Hello guys! Take a look at this webpage; www.easycrypter.com

[img]http://easycrypter.com/img/screenshot/screen_normal.gif[/img]

Easy Crypter 2010 - a safe and convenient program which allows you to encrypt / decrypt the single or multiple files as well as text, such as e-mail. It is used modern modification of the DES algorithm for encryption - one of the best cryptographic algorithms that approved as an official standard in many countries. Easy Crypter 2010 is easy to use and does not require any knowledge in the cryptography sphere. The program runs under Windows operating systems.

Features;

- Reliable encryption algorithm - TripleDES;
- High speed data processing;
- Simple and intuitive interface;
- The ability of simultaneous encryption / decryption of multiple files;
- A separate interface for working with the text.

Please note that there are no restrictions on files and text decoding. This means that even using an unregistered copy of the program, you can always get access to previously encrypted data. We care about our users and make your work comfortable and safe.

"Cost of the program is $9.95" - I'll give it to you for free!

More Info

General:

Easy Crypter 2010 program provides encryption and decryption of the single or multiple files as well as string (text). It is using TripleDES as a cryptographic algorithm. This is a block encryption algorithm with a symmetric key, i.e. one key is used for both encryption and decryption of data. Key length can be from 5 to 24 characters.

Easy Crypter 2010 provides reliable data protection from unauthorized access. The encryption algorithm used in the program resists all possible types of break-in: despite decades of researchers' efforts, effective attacks on it were not found. It can be used either by organizations to protect trade secrets, or by individuals to store personal information in secrecy.

System requirements:

- Personal computer running Microsoft Windows XP/Vista/7;
- It requires installation of Microsoft .NET Framework version 3 or higher for Microsoft Windows XP and Vista operating systems (included into the program distribution).

Run the Program:

To encrypt files and/or text the keys (passwords) length from 5 to 24 characters (it is recommended to use a key length of 9 or more characters) are used. The key can be any alphanumeric sequence of characters either Latin, or any national alphabet. It is using the same key that was used for encryption to decrypt files and/or text.

Easy Crypter 2010 encrypts files without changing their original name and extension, thus, for example, "test.txt" file after the encryption process will remain the same name, but can not be read without decryption. To avoid confusion, it is recommended to store encrypted files in a separate directory: for these purposes we suggest, for example, to create a "desktop" folder "Encrypted files".

File encryption

Run Easy Crypter 2010 and click "Encrypt the files" in the program window to encrypt a file. In the appeared dialog box, select desired file or group of files (when selecting multiple files, they all will be encrypted with one key) located on your computer or within a local network. Then the program will ask for a key to encrypt a file / files and its confirmation - confirmation is necessary to avoid possible typos when the key is typed in. If the key and its confirmation do not match, the program will report about this and ask to enter the key again. After successful key input the encryption process will start, the progress of the process is displayed in the bottom of the main program window. The program will display an appropriate message on encryption completion.

Alternative ways to encrypt files

In order to encrypt a file, you do not need every time to run the program. You can use one of the following ways:

1. Call the context menu by right-clicking on one file or a selected group of files and select the "Encrypt" in the list.
 2. Right-click the program icon in the system tray (see "Settings") and select "Encrypt the files".
- Either double-click the icon to start the program on the screen.

File decryption

Click "Decrypt the files" in the program window to decrypt the file. In the appeared dialog box, select desired file or group of files (selecting multiple files means that they are all encrypted with one key) located on your computer or within a local network. Then enter the key for decryption. If the chosen file/files have not been encrypted with the Easy Crypter 2010, you will receive an appropriate message and decryption process will be suspended. The process of decoding is shown in the bottom of the main program window. The program will display an appropriate message on decryption completion. If, however, for decrypting the file/files you simply entered the wrong key, the program will report this and leave the file/files in the original, encrypted form.

Be careful! If you forgot the key, which was used to encrypt your information, no one would be able to decipher it, including us.

To decrypt files, you can also call the program from the system tray or from the context menu (see “Alternative ways to encrypt files”).

Encryption and decryption of the text

To cipher or decipher the text, click “Work with the text” in the program window or right-click the program icon in the system tray and select “Work with the text”. Paste text that you want to encrypt or decrypt in the “Source text” field of the appeared window and then click “Encrypt / Decrypt”. The program will automatically determine the direction and displays the result in the “Processed text” window. Click “Copy to clipboard” to be able to paste a prepared text in the place you need.

Note that the ciphered text is framed with ancillary tags <BEGIN OF ENCRYPTED TEXT> and <END OF ENCRYPTED TEXT>. They are necessary for proper text decryption. Do not alter or remove them! The program would not be able process the text correctly without these tags.

Encryption keys:

We recommend you carefully study the information below on how create keys (passwords) to encrypt files.

As mentioned above, the program uses the encryption algorithm that is resistant to cracking or hacking. Therefore the only possible way to decrypt the data for hacker is a plunking of all possible combinations of the keys. The program uses the keys length up to 24 characters, and any characters are allowed to use: upper- and lowercase letters of the Latin and national alphabets as well as numbers. Obviously, the search of all possible combinations requires huge computer resources and it is impossible to implement it on a modern personal computer. This is affordable only for huge security service computing centers, or some research organizations.

However, the main users’ problem is the usage of the keys that represent meaningful words, i.e. the words, which can be found in the dictionary. Such word usage reducing the range of possible keys by several orders: the dictionary usually contains no more than 100 000 words; the search of all possible combinations from a dictionary becomes possible even on an ordinary PC. Any attacker starts the procedure for identifying the key with dictionary usage. Therefore, the maximum possible protection gives a random characters key.

Keys examples:

tree - unreliable key, as it is contained in the dictionary and can be selected.
vb374npz – reliable key, as it uses a random sequence of characters.

It is recommended to use a key length of 9 or more characters - the longer key is, the harder to pick it up. The minimum allowable value of the key is 5 characters, maximum is 24.

There are also a number of so-called “weak” keys the use of which is not recommended. For example, a weak key will be the keys “11” or “qq”. The program automatically determines if a weak key is entered, and does not allow encrypting data using this key, giving an appropriate warning.

TripleDES encryption algorithm:

DES (Data Encryption Standart) - one of the most popular and wide spread encryption algorithm - it is approved as an official standard by the Government of many countries.

Its improved modification TripleDES (triple algorithm DES) is used in many cryptographic systems.

This is a block encryption algorithm with a symmetric key, i.e. one key is used for both encryption and decryption of data. Key consists of 192 bits, but only 168 of them are used directly for ciphering. The remaining bits are for checking the parity: they are set in such a way that each of the 8 bytes of the key contains an odd value. Encrypted data processes in blocks of 64 bits, and each block is modified with a key in the iterative procedure which includes 16 cycles.

Despite decades of researchers' efforts, effective attacks on it were not found. The obvious method of an attack is a complete plunk of all possible keys, which requires huge computer resources. At the moment, the algorithm is not resistant to cracking or hacking.

Program Settings:

Click the menu item "File", then "Settings" to call up the program configuration window. You can specify to start Easy Crypter 2010 automatically at the operation system booting, and determine whether you want to minimize program to system tray when it is closed. Select necessary options with "ticks".

The use of unregistered copy

The use of unregistered copy permitted for educational purposes. This includes encrypted data amount restriction: you can not cipher single or multiple files with a total size over 250Kb and will not be able to encrypt the text longer than 500 characters.

Please note that there are no restrictions on files and text decoding. This means that even using an unregistered copy of the program, you can always get access to previously encrypted data. We care about our users and make your work comfortable and safe.

Hello guys! Take a look at this webpage; www.easycrypter.com

[img]http://easycrypter.com/img/screenshot/screen_normal.gif[img]

Easy Crypter 2010 - a safe and convenient program which allows you to encrypt / decrypt the single or multiple files as well as text, such as e-mail. It is used modern modification of the DES algorithm for encryption - one of the best cryptographic algorithms that approved as an official standard in many countries. Easy Crypter 2010 is easy to use and does not require any knowledge in the cryptography sphere. The program runs under Windows operating systems.

Features;

- Reliable encryption algorithm - TripleDES;
- High speed data processing;
- Simple and intuitive interface;
- The ability of simultaneous encryption / decryption of multiple files;
- A separate interface for working with the text.

Please note that there are no restrictions on files and text decoding. This means that even using an unregistered copy of the program, you can always get access to previously encrypted data. We care about our users and make your work comfortable and safe.

Normally the product is costing $6.95

And if you dont have the serial, you cant crypt more than 250KB :/

Also you cant crypt text with more than 500characters...

Download the crypter, named easycrypter.exe, and if you want the full version, comment a post, then PM me for the serial! :)

More Info

General:

Easy Crypter 2010 program provides encryption and decryption of the single or multiple files as well as string (text). It is using TripleDES as a cryptographic algorithm. This is a block encryption algorithm with a symmetric key, i.e. one key is used for both encryption and decryption of data. Key length can be from 5 to 24 characters.

Easy Crypter 2010 provides reliable data protection from unauthorized access. The encryption algorithm used in the program resists all possible types of break-in: despite decades of researchers' efforts, effective attacks on it were not found. It can be used either by organizations to protect trade secrets, or by individuals to store personal information in secrecy.

System requirements:

- Personal computer running Microsoft Windows XP/Vista/7;
- It requires installation of Microsoft. NET Framework version 3 or higher for Microsoft Windows XP and Vista operating systems (included into the program distribution).

Run the Program:

To encrypt files and/or text the keys (passwords) length from 5 to 24 characters (it is recommended to use a key length of 9 or more characters) are used. The key can be any alphanumeric sequence of characters either Latin, or any national alphabet. It is using the same key that was used for encryption to decrypt files and/or text.

Easy Crypter 2010 encrypts files without changing their original name and extension, thus, for example, "test.txt" file after the encryption process will remain the same name, but can not be read without decryption. To avoid confusion, it is recommended to store encrypted files in a separate directory: for these purposes we suggest, for example, to create a "desktop" folder "Encrypted files".

File encryption

Run Easy Crypter 2010 and click "Encrypt the files" in the program window to encrypt a file. In the appeared dialog box, select desired file or group of files (when selecting multiple files, they all will be encrypted with one key) located on your computer or within a local network. Then the program will ask for a key to encrypt a file / files and its confirmation - confirmation is necessary to avoid possible typos when the key is typed in. If the key and its confirmation do not match, the program will report about this and ask to enter the key again. After successful key input the encryption process will start, the progress of the process is displayed in the bottom of the main program window. The program will display an appropriate message on encryption completion.

Alternative ways to encrypt files

In order to encrypt a file, you do not need every time to run the program. You can use one of the following ways:

1. Call the context menu by right-clicking on one file or a selected group of files and select the "Encrypt" in the list.
2. Right-click the program icon in the system tray (see "Settings") and select "Encrypt the files". Either double-click the icon to start the program on the screen.

File decryption

Click "Decrypt the files" in the program window to decrypt the file. In the appeared dialog box, select desired file or group of files (selecting multiple files means that they are all encrypted with one key) located on your computer or within a local network. Then enter the key for decryption. If the chosen file/files have not been encrypted with the Easy Crypter 2010, you will receive an appropriate message and decryption process will be suspended. The process of decoding is shown in the bottom of the main program window. The program will display an appropriate message on decryption completion. If, however, for decrypting the file/files you simply entered the wrong key, the program will report this and leave the file/files in the original, encrypted form.

Be careful! If you forgot the key, which was used to encrypt your information, no one would be able to decipher it, including us.

To decrypt files, you can also call the program from the system tray or from the context menu (see "Alternative ways to encrypt files").

Encryption and decryption of the text

To cipher or decipher the text, click "Work with the text" in the program window or right-click the program icon in the system tray and select "Work with the text". Paste text that you want to encrypt or decrypt in the "Source text" field of the appeared window and then click "Encrypt / Decrypt". The program will automatically determine the direction and displays the result in the "Processed text" window. Click "Copy to clipboard" to be able to paste a prepared text in the place you need.

Note that the ciphered text is framed with ancillary tags <BEGIN OF ENCRYPTED TEXT> and <END OF ENCRYPTED TEXT>. They are necessary for proper text decryption. Do not alter or remove them! The program would not be able process the text correctly without these tags.

Encryption keys:

We recommend you carefully study the information below on how create keys (passwords) to encrypt files.

As mentioned above, the program uses the encryption algorithm that is resistant to cracking or hacking. Therefore the only possible way to decrypt the data for hacker is a plunking of all possible combinations of the keys. The program uses the keys length up to 24 characters, and any characters are allowed to use: upper- and lowercase letters of the Latin and national alphabets as well as numbers. Obviously, the search of all possible combinations requires huge computer resources and it is impossible to implement it on a modern personal computer. This is affordable only for huge security service computing centers, or some research organizations.

However, the main users' problem is the usage of the keys that represent meaningful words, i.e. the words, which can be found in the dictionary. Such word usage reducing the range of possible keys by several orders: the dictionary usually contains no more than 100 000 words; the search of all possible combinations from a dictionary becomes possible even on an ordinary PC. Any attacker starts the procedure for identifying the key with dictionary usage. Therefore, the maximum possible protection gives a random characters key.

Keys examples:

tree - unreliable key, as it is contained in the dictionary and can be selected.

vb374npz – reliable key, as it uses a random sequence of characters.

It is recommended to use a key length of 9 or more characters - the longer key is, the harder to pick it up. The minimum allowable value of the key is 5 characters, maximum is 24.

There are also a number of so-called "weak" keys the use of which is not recommended. For example, a weak key will be the keys "11" or "qq". The program automatically determines if a weak key is entered, and does not allow encrypting data using this key, giving an appropriate warning.

TripleDES encryption algorithm:

DES (Data Encryption Standart) - one of the most popular and wide spread encryption algorithm - it is approved as an official standard by the Government of many countries.

Its improved modification TripleDES (triple algorithm DES) is used in many cryptographic systems. This is a block encryption algorithm with a symmetric key, i.e. one key is used for both encryption and decryption of data. Key consists of 192 bits, but only 168 of them are used directly for ciphering. The remaining bits are for checking the parity: they are set in such a way that each of the 8 bytes of the key contains an odd value. Encrypted data processes in blocks of 64 bits, and each block is modified with a key in the iterative procedure which includes 16 cycles.

Despite decades of researchers' efforts, effective attacks on it were not found. The obvious method of an attack is a complete plunk of all possible keys, which requires huge computer resources. At the moment, the algorithm is not resistant to cracking or hacking.

Program Settings:

Click the menu item "File", then "Settings" to call up the program configuration window. You can specify to start Easy Crypter 2010 automatically at the operation system booting, and determine whether you want to minimize program to system tray when it is closed. Select necessary options with "ticks".

The use of unregistered copy

The use of unregistered copy permitted for educational purposes. This includes encrypted data amount restriction: you can not cipher single or multiple files with a total size over 250Kb and will not be able to encrypt the text longer than 500 characters.

Please note that there are no restrictions on files and text decoding. This means that even using an unregistered copy of the program, you can always get access to previously encrypted data. We care about our users and make your work comfortable and safe.

so from what i understand this just encrypts and decrypts , true oit makes a file FUD but ! can a person run it while its encrypted ? . this is like puting a password on a file and by oputing it it makes it FUD . whats the use of this exactly ?

Yes, it makes it FUD, depends on the file sometimes, and it's for en- and decrypts.

Doxicity - June 15, 2013, 12:27 am

Just a question, I've worked with multiple people from my helpdesk that are using this program, it seems very nice, and very nice of you to give it out for free. What I am confused about is, the crypted output, seems to always be the same size as the non-crypted output. After crypting, the file didn't even raise 1kb. From what I have seen, crypters usually add onto the size of a file? Thanks.

Hello guys! Take a look at this webpage; www.easycrypter.com

[img]http://easycrypter.com/img/screenshot/screen_normal.gif[/img]

Easy Crypter 2010 - a safe and convenient program which allows you to encrypt / decrypt the single or multiple files as well as text, such as e-mail. It is used modern modification of the DES algorithm for encryption - one of the best cryptographic algorithms that approved as an official standard in many countries. Easy Crypter 2010 is easy to use and does not require any knowledge in the cryptography sphere. The program runs under Windows operating systems.

Features;

- Reliable encryption algorithm - TripleDES;
- High speed data processing;
- Simple and intuitive interface;
- The ability of simultaneous encryption / decryption of multiple files;
- A separate interface for working with the text.

Please note that there are no restrictions on files and text decoding. This means that even using an unregistered copy of the program, you can always get access to previously encrypted data. We care about our users and make your work comfortable and safe.

"Cost of the program is $9.95" - I'll give it to you for free!

More Info

General:

Easy Crypter 2010 program provides encryption and decryption of the single or multiple files as well as string (text). It is using TripleDES as a cryptographic algorithm. This is a block encryption algorithm with a symmetric key, i.e. one key is used for both encryption and decryption of data. Key length can be from 5 to 24 characters.

Easy Crypter 2010 provides reliable data protection from unauthorized access. The encryption algorithm used in the program resists all possible types of break-in: despite decades of researchers' efforts, effective attacks on it were not found. It can be used either by organizations to protect trade secrets, or by individuals to store personal information in secrecy.

System requirements:

- Personal computer running Microsoft Windows XP/Vista/7;
- It requires installation of Microsoft .NET Framework version 3 or higher for Microsoft Windows XP and Vista operating systems (included into the program distribution).

Run the Program:

To encrypt files and/or text the keys (passwords) length from 5 to 24 characters (it is recommended to use a key length of 9 or more characters) are used. The key can be any alphanumeric sequence of characters either Latin, or any national alphabet. It is using the same key that was used for encryption to decrypt files and/or text.

Easy Crypter 2010 encrypts files without changing their original name and extension, thus, for example, "test.txt" file after the encryption process will remain the same name, but can not be read without decryption. To avoid confusion, it is recommended to store encrypted files in a separate directory: for these purposes we suggest, for example, to create a "desktop" folder "Encrypted files".

File encryption

Run Easy Crypter 2010 and click "Encrypt the files" in the program window to encrypt a file. In the appeared dialog box, select desired file or group of files (when selecting multiple files, they all will be encrypted with one key) located on your computer or within a local network. Then the program will ask for a key to encrypt a file / files and its confirmation - confirmation is necessary to avoid possible typos when the key is typed in. If the key and its confirmation do not match, the program will report about this and ask to enter the key again. After successful key input the encryption process will start, the progress of the process is displayed in the bottom of the main program window. The program will display an appropriate message on encryption completion.

Alternative ways to encrypt files

In order to encrypt a file, you do not need every time to run the program. You can use one of the following ways:

1. Call the context menu by right-clicking on one file or a selected group of files and select the "Encrypt" in the list.
2. Right-click the program icon in the system tray (see "Settings") and select "Encrypt the files". Either double-click the icon to start the program on the screen.

File decryption

Click "Decrypt the files" in the program window to decrypt the file. In the appeared dialog box, select desired file or group of files (selecting multiple files means that they are all encrypted with one key) located on your computer or within a local network. Then enter the key for decryption. If the chosen file/files have not been encrypted with the Easy Crypter 2010, you will receive an appropriate message and decryption process will be suspended. The process of decoding is shown in the bottom of the main program window. The program will display an appropriate message on decryption completion. If, however, for decrypting the file/files you simply entered the wrong key, the program will report this and leave the file/files in the original, encrypted form.

Be careful! If you forgot the key, which was used to encrypt your information, no one would be able to decipher it, including us.

To decrypt files, you can also call the program from the system tray or from the context menu (see "Alternative ways to encrypt files").

Encryption and decryption of the text

To cipher or decipher the text, click "Work with the text" in the program window or right-click the program icon in the system tray and select "Work with the text". Paste text that you want to encrypt or decrypt in the "Source text" field of the appeared window and then click "Encrypt / Decrypt". The program will automatically determine the direction and displays the result in the "Processed text" window. Click "Copy to clipboard" to be able to paste a prepared text in the place you need.

Note that the ciphered text is framed with ancillary tags <BEGIN OF ENCRYPTED TEXT> and <END OF ENCRYPTED TEXT>. They are necessary for proper text decryption. Do not alter or remove them! The program would not be able to process the text correctly without these tags.

Encryption keys:

We recommend you carefully study the information below on how to create keys (passwords) to encrypt files.

As mentioned above, the program uses the encryption algorithm that is resistant to cracking or hacking. Therefore the only possible way to decrypt the data for a hacker is a plunking of all possible combinations of the keys. The program uses the keys length up to 24 characters, and any characters are allowed to use: upper- and lowercase letters of the Latin and national alphabets as well as numbers. Obviously, the search of all possible combinations requires huge computer resources and it is impossible to implement it on a modern personal computer. This is affordable only for huge security service computing centers, or some research organizations.

However, the main users' problem is the usage of the keys that represent meaningful words, i.e. the words, which can be found in the dictionary. Such word usage reduces the range of possible keys by several orders: the dictionary usually contains no more than 100 000 words; the search of all possible combinations from a dictionary becomes possible even on an ordinary PC. Any attacker starts the procedure for identifying the key with dictionary usage. Therefore, the maximum possible protection gives a random characters key.

Keys examples:

tree - unreliable key, as it is contained in the dictionary and can be selected.

vb374npz – reliable key, as it uses a random sequence of characters.

It is recommended to use a key length of 9 or more characters - the longer key is, the harder to pick it up. The minimum allowable value of the key is 5 characters, maximum is 24.

There are also a number of so-called "weak" keys the use of which is not recommended. For example, a weak key will be the keys "11" or "qq". The program automatically determines if a weak key is entered, and does not allow encrypting data using this key, giving an appropriate warning.

TripleDES encryption algorithm:

DES (Data Encryption Standard) - one of the most popular and wide spread encryption algorithm - it is approved as an official standard by the Government of many countries.

Its improved modification TripleDES (triple algorithm DES) is used in many cryptographic systems. This is a block encryption algorithm with a symmetric key, i.e. one key is used for both encryption and decryption of data. Key consists of 192 bits, but only 168 of them are used directly for ciphering. The remaining bits are for checking the parity: they are set in such a way that each of the 8 bytes of the key contains an odd value. Encrypted data processes in blocks of 64 bits, and each block is modified with a key in the iterative procedure which includes 16 cycles.

Despite decades of researchers' efforts, effective attacks on it were not found. The obvious method of an attack is a complete plunk of all possible keys, which requires huge computer resources. At the moment, the algorithm is not resistant to cracking or hacking.

Program Settings:

Click the menu item "File", then "Settings" to call up the program configuration window. You can specify to start Easy Crypter 2010 automatically at the operation system booting, and determine whether you want to minimize program to system tray when it is closed. Select necessary options with "ticks".

The use of unregistered copy

The use of unregistered copy permitted for educational purposes. This includes encrypted data amount restriction: you can not cipher single or multiple files with a total size over 250Kb and will not be able to encrypt the text longer than 500 characters.

Please note that there are no restrictions on files and text decoding. This means that even using an unregistered copy of the program, you can always get access to previously encrypted data. We care about our users and make your work comfortable and safe.

I believe the crypt is used so you can't open/see the file until it is decrypted.
