsense thread but we all know that we haven't seen the last of such threads. It's just the way things go around here, but just like the thread and the posts within the threads, the member will soon be gone and forgotten about. Now, I don't have anything against Panik; this is not my argument but I do think he should have gone about his complaints a bit more maturely. He could have easily addressed the problems he thought were holding Hack Forums back and had a friendly discussion with Omniscient but he chose to go about it the hard way. There's only one winner when it comes to such tyrant tantrums; Omniscient and that's a fact.

Omniscient - June 6, 2011, 12:47 pm

Quote:We don't talk enough, I gave you chocolate and flowers on valentines day

No you didn't. Otherwise you'd have gotten my attention.

Quote:However, if it gives you grounds to instantly remove those threads, I completely agree with the rule.

It does. And one thing is 100% true. I've always explained policies here. What I won't do is repeatedly explain again and again and again to those who don't want to read Help Docs or lookup old threads. I just can't take the time to explain constantly our policy with deal disputes or LQP. We have policies in place for a reason. Overall these policies are enforced by staff very well. These policies all have legitimate reasons even if you don't agree with the reason.

Quote:Previous rants have resulted in small bans and limitations. Most idiots make them because they know they can come back.

I think more recent rants have gotten bolder and more visceral. In just about all rant threads I do reply and I don't often junk them. I do lock them. So it's not that I'm really personally afraid of what they say. I'm more annoyed at the seemingly viral nature of these threads inspiring imitators and one upmanship.

And yes for the record it's Panik that was the straw that broke the camels back. Could have been anyone though. I was thinking of this policy when Carbon went out the same way. Panik just like Carbon was banned, warned, and limited dozens of times. Despite their long-term memberships they were not quality members that cared about the community.

Quote:Modus operandi of these attention seekers is so clear now. They need Oxygen to survive on HF. When they realize that they being unsuccessful in their efforts, they fall back on the tested and tried method of being a nuisance and evoking drama.

I absolutely agree. And it's sad because maybe they have a valid message about the quality of the site but it's hard to hear it when it's in-between a senseless rant.

Quote:Omni Sir, but this is just complete bullshit! I'm talking to you directly now. You refuse to let us warn other members away from this site?

Nice. Way to look like an ass. So we don't allow members to warn others...hmm...your sig isn't removed. And you've had that scam report open for weeks now. You're just another member that thinks he doesn't have to follow policy or take the time to understand it. This site is super simple. Read policies, understand them, and then follow them. If you want your account closed now just let me know. Be happy to end your misery here.

Quote:Damn, so many thread types or becoming disallowed. No Tinychat, Apple Related, Rants, Lounge Game Threads :(I understand this one completely, but I don't like all these thread types getting banned

And unfortunately as we grow so do our problems. This is also an example of how one member views these actions as suck and another as heaven. Tinychat threads were banned after many many complaints. So I listened to the members and made a decision to ban them. I might either create a section for them or some type of official rule.

What many don't understand is that I take queues from the members. I don't just commit random acts here. I'm constantly reviewing the site and having personal contact with members. Just because something is added to policy you don't agree with doesn't mean that it's not a benefit to the overall community quality. And stuff like apple threads were used to scam dozens of members. Threads like pizza and movie ticket sales are carded items that will get us shut down fast.

Quote:I don't know if this will stop rants since they know they're getting permanently banned

Probably not but if you're 1000 word essay on how HF sucks is junked in 10 seconds and your account banned it's probably going to be discouraging.

Quote:I say to get one HF flaw out of the way is to promote a Marketplace Moderator.

So much harder than you think.

Quote:I'm not bitching, and I know you're trying, but not much is really getting done.

No one is more aware than me about the things not getting done and how it's negatively effecting the quality of this community. If I was the boss of me I'd fire myself.

Quote:'d like to know how many PM's he gets per day.

A couple hundred. Most of which I respond to. What people don't know is how much time I spend in SSH and admincp looking for multiple accounts and ban evaders (who are normally scammers). Then there are emails, stolen accounts, and general system administrations.

I'm completely taxed with no available free time. There are moments I just want to cry and bury my head in the sand. But I don't. I login, do work, and try my best every day to keep this community strong (and yes profitable).

My goal is to make HF a top 1000 Alexa website.

I can really make an enormous thread about all the projects I have going on and want to complete. Stuff I know might not happen for years. But stuff that's awesome and when I do implement people are gonna shit bricks. For now I do the daily work and try to add nice little things to the community like new awards, contests, and fun policies. But I also have to enforce current policies. Protect the website. And deal with nuisances like this.

It's very easy to judge me or how HF is run. But I tell you 100% that most of you would shit bricks if you sat in my chair for a week. I've now been doing this for 4 years. So my basic attitude is FUCK OFF...I'm working hard.

Think about it like this. They were eventually going to do something as stupid if not more along these lines further down the road. All you did was deter it or otherwise prevent possible damage to HF. Which is what everybody should want.

You're a great Admin and a great guy. You work hard for this site and work even harder to maintain it. I can't imagine the amount of idiotic members you have to deal with everyday and how you manage to do so without going insane. But you do and that is all that matters.

PhirewireNET - June 6, 2011, 12:58 pm

Whens the last time you recieved a good well structed. Thank You.

First of all, the kid that made the "why so scared" thread was not me and I'm insulted that his account got merged with mine.

Second, you're completely right on almost all points you've made here. I guess we have just been growing bored. But is that what you want? A site that people hang on for a while then get bored of?

Oh well. You can't honestly expect HF to live forever. You could have learned alot from people like me. In response to your closing post in my thread; yes, I mad bro. I'm mad that all that time was spent for nothing.

?Cooldude? - June 6, 2011, 1:00 pm

One thing I don't understand is why you posts replies to the points made by the members, like in this thread. If you're perma banning them anyway, what's the point?

He replies so the other members can see that he actually read the thread and cared to make a response. However, he doesn't take the five seconds to check an IP before merging accounts.

Other than ub3r applications, I see no other reason for a user to PM him so he should start warning/banning for useless PM's that waste his time, so he has more time to improve the site.

btw, are you perma-limited or something?

He gets like 2k PM's a day I read. He gets lots more than "uber applications". Hell, I have around 3.5k PM's on Market Forums, I can't imagine how many PM's he gets a day.

No, Staff just hate me and search my posts when I'm unlimited. So last 3 times I've been limited the day I've been unlimited --. 2 more days Mitch. 2 more fucking days until I'm unlimited :D:D:D

Early Congrats, Crayo.

It's just the fact that some members on here love to bitch about every little thing that bugs them, when it's perfectly fine for others.

Oh, look, a member bitching about something that bugs them:

There are multiple other members that agree with OP, they just don't say it. They would be able to see Omniscient point of view when he reply.

Emma Watson - June 6, 2011, 1:17 pm

This is a great thing for the site. All those threads do is bring others down and cause people to troll and hate. No need for such things on HF.

Saged - June 6, 2011, 1:21 pm

Good riddance. They were a pain in the ass anyways. Nothing but drama, morons and bullshit.

xTiNgUiSh - June 6, 2011, 1:29 pm

Omni I agree with you 100%. To be completely honest this site is becoming more and more professional. By that I mean less random crap that doesn't contribute to this site. You have full say in what you want for this site. It's yours. Let's see anyone else on this site try to own a site like this for one week. They most likely couldn't. Besides that, frankly I agree with what you are doing here. Who want's to login or register a account on a site that has nonstop fighting and bitching? It just draws new members away and makes members think they can do what they want. Think of it this way, if there were no laws we would be going around being crazy mofr's, same thing would apply here. No rules and no discipline would result in complete choas which would take away what this site was made for.

For all the people that don't like it or understand the rules read them again.

We recommend you take the time to read the HF Help Documents section. The answer to your questions should be contained in there.

To be honest, I think the rep fuck didn't really trigger it, it just made me realize rep doesn't mean anything, you should be your self, and stop being a D-rider, or someone you're not.

Sleepy - June 6, 2011, 1:36 pm

lol at all the d-riders in this thread.

If your trying to imply me your wrong. I was actually Omni's first goodwill Monday rep one year ago. I don't need to ass kiss. ?

xTiNgUiSh (253) - Last updated 06-07-2010, 04:29 PM

Positive (+3): Passing on goodwill toward a good member.

I just think people should respect what is not yours. This site is not yours so you better respect who's it is, which would be Omni's. You don't go to someones house and put your feet up on their furniture and put your elbows on the table at dinner. Show respect and respect will be given back. Christ sakes, it's not too hard to obey a simple rule. How the hell did half of you make it through school?

(Jun 6, 2011 01:06 PM)Mermaid Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) Omni, you can't say somethings hard without trying. Are you implying I don't try hard? This site takes tremendous daily work just for upkeep. During the day I get about 10 PMs an hour. That's every 5 minutes that I have to help a member or answer a question. The deed of helping them takes anywhere from a few seconds up to even an hour. I'm often barely caught up and I go take a 15 minute break to return to 5 more PMs.

And some days I'm just mentally unable to more than the bare minimum as I get burnt out and require a longer break.

I think most opinions have been stated in this thread. Time to lock and go back to the less than stellar Goodwill Monday we're suppose to be enjoying.

Omniscient - August 22, 2018, 12:59 pm

Classic thread bump!

Omniscient - February 25, 2025, 9:21 am

14 year old thread and it's still viable. Although I think most members don't bother with the rant thread as they know it's probably gonna be deleted. But I often get a contact with their grievances.

Jamika - February 25, 2025, 4:02 pm

I agree with this... and unfortunately, I also hope that there will be no leniency towards old members who rely on their seniority to engage in inappropriate joking or treat other members as if they are above the rules. No one is above the forum's rules.

I also appreciate that you read suggestions. You may not implement all of them, but at least you apply what benefits the forum.

Edit : Didnt see this before as its since 2011 but its very good topic ngl

How 14 years have passed. Epic.
