Thread: My weekend consisted of 4 very good movies

My weekend consisted of 4 very good movies (only 1 in the theater).

1) X-Men 1st Class = Awesomeness!!! Possibly the best movie so far this year (Thor is the only competitor in my opinion).

2) Green Lantern: Emerald Knights. Very good story telling, great animation and an overall great performance by a lot of talented voice actors.

3) Thor: Tales of Asgard was very well done, probably the worst of what I saw this weekend, but thats still pretty good considering what I watched. I would like to see a lot more of the animated prequel type stories, they are good to get people into knowing the history of the characters.

4) Black Swan: Ok, my girlfriend talked me in to watching this, but man, it was a good movie. Very wierd and odd, but an extremely convincing performance by Natalie Portman. The overall feel of the movie was just spooky. I know that may sound odd, but it really was. Hats off to Darren Aronofsky and the whole cast & crew for making a very good psychological thriller. I would suggest this to anyone no matter your taste in movies (not really for the kiddies though lol)

Lol I haven't seen any of them, how good was Green Lantern?

matjuh - July 8, 2011, 10:07 am

Yeah, those movies are great. :)

I really wanted to see that black swan movie a while back, but just like you I was hesitant. Maybe I will actually give it a chance now.

It was okay. The IMDB rating was pretty low. Not a must watch movie though.

I would say and vouch for Xmen.

Superman719 - July 9, 2011, 4:19 am i saw thor in the imax

i watched the green lantern on my computer (emerald knights) opted not to watch black swan and saw xmen 1st class in theaters but wasnt a huge fan

id say 50-50 take in my opinion of good-bad movies

¢?!? T????? - July 9, 2011, 7:37 am well i watched most of the movies except the black swan

Are you serious? Green Lantern was the worst movie, ever. >.>

Yeah, I know what you meant. I don't see movies that often so I thought it was okay. I would never suggest it to no one.

I am not going to watch green lantern or black swan.
