

Forum:Hack Forums

Thread: hot laptop this normal or something majorly wrong

Charismatic - July 30, 2011, 2:03 pm

So my laptop is ht and when i say hot i mean touching burns my skin in a second. is this normal for laptops or not?

xXjakeXx - July 30, 2011, 2:04 pm

It matters what you are doing its not the lap top getting hot its the proccesser getting hot if you are doing alot its totally normal but if not then u have a problem

Captain Crunch - July 30, 2011, 2:04 pm

Does it leave a burn like when you touch a stove? Or does it just feel to hot to leave on your lap.

If touching the keys hurts something is wrong.

Check how many RPM your fan is at and ge

Charismatic - July 30, 2011, 2:06 pm

not like leaves a burn but gets really hot on bottom of it sometimes it resets, this usally happens when im playing games

xXjakeXx - July 30, 2011, 2:10 pm

The reason for this is because laptops arent made for games they have to try too hard overheating everything this can damage your computer

Captain Crunch - July 30, 2011, 2:11 pm

Check the RPM on the fan. My first thought is an issue with the fan.

Charismatic - July 30, 2011, 2:12 pm

how do i check that? can you tell me

Captain Crunch - July 30, 2011, 2:15 pm

What OS are you running? Let me know so I can tell you an application or command.

Apathy - July 30, 2011, 2:16 pm

Just buy a new fan. They're no more then 20 bucks. This is exactly why I'll never buy another laptop.

Charismatic - July 30, 2011, 2:17 pm

windows 7

but sadly i dnt know how to replace a fan on a laptop lol

Apathy - July 30, 2011, 2:32 pm

(Jul 30, 2011 02:17 PM)Charismatic Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) windows 7

but sadly i dnt know how to replace a fan on a laptop lol

Its not hard at all . Just Google it or youtube they have stuff on their that shows you in like 10 minutes.

deiski - July 30, 2011, 2:43 pm

There are two reasons, One because it's too much for the computer..

And second to much dust.. Open up your computer, And see where the fan is for your computer?

There must be ALOT of dust in there.

Happens to me bro.