Is it possible to see some of your work? I don't need anything right now but I might at some point.

I don't have anything saved on this computer, but PM me what you need and I'll write a paragraph on it for free.

Cerebro - September 9, 2011, 1:24 pm

250 words is not one page, you can fit more on that.

All my homework is done in size 10 in Talhoma. Also with no gay pictures.

MLD - September 9, 2011, 1:26 pm

Dude, I had a 6,000 word essay due today, wish you would of posted this earlier >.>

If you write it by hand it's 250 words a side, of course I won't be doing this by hand but normally teachers expect it in this way. Anyhow it's $20 for 250 words in essays.

Dread Pirate Roberts - September 9, 2011, 9:37 pm

Looks like a great offer. I can personally vouch for Zeon's translating skills.

The prices are quite cheap bearing in mind the huge amount of work involved.

DaL33T - September 10, 2011, 6:20 am

Don't you go to school yourself?

I hope you're kidding, just try and hand an essay translated with Google Translator to your teacher and tell me how it went.

Oh, I never used it before for a essay. Sorry about that then, I wasn't flaming, just asking.

Zeon - September 12, 2011, 11:45 am

Yeah you can't really do much with automatic translators.

g0dspeak - September 12, 2011, 1:41 pm

Well.. at least it's not a grammar service, already spotted several extremely horrid grammatical errors..

I exaggerated a bit, only one, but yeah.

I honestly don't see how that's an error; if another member can confirm this I'll change it.

It is a grammatical error, and someone offering a service such as this should know that.

It is correct both ways, like I said if any other member confirms this I'll change it.

No, not really. If you were in America and put something like that on a paper, your teacher would smack you back to Spain.

I thought so ohaider, I thought so ?

D??M! - September 12, 2011, 11:27 pm

Technically ohaider is correct. You were grammatically incorrect in that line.

(3 years into an English major)

Zeon - September 13, 2011, 1:16 pm

You can say it both ways, it's written correctly.

Orgy - September 13, 2011, 2:41 pm

Actually, you're using the wrong tense of "speak" ohaider is correct.

Zeon - September 14, 2011, 10:30 am

No, I speak English since I was 3 is correct.

Joshh - September 14, 2011, 6:04 pm

Just letting you know ohaider is actually correct.

Sorry, I just found the "myself" part of that sentence pretty ironic, especially with people questioning your ability to type English. It also was bugging me. Good luck with your sales.

Edit.

"No, I speak English since I was 3 is correct."

That's wrong, it should be : "I've spoken English since I was 3 YEARS OLD" You see, 3 doesn't have to represent your age, and in university you wouldn't get away with that, I'm sure.

Zeon - September 14, 2011, 11:14 pm

"nor do I see any myself" is also correct, seriously, cut the crap guys.

Corbow6 - September 17, 2011, 7:17 pm

Seriously, you're wrong.

"I'm a native Spaniard and speak English since I was 3."

The phrase "since I was" is in the past tense. However, "I'm a native Spaniard and speak English" is in the present. Switching tense in a sentence isn't a problem so long as you do it between separate phrases.

In conclusion, we learn that you should say, "I'm a native Spaniard and I also speak English," or "I'm a native Spaniard, and I've spoken English since the age of three. "

I won't nitpick, but using the numerical version of three is wrong as well. Also notice how the aforementioned sentence is worded differently. The reason for this is the repetition of "I" which is a common mistake for kids your age.

?us?ness - September 17, 2011, 7:19 pm

Prices are wayyy to high lol.

But never the less a good thread.

- 1) The repetition of "I" is not a grammar mistake at all.
- 2) Using "3" instead of "three" isn't a grammar mistake either.

Seriously if you guys are going to stir shit up I'm just going to report your posts.

1. You misused conduplicatio which happens to be a legitimate English mechanism. Therefore, such an error is seen as grammatically incorrect.

2. I'll just go ahead and leave this here;
<http://www.grammarbook.com/numbers/numbers.asp>

Next time you want to act like you know a subject it might be imperative to actually learn it. I also fail to see how we are trying to "stir shit up" as you so eloquently phrased it. Is it wrong to advise other users that such a service may be bad to purchase?
