Thread: Nathan72389's vb.net source pack \(50+ projects\)

nathan72389 - December 2, 2009, 8:40 am

Well, these are a collection of my old sources.

some of them may not be the best quality around, but like i said, they are old, some of these were my first few projects, others are some that came later on.

there are no EXE files included, you will have to compile them all yourself.

all were written in Visual Studio Pro 2008 (vb.net)

there are over 50+ projects there, all should work fine out of the box, however, there are a few that i never completed. Also, as many of you know, i like to drink, so there may be some that make no sense what so ever.

no, im not mirroring it.

just wait till later, try again, or look for a server that will d/l it for you.

im helping you with the sources, its the least you can do to pop off 1 RS point in my favor.

@ everyone else that bitching... Get Over It! Thats Life! Be Happy someone is sharing something, instead of being a greedy ass wipe. OR... I could just go and google a bunch of shit and throw my name on it, and release that.

be glad you have the opportunity to get it, and stop bitching about the way you get it.

but b4 you go accusing ppl of infecting something you should post some proof. and no, that virus scan dont mean anything. almost 1/2 of the sources in there are for binders / crypters / and other tools. so DUH ofc its going to pop a few detections.
