The HF color scheme should be left on the website. It looks horrible on a theme. ?

same as Banksy...

it looks like its from the 80's

good try though

Ok :( Thanks for the feedback.

Are all of these "themes" just recycled code with different colours?

Not funny. It was funny when Jack Eagles posted it in Perplexity's thread.

How could it not be funny if 1 post to another? It's the same picture =3.

It doesn't really fit into this thread. It's a theme, not something he was talking about. In perplexity's thread, he was saying he was back, and Jack Eagle's post was representing that no one gave a shit.

Yes.

All are based off of Aeonhacks' themebase; before his tutorials, none of these existed.

Sapientia - July 13, 2011, 11:05 pm

His themebase, but if you look at the code its kind of different then his and i have added more features.

This was terribly done sorry...

Look's decently better then most themes on here, then again i don't like themes or even the color of these boards. looking through most of these threads i've not seen one good theme or atleast something clean, easy on the eyes, I'm not even sure why people want themes?

Mine is not.. If you look at the code you will see it's all coded by me ..

Lets be honest though you did that out of necessity... you should work with Aeonhack so a better themebase can be released that allows inheritance rather than drawing a control...

No. They are not all just 'recycled' and 'recolored'.

I released Thief3 and Tedd released Adobe, none of which had EVER been seen before, nor anything like it. Please verify your statistics before you post them. Thief3 was the first theme that I have seen to be completely customizable. It was also unique. Just saying.

Just because a theme base is released doesn't mean Aeonhack coded all of these themes. He just gave us a base to work with to make theming easier.

Would I? If you say so.. I'm proud of the theme I've created and it worked great for me so..
