Doesn't work. I killed 100 times server, and there is only 1 server on my computer (my own RAT).

After killing the process 100 times, i looked in the folder if the server was gone, no it was still there.

EliteHybridHacker - June 23, 2011, 4:36 am

Seemed to work! , but didn't have a keylogger.

You're an idiot.

Just saying.

Just because it was been killed doesn't mean it has been deleted

Matt88 - June 24, 2011, 2:51 pm

Okay bahatee :)

I know how to use it , I follow instruction , if I followed them then you don't know how to use it ;)

Turmoil - June 24, 2011, 2:53 pm

"doesn't" work,
When obviously it should work if you're doing it for the right reason.
Read the instructions again
It's a process killer

infomiho - June 24, 2011, 3:01 pm

Does this work like this ?

Process.Kill(TextBox1.Text) ??

:)

And also you can add sumthing like this.

Split the word to array by a DOT and add only the first part

(SO THE COULD WRITE THE EXTENSION)

No need for the extension, that would be to long to write one, file name is simple copy and paste by renaming it
