

Forum:Hack Forums

Thread: Found an unpublished exploit, should I publish it?

03storic - August 7, 2011, 6:19 am

I have found an unpublished CSRF/file upload exploit for a CMS and was wondering if I should sell it or publish it, what would you guy's do because i'm pretty excited about the fact I might get published to exploit-db and 1337day.

Oh and I get around 27k results from google using my dork.

thethatguy - August 7, 2011, 6:22 am

I WOULD PUBLISH IT IMMEDIATELY ?

03storic - August 7, 2011, 6:30 am

I think I will; I'd shoot myself if someone else published it before me.

thethatguy - August 7, 2011, 6:37 am

(Aug 7, 2011 06:30 AM)03storic Wrote: CITE I think I will; I'd shoot myself if someone else published it before me.

WAITING IN ANTICIPATION

[img]<http://www.guysclubhouse.com/wp-content/uploads/2010/08/Waiting.jpg>[/img]

Terror32 - August 7, 2011, 6:39 am

Publish to enlarge your relations with community.

03storic - August 7, 2011, 6:45 am

I have submitted to exploit-db, until it's published im gonna use it as much as possible.

browerz - August 7, 2011, 6:46 am

Don't publish it. Use it to get as much sites as you can. Why publishing? No good in being whitehat.

And look at those intra fags, you really want him to use your exploit and then brag here?

03storic - August 7, 2011, 6:53 am

I just alway's wanted to get something published, it's a reported vulnerability with no published exploit so I think it would happened sooner or later.

i95swervin - August 7, 2011, 8:17 am nice find bro .. keep it up :)

Computer Science - August 7, 2011, 9:54 am

Information needs to be free. You find exploits for what? Yes to give a way to freeness and a way to a better shared living, release it. ?

HaLFMD5 - August 7, 2011, 9:57 am nah wtf exploit it on the wild , or if u publish , do it on Respected community not here.

or the exploit will last 10 ms,

RaZa - August 7, 2011, 9:57 am

You should just milk it for all it is worth, then publish it. Don't listen to these kiddies.

TipZ - August 7, 2011, 10:00 am

Dont publish yet first you should find as many you can and exploit it when there is not more to come for you publish it if you just publish it now you will not get anything for finding it ?

Mx. - August 7, 2011, 10:28 am if you publish it its old news the next day, all cybercrime skiddies will post there useless war defaces everywhere.

t34849 - August 7, 2011, 12:05 pm

use it on some good sites then publish it

03storic - August 9, 2011, 8:37 pm

I got ripped off -.- Turns out the exploit I thought only affected one CMS actually works on every FCKeditor on the internet. Although I was using a slightly different method to the one released by pentesters.ir but still if I had found this a few weeks ago...

That's twice I found something I didn't capitalize on in time.

Kaspersky - August 9, 2011, 8:47 pm

Publish it for your fellow comrades.

03storic - August 9, 2011, 9:29 pm

It's this exploit here - <http://www.exploit-db.com/exploits/17644/>

thenhowasphone - August 9, 2011, 10:04 pm

(Aug 7, 2011 06:19 AM)03storic Wrote: CITE I have found an unpublished CSRF/file upload exploit for a CMS and was wondering if I should sell it or publish it, what would you guy's do because i'm pretty excited about the fact I might get published to exploit-db and 1337day.

Oh and I get around 27k results from google using my dork.
submit it, not that big of a deal really.

iPwnage - August 10, 2011, 3:05 am

Don't listen to any of the leechers in this thread who tell you to share for the community.

Think about it, they haven't done anything to help you find it, and all they will do it use it and claim it as their own. I dont see why any of you think you deserve to get an exploit/vuln that someone else has spent time trying to find.

SIM-209986 - August 10, 2011, 4:55 am

What CMS?

Would be nice to know.

n31ght0 - August 10, 2011, 5:58 am keep it secret mate ?

or if you want to leake it post in profit place. make some money ?