Thread: Death note L: change the world

Millar - September 24, 2009, 6:37 am

I just recently watched Death note movie L: change the world.

The movie in itself was perfect.. almost made me cry at the ending? And i wanted to know what you guys thought of it

If you havent seen it, Death note movie L: change the world

I buy and read the manga, a true otaku has nothing that stands in its way from buying it without looking at the price!

Sticking to topic: Yes, it was truly an amazing ending. :) But we all know that japanese people have some art in their work everyone gets a different feeling at the end of a truely epic anime, i get a weird kinda uncontent feeling and i keep thinking about it for a good hour or 2 afterwards but then realize how wicked it was.

Dang i hate movies that don't stick to the the manga story plot, like for example it showed L's butler "Watari" getting killed by the death note and yet L doesnt die after that which he should of died also with him but in this movie they let him live? Than later in the movie he meets Near which thats not how L found out about Near and Near didnt have his white hair and instead he had black hair in this movie? , this is my opinion about this movie just because they bend major rules that were set in the manga and they didnt made L use his brain at all in this movie which made it boring for me so if i could give this movie a rating it would be 2/5?
