Http://Dayo.tk

Dear Hack Forum members,

Have you ever thought about using a search engine that would search Google, Ask, Bing, Yahoo all at the same time?

Well Dayo Search is a meta search engine meaning it does just that!

We have been working on this and getting your opinions for quite a while.

We find it as a pretty good success so far.

We like your ideas and suggestions and take them in for YOUR better search. If you have any Name suggestions, feel free to tell us! We are looking for a new name. :)

We hope that you have fun using our free search engine and find everything you're looking for.

Why the .tk domain? Why don't you get a paid one?

Most likely, if we were to try to buy those domains he would highly overprice them. But Dayo is the choosen name that has been selected for a good ammount of time.

Some people doesn't like google exactly. So this is a nice alternative to it, for the same results.

wolfaaron - October 20, 2011, 8:51 pm

So does your search engine crawl websites? Or how do you index things?

biasa199 - October 21, 2011, 12:59 pm

(Oct 20, 2011 08:51 PM)wolfaaron Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) So does your search engine crawl websites? Or how do you index things?

We have our own special methods to find items. It's literally almost as accurate as Google, Bing, Ask, Yahoo, etc.,.

SeriousShell - October 21, 2011, 1:40 pm

Your search engine selects information from the crawled website in priority to anything else(Might be the only thing). You also have to include the most viewed by keyword (ex: what's clicked on the most when I search google), give it an integer, and average that out with the keywords. Another feature is direct searching. An example would be if I'm searching for google, then why is google plus the first thing that pops up and not just google?

Edit: It's the same thing as bing. Just search at both sites and you'll see the same results

How come images takes you to a uploading page instead of a actual search? But video's has a search? Also while using the video search it only shows the title of the video with no thumbnail. I'd highly suggest getting a paid domain, .tk just doesn't look professional at all and many who don't know what is is may be hesitant to visit the site. Also I think you should work on the visuals also it looks really plain. Just my thoughts.

Toph Beifong - December 7, 2011, 12:36 am this is very good but i have a few suggestions - when you are linking off your site e.g. to the twitter page, use target="_blank" so people spend more time on dayo. Also the search isnt centralised for me, not major but just lowers the quality i think.

Spoiler \(Click to View\)

[img]http://choopd.com/?h=4b90304239686f6eef129a3ca24d2cac[/img]

Only slightly to the left, nothing major.

Also when you search, and it tells you the response time, make it so it says home many results were found as well.

Anyway - good luck on this.

Strategist - December 7, 2011, 3:06 pm

Damn, first of all I will give you credit. Not many people can make their own Search Engine. That itself deserves recognition!

Tips:

- Search time is slow anyway to fix it?

- Scrap the .tk get an actual domain (.tk is blacklisted all around)
- When I click the Images link, I expect to see an image search not an image upload?!?
- The support link is broken

(Nov 25, 2011 11:56 AM)biasa199 Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) Everybody says that. So does Bing and Ask, along with all the other search engines out there.

Give the dude some credit! Creating a search engine from the bottom up is a task fit for the few.

biasa199 - December 7, 2011, 3:12 pm

Quote:- Search time is slow anyway to fix it?

This is due to our CDN. If you refresh the page after the search results come up, trust me, it will be faster than the first load.

EDIT: Fixed the support issue. Thanks for telling me.

EDIT: Removing the CDN. It's slowing us down, like you said. Not only by a few ms, but by hundreds.

There is no difference. Same goes for Dayo.

Everyone of the company's you have listed are multi million/billion dollar company's they have the ability to find space in the market as they can pump large quantities of money on development and marketing.

(If you like I can go into more depth of what each search engine offers which is unique to them I will be more than happy to do so.)

In addition each search engines have multiple dedicated servers ensuring maximum up time and to ensure they can handle traffic whether it be unique or malicious.

I presume DAYO was created at the use of a search engine script downloadable on the internet If the case I saw no signs of credits given to anyone in particular and if the website was successful it would be bound to bite you in the arse later.

However I suppose the biggest question is why?

Why should me or anyone other user on the internet change from Google to Dayo what can Dayo offer that Google cannot. If nothing then I'm sorry but why the need to change?

Of course you can disregard the above I have no reason to dispute that. Sometimes it is better to have experienced trial and failure then not to have tried at all.

biasa199 - December 15, 2011, 6:09 pm

@h-boy It's a fun alternative to Google, Ask, Bing, and Yahoo.

The fact that it searches multiple search engines at one time.

Not only using Google, it uses Bing etc.

Allowing more search options in the same time.

But I prefer ecosia. They donate money when you search, and their site looks better IMO. Keep working on it though! Maybe make a toolbar.

I don't have any ads to gain ANY revenue from. I intend to keep it that way. We've been a non-profit ever since I opened it in 2010.

Anyways, that's not a bad idea. I might implement something like that. Where after every "x" amount of searches, we donate $10 to WWF.

I do like the fact that it has 0 ads. But honestly, having 0 ads won't help much. People won't use the engine just because it has 0 ads. You have to come up with something clever to make people want to use it. With Google and Bing it's easy since they're large corporations. But for you, you should come up with something to make people search.

Some dude created a black search engine, all he did as make a custom Google search engine and said it saves energy since its black.

Now he's raking in boat loads of dough. I would come up with something like this.

I have a porn search engine which gets tons of traffic. I got 15,000+ searches in a week. All I did was make a custom engine out of Google and added a bunch of porn sites to it.

In my opinion if we make a website with money off the mind, it'll be "mind-free surfing."

Wouldn't you rather go to a "charity" website then a "give me your money" style website?

Yup. That's why I use Ecosia over Google/Bing/yahoo.

They donate money for every search+if you click on the yellow links and buy something from them you earn money for charity, and on top of that they run their servers on green energy.

It's great to be giving to charity.

If we get revenue we'll donate money and more time to charity.

I just hate to have a donate-to-charity button or something similar at first.

We've said in multiple comments that all the Dayo domains are taken.

Besides, we can always get free domains from our supporters..

I'm just wondering how you accomplished it to search multiple engines at the same time, and how do you combine those results?

~Haskabab

Nugat - June 28, 2012, 9:16 pm

@haskabab It pretty much looks through them, seeing which ones are duplicate, and combines the said duplicated results into one result. Results that don't appear in all engines (unique) are displayed too.

barricas - July 21, 2012, 6:10 pm

I like it and it is also fast. As already said you can style more the search results, individual results need to be more noticed.

For example:

Result 1

Result 2

Result 3

It is hard to see here 1 end and 2 starts. You see my idea?

Nugat - July 21, 2012, 7:49 pm

I think I do. Do you mean making some sort of a space to tell where result 1 ends and result 2 begins?

Webmasters - July 30, 2012, 8:43 am

Maybe we could add a line at the lest stretching over or so?

Like 3-4 inches and it will symbolize the end of the last one.

Linux. - July 30, 2012, 10:16 pm

Make a 404, type page.. or do a PHP header redirect to homepage...

Toph Beifong - July 31, 2012, 2:45 am there are a number of things you need to sort, for example do a check when searching:

```
Code if(!empty($searchBar){
//run code

This will avoid this stupid thing - <http://search.dayo.tk/search.php?q=&x=84&y=13&start=0>

Also as others have said add error pages like 404 etc.

And one more thing:

Why dont you get a decent layout for the images and videos, the images are all bunched right together and so it just looks unclean.

By the way, the free .tk domain is a scam. They will wait for your website to get a certain amount of traffic and then switch the site to a page full of advertisements. Just a heads up.

Dayo is also hooked up to the domain : <http://www.dayosearch.com/>

I've had this domain for 3 years. No problems so far. We get a really decent amount of traffic.

I've had problems with .tk due to some misunderstandings, but overall the support team is OK and they fixed the problems immediately.

I can vouch for dot.tk. They are a legit company. They will, however, take your domain if you abuse their TOS.

I do like the way you placed to search, images, web, and all of those buttons. I also like the news feed and the features you added. It looks like a portal search page. Not bad for creativeness.

You're such a troll. That design looks like crap. I've thought of adding a portal for news, I really have, but just never got around to do it. Plus I couldn't really picture how the Dayo logo would fit in there.

I understand the theme, but just bashing the idea shows your immaturity. Results are more accurate, thanks to the multiple engines we use. I know we're not the only search engine that does this. If you looked up "meta search engines" you would get hundreds upon hundreds of results.

Again, nobody in their right mind would index 3 billion sites. I've tried. I only got to indexing 2 million, and my DB was already 10-10.5GB large. At that size, your DB starts to load slower. It impacts performance.

One thing I don't like is I cannot go back to home page from the search results page.

You should make it so when you're on the results page, you can click on the dayo image to go back to the main home page.

Another thing that I don't like is the little blue bar at the top of the results page.

It looks odd. You should replace that blue bar with a little grey bar. That way it'd match the main dayo home page at least.

The rest really isn't that bad.

At first when I saw this project, i'll be honest. I thought it was crap.

But now that I look at it, it looks pretty dam good. I love how pretty much every website has an image thumbnail.

Image searching could be a bit better, you should make it so it either shows more images, or loads down just like google.

Video searching also needs a revamp. You should make video searching so it loads down as well like google.

News searching is fine the way it is right now.

Another thing is, get a better writer. When I clicked on this "We have created a new design, and we think you will love it. Read more..."

All it said was

Code Dayo v3 has been upgraded to v4! We have added extra abilities able to be carried out by our search system, along with a fresh new design. You're free to stay and try this new design, or keep using the old one. We'll give you the choice of being able to until September 31st. Please send any feedback, questions, or concerns to support@dayo.tk

This gives no details, and it looks like you don't even care.

You need to put more effort into writing.

Example

Code You've probably noticed already Dayo.tk has went through some major changes. We have completely revamped our layout from the ground up. We believe our old layout was a bit old and outdated, so that's why we decided to spice it up a bit.

The new layout has already proven to show improvements. Our pages are loading noticeably faster, as we have compressed our CSS codes.

If you feel the new layout is a bit to much for you, we're giving you the choice to keep using the old one. Although all access to Dayo v3 will be discontinued on September 31st.

Feel free to send us your feedback and thoughts on the new layout.

I wrote it actually. I was in a bit of a rush, and I probably should edit it to make it more "user friendly." I guess that's just my writing style.

For the threat detected page, we have a list of around 500k URLs that have been detected as malware that we have to process. So while we do that, it would probably be good to have a filler there. When a threat is detected though, a red box will say that the site is blocked.

Thanks for your input. I'll definitely take it into consideration.

to narrow the number of results even more. Also display the number of results that got returned so people no weather they need to narrow their search query a bit more, for all i know my search may return 10 pages or 10,000,000

How many people actually look at how many results are returned by a search engine? Only thing it would do is add more to how long it takes our page to load. Plus it would consume more resources imho. I'll sleep on it though.

People look at the number of results when there are only a few returned, it's all to do with narrowing down what you're looking for, if there are 10,000 returned then you may need to continue to narrow your results with a better query, whereas if 25 are returned then you just look through the pages.

That's why I would add page numbers, it just aids people when they are specifically looking for something.

I've never stumbled across a case where somebody actually cared for it. People nowadays, I think, don't care really, as long as they find what they're looking for.

Dear Hack Forum members,

Have you ever thought about using a search engine that would search Google, Ask, Bing, Yahoo all at the same time?

Well Dayo Search is a meta search engine meaning it does just that!

We have been working on this and getting your opinions for quite a while.

We find it as a pretty good success so far.

We like your ideas and suggestions and take them in for YOUR better search.

We hope that you have fun using our free search engine and find everything you're looking for.

I know this applies to very few people but it helps get around blocked search words, for example at school. They block certain words so you cannot look them up, like proxy. Why does everyone hate this site? It returns a query in 0.6 seconds where Google does it in 0.2.
People love alternates that offer pre-existing services without being bombarded by ads, and Dayo has a cached image next to each result. Pretty good if you ask me. Only recommendation is that you make the Dayo above the search box interactive. Ie, hover over it and it fades into green, or dark pink. Just a suggestion.

Agreed, when you take on board what dayo is and what the team have done its a good accomplishment. They have made a search engine that displays information in a good order, they have cached images, its fast and has no ad's. Mansin - October 15, 2012, 4:54 pm

So we all know you used a script.

What have you actually done to make it your own? Other than changing the design.

EDIT: Just some ideas.

SafeSearch feature, filter adult content from your search results, but have the option to turn it off.

You have a lot of free space on the homepage, maybe have the option to create account & have just under the search button a list of your most popular searches.

try to picture that? i have and i think it's quite good + the reason i said "create account" is in case someone else uses dayo & sees the list there, you know i wouldn't want them seeing what i search:D

I didn't know the guy bought that script. Chillax. Dayo v4.5 is coming soon. So if you have any suggestions, speak up now before I start its production.

The web results I actually did make. If everybody is going to be so picky, I can redo the images, video, and news design if it'll make you guys happy.

Mansin - October 15, 2012, 5:30 pm

What's going to be different about 4.5? I one other thing, I think it looks quite dull, know what i mean? maybe change the navbar at the top to black and take the shadow away to make it more tidy & change the font on the navbar aswell.

Alright. I don't know if I should redo the design as a whole or just do those. I've had feedback about the navbar font as well.

v4.5 will contain a different ranking algorithm and higher anonymity.

Mansin - October 15, 2012, 5:39 pm

Not a full redesign, there not much you can really do.

That's why most search engines are full white with the search box, buttons, logo.

Clean the colors a little more that's all i can think of & maybe add some resource links that are helpful!

So you have done alot of backend stuff then?

Yeah. I constantly update the backend portion of the site. Load balancers and extra servers help keep things moving. :)

Yeah, along with tens of thousands of dollars to start.

If you truly think about it, they bounced off others codes as well.. They had the idea and incorporated it, and made a great success from it.

Everyone gets help from someone, on another note we've actually considered coding a search engine from scratch. Just got to get around $50,000 first for a good data center.

cRunctiMe - October 16, 2012, 2:16 pm

I wouldn't go and spend 50,000 on something you don't know will be successful. I think you guys should start small. Build up your site/functionality/design/programming and then when you feel like you have enough traffic to continue on then you can expand...

And yeh they had ideas from other things but they took those things and designed their own systems :P

That's what I mean. There's a lot of things that people don't get about search engines. Every link on them takes more memory, so if we started we'd have to manually add around a million links. We've got numerous dedicated servers for Dayo as it is.

Webmasters, I have a suggestion for you which is fairly easy to achieve, and would make many people happier;

Try to implement a button to switch from a white background and black text to a black background and a white or soft gray text. It would be easier to browse the web at night or in a dark room, just like <http://www.blackle.com/> does.

These searches are trending topics due to the season (ex. Thanksgiving and Christmas.)

Looks like a neat website. I remember I tried something like this waay back, never finished it.

A few suggestions though.

Make the thumbnails optional (More results per page?)

Like google, use page numbers. (So instead of pressing "next page", you can skip to ie. page 5)

Color the links also like google, blue or any other color. Makes it a bit easier to view.

Just my 2 cents.

Website loaded really slow.

Results did not show up whatever I tried to search for.

Back to Google.

I'm not trying to be harsh - but to succeed as a search engine it's not all about your results, it's about the reliability of results being there & the speed in which I can get to them.

Nuclear - December 7, 2012, 4:43 pm

There's an ongoing DDoS attack @53XG. We're working on it.

Nerdi - December 7, 2012, 6:45 pm

Oh okay gotcha. I've never had a problem with Google though. You're a search engine. Saying oh ddos attack, sorry! is not really a good excuse for why a site based on reliability and speed is unreliable and slow.

Sure, popular sites have some downtime...But hell man, your ddos attack has been going on for days now - invest in some protection & security at least.

Nuclear - December 7, 2012, 6:50 pm

What are you talking about? It was only ongoing for a couple of hours.

The downtime on Monday had nothing to do with a DDoS attack. It was a server update that went wrong. We do have DDoS protection on site.

Nerdi - December 7, 2012, 6:55 pm

Also you do realize that Google, Bing, Yahoo, etc all show similar results right? there was a study done about that and things are very similar in each search engine. just saying. It was a little while ago, but it was discovered that some search engines were actually stealing results.

Therefor one search engine that searches all of them at the same time really just searches one...Thus it's just another search engine right?

That's the thing, it looks like Google yet searches so many other engines at the same time.

I somewhat agree to Zektai. I like the search engine, and I don't really have much information about search engines, but you need to have some sort of exclusivity. Some sort of pull you know?

It would be considered bias if we altered rankings of certain sites, don't you think?

Probably not, Google and Bing do the exact same thing, so it would make sense to put your site at the top of the search for "Dayo".

And I think it would be nicer if you added some sort of site navigation to the front page, before you begin searching for things. That way they can find what they want a little quicker, but again, just my thoughts.

Dankrupt - April 6, 2014, 7:29 pm

it's not even his search engine. He won't even earn anything worth at least a dime from this, and it won't become anything. Look at reality.

Hmm.. Might be the node then. Noticing this issue as well. Gonna check it out and get it back up and running!

I'm dealing with this issue ATM, seeing what's going on.

NoScript - January 18, 2015, 7:52 pm

Got a Error 522 Connection Timed Out Error...

Also try to get a paid domain it will be a lot better.

Yeah, working on the VPS atm. All paid Dayo domains are taken.

You could always change the name of the site :|

Webmasters - January 19, 2015, 4:53 pm

Fixing the issue right now, someone tried to backdoor the server. Have re-installed it, doing some different security measures as we speak.

Dayo will live on!

420 Blaze It - January 19, 2015, 4:55 pm

Quite interesting, but I don't like the name of Dayo though.

I like the name, but that .tk extension makes me leave the website instantly.

Yeah we had dayosearch.com, but no-one would use it. Might think of a shorter name sometime.

If someone gives me a good idea for a name, you may have a search engine named after you!

Not that creating a search engine is a bad idea. But to get with it to somewhere will be kinda hard. There are tons of searching engines while maybe google is the most used one's followed by all this bing,yahoo,etc..

Just would be hard to beat them in any way. To get traffic as well.

Anyway I can only wish you luck?

You've gotta think, once people realize that our search engine will search them all at once for best results, it'll all change!

Webbo ? Anyway I don't see anything bad in Dayo. It's pretty much a nice name according to me. Yet you are the one in charge of this so it's all up to you Hmm Webbo sounds familiar actually.. Where do I know that from.. Hmm thank you for the suggestion!

Dayo is back up! Come check us out. :)

Why in the word are you still using a .tk?

Start using something legit and I might start using it.

Because don't have any good name suggestions in mind, have been using the same name since 11' and all TLD's are taken.

I'm honestly surprised you've had it that long. Most cases I've seen, after 1 year they hold the .tk domains for ransom until the 'owner' pays a ridiculous rate to get it back.

There are tons of new domains, try one of those. Play off of them, and see what works. But, as you are doing now, keep it short.

Good luck. ?

Yeah, we've always renewed the .tk, if you know what you're doing it's free. If we got a good name suggestion we'd possibly use it. Honestly, with the way domains are, the short ones left suck..

Webmasters - January 24, 2015, 7:02 am

Come check out Dayo! Feel free to give any suggestions, if you feel the domain name isn't good, feel free to suggest a name!

Austaischious - January 25, 2015, 3:55 am

I like the idea, however there's plenty of services that currently do this, if I was the author, I would add Baidu, and Yandex to the list.

Edit:

Also HTTPS is a sure way to get more traffic.

Yeah HTTPS is in future plans, not wanting to put HTTPS on a .tk though, defeats the purpose.

Really, how come? now enough activity.

And what's the chances of it being released as opensource?

Was having some issues hosting with the VPS, some strange things were happening.

May do in the future, that's not decided yet.
