- They host it for you!

- So there is no need to go out and have to upload your files to a host , this is probally one of the best JDB's

- out on the market right now!

- Great Support

- You can contact one of the two owners on MSN and they will help you out ASAP .

- Great GUI

- This product has probally one of the best GUI's of all the JDB I have ever used . It is simple and easy to use yet efficeint .

Meh, we may consider it. The only reason it's a monthly charge is because it's extremely cheap for whats provided (Hosting ect.). Also because we have to pay for hosting every month we can't guarantee lifetime.

Edit: I'm online and ready for sales if anyone is interested! Hit me up with a PM.

A java applet message comes up, and if you want an Adobe Flash Player installer message can pop up but that's optional. A JDB can't be silent because it's a java applet for a reason, but there's ways to make it look more convincing ;).

Dude by it self your only paying 10 dollars for both a month considering if you think about it you could make that money back fast if you use the JDB the right way.

Mr. Gotti - December 23, 2011, 8:18 pm

Dan, The price for the source code/files of the system would be alot more pricey which would ruin the purpose of offering it because it wouldn't be equal to what we can offer by hosting the files ourselves.

Just got into JDB so this comes with everything....so all you need is your crypted server?

Mr. Gotti - December 23, 2011, 8:26 pm

Correct FaDeZ, You just copy your crypter server direct link into the settings and your done if you wanted to be.

you can make your money back on anything. What i'm trying to say is I use free hosting from that 000 web host and over a span of 1 year i never had down time. And you hosting the files.. hmm theres only 2 files that you need to upload the jar and index. it's really not hard to upload them by your self with your own host. I rather pay 25 bucks for a lifetime jdb, then 10 dollars every month.

Your just approaching a different crowd of people who don't even know what ftp means thats it.

on the other hand it looks very good, It would be nice if you can put up more screenshots and what not.

We're not just offering the `jar file, and html`. We're giving customers the complete setup. We offer hosting, we constantly update the jar file to make sure it's FUD, our new system has on the fly jar signing and generation for the most unique jar file, we make backups every 24 hours of everything to make sure nothing is loss in case of a host change or ddos attack, and the website cloner. Not to mention that we're going to be offering a lot more in the future including an online crypter for your server so you don't even have to do anything. If you can utilize the system well it's basically an AIO spreading system.

(Dec 24, 2011 09:28 AM)Biz Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) It does look pretty nice. How many sales have you made?

We've made about 2 or 3 sales.

Mr. Gotti - December 24, 2011, 11:23 am

@Dan - If you took time to read through the features and view the screenshots, you can clearly see this is no regular DriveBy.

Lysergic - December 25, 2011, 2:29 pm

We're updating our hosting servers to a linux vps today or tommorow. This means we'll be implementing our on the fly jar generation and signing system so you can have the most unique jar files. We'll also be adding an automatic payment system!

I will purchase tonight, on my phone at a boring Christmas party, so when I get back I will purchase

Do you provide the urls as well? What kind of domains? I have yet been able to infect someone with a JDB so I am wondering how realistic it looks when you send the link to the victim to infect? Can you give me some examples please?

Thanks, if support is there then I am buying tonight in a few hours

Your original infection link would look something like this

Code `http://OURDOMAINREMOVED/jdb/inf.php?id=`

`ID REMOVED FOR SAFETY OF USERS`

You could simply go to dot.tk to mask our domain and make it look like:

Code `http://cams.freewebcams.tk/webcams/Lesly_Lust/webcam.php`

The example above would be if you setup a domain such as this with Dot.tk

Code `freewebcams.tk`

You can change anything in the .tk links before and after the original link.

If you need anymore help feel free to ask.

So the deal is I send you the encrypted FUD server.exe and you create the JAR and Index file and give me a hyperlink to spread? I pay you $10 a month and you make sure the JAR stays FUD. Is that essentially correct?

dan7123 - December 25, 2011, 5:46 pm

No sir, You pay us, we give you a login to our system and all you do is upload your encrypted server to a direct link and put in into your settings and your ready to spread.

(Dec 25, 2011 06:46 PM)dan7123 Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) U can only host one domain? What I I want 2 different domains and I want 2 different jdb's

We can help you point your own domain to our servers if you would like that, We currently have 2 domain access points. Our Jar file is changed every day with a 50-75% unique file, Guaranteed 100% FUD. There is no need to have multiple JDBs.

Lysergic - December 25, 2011, 5:58 pm

(Dec 25, 2011 06:39 PM)daGazaman Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) So the deal is I send you the encrypted FUD server.exe and you create the JAR and Index file and give me a hyperlink to spread? I pay you $10 a month and you make sure the JAR stays FUD. Is that essentially correct?

No this is all done through a panel that we've made to make things easier for you. What you can do is clone a website of your choice (Something that looks convincing that may require a java applet to run like a video) and we put the drive-by on the cloned website automatically, then you send someone your infection link which has your server binded to a jar file and infect them. The JAR is also kept FUD by us.

Mr. Gotti - December 25, 2011, 6:06 pm

Following what Xtee said, For instance if you copied a Youtube video link, your video would completely work and everything and include the JDB into the page, which would be even more realistic for your traffic.

daGazaman - December 25, 2011, 6:11 pm

Works for me. I'm ready to try it out. PM me with your PP particulars and I will take care of the payment. Can I get a discount if I prepay for 3 months?

We allow users to forward their own domains to our servers, there is no way to take the code from our server however you can set your domain to mask our directory and what not to make it look like whatever you want. Also with the iframe system you could take your Iframe code generated from our service and add it to your own personal site and have the same effect as uploading the files to your own server.

It is in the HTML code however it is all encrypted, so it is not viewable.

Also, a viewer would only have 1 chance to attempt at debugging it because once they leave the infection page for the first time they won't be able to view it again until you reset your statistics

I don't quite understand what you mean, of course to someone who has knowledge of encryption it could be decrypted but generally you won't come across many depending on where/how you are spreading. Also, Good to here i'll be awaiting you ;).

Not currently right now but we offer all those services essentially. We have a built in website cloner in the panel along with remote jar creation and other things. We may offer a service soon where we can generate and clone a website for a sepearte price from the panel along with a FUD jar file.

Edit: Also, I'm pretty sure you can't compare jar files either, I was just making a post. From what I know the Byte code changes completely on each compilation as it is, even with the same exact code.

@Element - Polymorphism of the compilation and polymorphism of the actual file on runtime are 2 different things.

No they're not. Polymorphism on runtime is polymorphism. Unique code on generation is unique code on generation. You need to learn what polymorphic means. It's only polymorphic when the code is editing itself not being made by a generator...

Mr. Gotti - January 5, 2012, 6:08 pm

@VisualBasic Malewear - http://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Polymorphic_code , I am well aware of what you have just said. The code does change itself when ran, not near as much as the code changes when generated of course but it is still polymorphic. Why do people on this forum have to bitch so much...:S

How does it change on run? I don't mean like variables, the actual instructions have to change.

Mr. Gotti - January 5, 2012, 6:12 pm

Buy the service and i'll tell you anything you want to know. Otherwise its none of your concern. Also, It isnt just variables Lol.

It's just for polymorphism you need some sort of decompiler so the program can get it's own instructions, I was wondering how you did this.

(Jan 5, 2012 06:29 PM)Technophobic Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) @Element - Polymorphism of the compilation and polymorphism of the actual file on runtime are 2 different things.

No they are not, there is no such thing as polymorphism of compilation, that is called the uniqueness of each generation. Polymorphism if you look it up means it mutates on each run, so it obviously means runtime not each time it is generated, derp.

What do you have to prove our code isn't polymorphic? Get off our thread. Thanks for the though ;). Not a single part of this thread is fake or a lie.

Mr. Gotti - January 8, 2012, 2:53 pm

@iamretarded - The polymorphism isnt in the Java code itself, Its in the PHP code that generates the Java code on every hit on our infection page, Technically making it Polymorphic; Due to the fact that everytime the infection page is ran, the Java code is re-generated and output to the victim. Seriously, just go away; Like I said you don't know what your talking about.

Thanks for the post, But we do not mean the applet malforms when its ran(Not possible due to the fact the jar file never technically reaches the victims machine), but everytime it is ran it is different. It is very close to the definition of polymorphism so we figured we should name it accordingly. I guess maybe it should be Psuedo-Polymorphic.

Contact me via PM or MSN and we can fix this problem. I'm not quite sure what you mean by your file alone as the spreadfile generator is different from the actual JDB generator itself.

Use the 'IFRAME and URL Generation' tab on your panel and locate the 'URL for traffic' box-code. This is the link your JDB is located on with the settings you chose in the panel. Adobe-Flash-Win is just your virus re-named because you have 'dual infection' checked in your settings.

Right-Click the zip and extract to / and then upload the files including the lib/java/lives/JARNAME.jar and index.html to your host. If you need to create the folders than do so. I recommend using an FTP program for uploading it makes things alot easier than web-FTP shit.

OT: We're going to be purchasing new IP addresses to sort of combat the blacklisting we've recently been having problems with.

Mr. Gotti - March 12, 2012, 9:17 am

Awaiting new servers addresses to take care of the detection currently. Just a reminder, This is NOT a detection of our Jar file it is the IP address/Domain of the server being directly targeted. Yeah, as i suggested, that adobe updater, should be that it executes the file not only download it, then its no use i think :)

But so far its cool! :)

There's tons if you look on RuneLocus's toplist website. Also some websites can't be cloned by our panel because of the way the images are used in there website's html files. If you want I can personally clone a website for you and host it on our server then you can clone it from there! Just hit

If you can show us a detailed explanation of how the adobe works that you're talking about we may be able to do it.

Also, The downloaded files are also tracked through our panel.

Ok. If i have choosen that it would be in this case Adobe Update, that your Adobe program is too old. You get screen saying, to update it to newest version automatically, so victim presses OK , and virus runs and executes.

Works perfectly. FYI: FUD as well.

I have a suggestion that you should create a cloner that returns the website's index page + inside it iframe, source inside your website, that way when users or webmasters check the code they don't only see an encrypted iframe, but the real source as well (too lazy to do it manually)

Vouch for AnonJDB!

Set-up is simple, it works great. A question on the overview screen. So far im seeing OS listings as Windows 7 and Linux. Does OSX show up as OSX or will it be read as a linux/unix OS?

It will show up as Mac OS. We previously blocked this OS's because they are generally unable to be infected by most viruses, however I think we'll make this an option for users to block because some people can infact infect Mac OS & Linux.

Everyone, the uptime is above 90%. The site isn't being hacked(Imfao). Also, IT will be back up in just a moment sorry about the issues guys. but please don't post help or issues on the SALES THREAD you can PM us on MSN or through HF at anytime. Mr. Gotti - April 8, 2012, 5:52 pm

At this point as far as I have researched since i've been back, It seems to be a small DDoS attack, Its causing the HTTPd to crash but the server itself is fine... I'm trying to fix it, I'll post as soon as I figure it out, Sorry guys. We'll find where its coming from and fight back though, So watch out whoever you are :)

Errorspam - April 8, 2012, 6:11 pm

Ah sorry about posting it here, the service has been great though! Plus the interface of the site is really easy to use.

Mr. Gotti - April 8, 2012, 6:17 pm

Still working on the issue, Seems to be a SYN spoofed attack. If anyone has any ideas on mitigation for this, Message me immediately thanks.

Newest update on down time: As far as things go, I've found its an obvious competitor of ours attacking our servers. They had began with a weak spoofed SYN attack, and have moved to it seems like Amplified UDP reflection now that I mitigated the SYN attacks, Tomorrow we will attempt to mitigate the UDP. Don't worry if anything we will simply get a new server tomorrow morning if things havent subsided, and we will provide a new domain update to users. Sorry about all this guys.

NewFace - April 8, 2012, 11:45 pm

The service is EPIC, to bad its down for now, Im sure that you will fix it. Anyway you are great guys, GUI is Awsome and service is one of the best on HF. Just do it guys :D

Thanks alot for the report. we're looking into it already.

I'm happy to finally announce after hours of hard work, overnight(AND A FEW CUPS OF JAVA OF COURSE! ;)). I have managed to mitigate ALL attacks from whoever is trying to shut our system down. The site should now be back up and fully running. Sorry for the downtime, I didn't sleep for the night to fix this, Hope you appreciate it guys!

Note: The automated sales is working fine also, Just re-checked it to make sure after all these updates.

New Updates to server?

- Installed mitigation systems to our servers.
- Updates to PHP and MySQL(Including some plugins)

Please note, the above updates are of the server hosting the JDB. We will be updating the JDB very shortly with the updates mentioned a few posts above this.

I have purchased a downloader because my server was about 980kb but I tested on myself and it works. My server is 2/37 (I didn't even know the 2 anti-virus companies even existed). I'm definitely getting people because : Traffic: 334 / Loads: 54 / Percent: 16.17%. Any ideas of what it could be?

p.s. your pm quota is full (Technophobic), you should clear it.

I cleared it, Message me your user ID located in the link of the panel after you have logged in.

Can someone give me some thoughts on this idea?

$10 says the title... I look at the thread and $10 turned into $50... Usually you want the title to say the price to PURCHASE it not have it for 1 month. That's false advertising.

It is most definitley 10$ for access(Well worth the price ask our customers). In the title nowhere does it say 10$ lifetime, nor monthly. We are not false advertising simply advertising our low price, Chances are you won't need this more than a month anyway, Atleast if you know what you're doing.

EDIT: We also even offer a within-48-hour guaranteed refund.

We're not forcing our potential customers to buy the $50 package. We're advertising that you can get a simple month package for a cheap price of $10.

All users, We WILL be replacing your time for the downtime that is currently happening. We may also lower our re-subscription fee.

About the downtime: Well it seems...of course our host is taking 10x longer than usual(As they do everything). We're simply waiting on them to finish up what they're doing and reply to our tickets and everything should be back online. Sorry once again for all the downtime, and we will definitely give you some extra time with our service.

Back on topic, the instant payment system will be working again shortly. We had some problems with the mail function (The server wasn't sending out the e-mails containing the panel URL and log in details), the problem will be fixed shortly. I've also gotten a lot of PM's and IM's regarding the initial setup of the JDB and how to use the panel. In response, i'm going to be creating and editing several detailed tutorial videos this weekend that will be added to the panel and sales thread.

I'll make sure the system is working, but it seems to be a problem on your behalf. Please make sure your settings are filled in correctly and that your file link is a DIRECT link. Meaning you can go to the link and your file begins downloading without clicking or waiting for it.

-FoxxJava is easily exploitable by any user who is viewing your systems jar file and is smart enough to download/decomp it. ;)

Did you know, that the owner of Foxx already knows this? As well as that, it is VERY easy to decompile yours as well. Since your "polymorphic" is Javascript based it is VERY easy to decompile during runtime and it now creates a Javascript dependency, which encase makes it much harder to spread if the visitor has Javascript disabled.

As I already said this is a great JDB and I'm not sorry for posting the not FUD virus scan on the thread, when you offer a FUD jdb it should always remain FUD and when you do re-FUD it then re-scan the jar and post the scan results so future buyers can tell that you are actually keeping up keep on AnonJDB

You are not using a direct link, try litetb.com. Check and know what you're doing wrong before you blame our JDB. It works fine for anyone, Not when you set it up wrong though. Also, I recommend getting a smaller file size, 1MB is massive for a rat/any malware in general.

17 infections today with your site...

I love this. So glad i bought it!

Very professional! easy to use! I wish i'd bought the 3 month one for $20 instead of the $10 1 month :P

Would be nice to see a scanner though :P.

The website cloner is REALLY good... Everything is perfect!!

It is so simple and straight forward to set up and does exactly what you want.

It's 3/37 for me right now though. I love how i can use the built in hosting AND other hosting! I recommend this to anybody. Simple fact is, when i was looking for something like this - they all seemed to have pretty all round negative feedback about the people involved ignoring messages and not keeping on top of things and constant downtime etc... I thought i was taking a risk by chosing anonJDB, but i'm so happy with it!

michaelnagy - May 29, 2012, 4:00 pm

I'm still making changes before I upload the fud stub. Anyway thanks everyone for re-assuring buyers/users that this infact works. We don't take kindly to rude misleading comments on our threads.

Just a little note, Minus is not a direct link. Use dropbox or litetb.

Our customers will be happy to know that any issues regarding the loading of the actual Java drive-by are fixed. There was a problem with an incorrect key-store value that was causing the applet to load incorrectly. The update for the FUD JAR's will be out by the end of the night when I have a chance to talk to the developer.

From the feedback on our thread, i'd say our product is doing well. I admit, there may have been a bug created last night when we pushed out the FUD update. To make sure everything is working smoothly from our end, i'll be debugging most of the panel to verify it is working correctly. I'm truly sorry about any loss of profit this potential bug might of caused. Just to make something clear, I personally used DropBox as a direct link for the panel and the JDB doesn't download the direct linked file correctly and it becomes corrupt making it impossible to execute properly. Please try using an alternative to DropBox such as a free web hosting package or even a paid web hosting package and get back to me. In addition, like xOMz said, I don't think our system supports spaces (And special characters) in the executable part of the JDB. Try eliminating the spaces in your file name to see if this fixes the issue. I'll also make note to my developer that there needs to be support for the replacement of spaces in every custom setting on the panel.

Thanks,

AnonJDB Staff

Server is now working, I shouldn't have compressed with UPX (beforehand didn't make any difference). Tested on slaves and such. Using rghost.net to host and is an executable link, tested on a slave working as well. Put new settings in jdb and updated them, uploaded updated files to my webhosting. So many? I don't think 2-3/350+ is so many, I also even went as far as adding the following instructions to the panel

- Do NOT use symbols in any input(!@#$$%%^&, etc).
- Always include <http://> or <https://> in your Website to Clone and Redirect.
- Make sure your download link is direct by making sure it points to your file(example: http://website.com/folders/stuff/random/your_file_name.exe).
- <http://litetb.com/> is a direct link host.

Also, People don't know how to debug the runtime of their software(s) and automatically blame our product where it is not valid.

I can assure you it works for blackshades, many users use our system with blackshades, I have also tested that personally. Also, If you are trying to test on yourself, it will not work. If you read blackshades client when you create a new server it clearly says localhost connections are buggy and won't happen.

Why would it not work for ONLY you but it works for 300+ other users who use all kinds of different scenarios of software, including probably the same crypter + rat your using, Trust me, you're doing something wrong, However this is not the place to have a discussion, Last time i'm warning you(directly). If you have a problem/question PM us don't post here, or I will remove your license and you will receive no refund.

If you want me to fix the issue for you, or debug what the issue is, drop me a PM.

I just purchased 1 month...it was working for an hour or two then the whole thing went offline. Now I cant access my java url, or get to the portal page at all.

Kind of glad I didnt purchase the 3 month option right now. Does it happen regularly? Any unknown offline time would obviously hinder specific targeted attacks.

I understand it will happen sometimes, but a little warning before any known downtime would be nice.

To be fair, it seemed to be working very well for those 2 hours I got to use it.

Can anyone else confirm they cant access the web portal, or their hosted jars at the moment?

Hey guys, the anonJDB is working now. So of course now I have a new problem.

LiteTB is blocking my crypted server file(darkcomet) and blocked my page for being a "phishing site".

Anyone know another good free host that gives direct links and doesnt scan your files? Hosting it locally seems a bit risky. I will now try and bind the server to a legit file, see if that helps. (edit: Just figured out Cloud Crypter lost FUD overnight....from 0/37 to 6/37)

Take a look at the litTB phising page warning:

Any free web hosting package will work. <http://www.awardspace.com/> is one of the websites that you can use, some of the free webhosts will block .exe's being hosted on there server and suspicious activity. It's recommended that you get some sort offshore server (You can get one from santrex for $9/mnth) to host your executable files on.

The anonJDB web portal is working fine now. But copy/pasting the "URL for traffic" doesnt bring up the java install window at all now.

I have tried it on multiple pcs. It shows the cloned page, but no Java install request shows up.

Can someone that has access please check on their end? My paid for crypted servers are starting to get detected while Im waiting for this thing to work ?

(SOLVED) Ok Im happy to say it was operator error. My "Applet name" in the portal settings was too long apparently.

Well how you take it. If you upload it on some direct linked site. And you index.php is encrypted, as you guys have.

+ Upload file with VPN. == No tracable

And yeah, better get some private hosting , hope it will be up soon.

Hey yo, so when I try cloning a website, I'm doing something for runescape. What I did was google "old login page" and used that link of the website for a image of it. But when I save settings etc, and click on URL for trafic it gives me these weird symbols instead of a picture. Can it not process .PNG for cloning or something?

Sometimes, yeah.

You need to download the image files as i Do :

Creat separete map for images , and index + style file.

Upload to hosting the folder, and clone , the folder with index + style + images

Then Enter all things @ AnonJava -> Downlaod

Upload to hosting, the 2 files, jar file + index file , and place in root folder the images from the 1.st step FOLDER

And it works.

Can you elaborate on your question more? If your talking about the website cloning, it will work on most websites (If it doesn't I can manually clone a website for you; due to some images not showing up on some websites). You can make your JAR look like a RSPS web client if you would like to.

Also, if i could suggest something. I have no idea how difficult this is so excuse me if i'm asking too much.

I would suggest that you make it possible to edit the code in your JDB on the hosting that we're provided with. Taking the files for remote hosting then editing them is impractical :/. If only we could edit the index.html on the hosting that you provide :(.

Reason? Because often there will be images hosted locally which i could easily upload to fix or even replace with my own image. Sometimes when i clone a site, it has links to other shit on their site that i don't want my slaves clicking on... Just a suggestion...

Why not setup a site with exactly what you want to clone then clone that instead?

On topic:

Site is back up fully!

All sales should be automated again, simply make sure you follow through after payment to our activation page!

I have infact done that with 2 sites. But it's just a pain in the ass. It's not worth making a whole new website just to get rid of like 1 broken picture at the bottom :/

Also, have a question... If i clone a site already using a java applet, will it affect my site? I use sites that NORMALLY request permission to run java to make it seem more legit. But i have had some troubles in the past, and i've always suspected this may be the problem.

Our server is back up and fully functional (With improvements to speed and functionality). Our customers will notice a big difference in the downtime(There will be almost none) and the panel will be running smoother than ever. Also, we're working on getting a portal up for our products where users can submit support tickets and pay automatically and receive there products automatically.

Mr. Gotti - June 20, 2012, 8:46 am

Mailing function is restored(This means complete instant activation via email!). We are considering adding auto-spreading to the JDB, ALOT of updates will be coming up real soon to make the experience with our services 10x better!

We are also looking to hire a customer support official, If you are interested please contact me via PM for further discussion.

I have purchased this and i am not happy with it at all !

Java drive by infection does not work at all. They told me to check my settings and i did, they are all fine and all they can say is :

"There is something you are doing wrong."

Awesome support indeed!

I don't recommend purchasing this at all!

It varies extremely on your traffic, could be 100% if you had something setup convincing enough or had trusting users.

Going out for a little while, Hopefully now the IPN script is completely fixed and up to date with PayPal recommendations.

We have also made several updates to make A LOT of things better including but not only the following...

- Websites should now fully load(CSS and all, Whether improperly linked or not(Our AI(Artificial intelligence) now finds all errors in the site code and automatically corrects them), If you find any that we have missed PLEASE notify us as soon as possible.

- Page loading should be roughly 50-75% faster than before.

- IPN issues have been fixed.

We are trying our best to make this the best possible experience. We have just started developing Artificial Intelligence in the system and will be adding many things to make sure you are notified of any mistakes in your input, As well as any tips/information you should know.

Thats the rate of an exploit pack. You should be more than happy with anything over 10%. It completely varies on the stupidity of your traffic and how much they trust the legitimacy of the website page you have created with our system.

There were issues yesterday with loads due to a mistake in code that was left. It has now been repaired any further issues please report immediately.

Ehh off the top of my head

-Some type of Video they would want to see

-A "voting page" of an RSPS(Request them to vote for your server for 1m or something)

-Be creative

The best thing to do is something no-one else has done so try and come up with something unique for yourself and hold onto it for dear life if it works for ya.

I sent you a message regarding this, It may be where your uploading your file. There is nothing the JDB does to your file other than download it from your specified URL, hide it and move it to the directory you choose then redirect the users web browser to the redirect page you select.

I have personally had the same issue you are experiencing and like I said it is from incompatibility between your file and your crypter.

That second question you can do that on your own simply forward your domains records to that ip address.

Also, Like I said its something you're doing, All other users are getting loads fine. May be the type of traffic you're sending.

Like we've told several your settings may be incorrect, The next user to post on this thread about their problems will have their license immediately suspended. If you have a problem message us, By making comments saying our product doesn't work you make us look bad when really its the user not correctly filling in their settings.

I don't have any idea what "New bug" you are talking about. There is no bug for me nor any other users, You always seem to have an issue which makes me lean towards your downloaded file is bugged, and once again if you have a bug message us about it don't post it on the thread, stringback this is your final warning if I see another message like this I will cancel your license(This goes out to others aswell).

This system is not designed for ubuntu, the current pre-set directorys are Windows only, However we will add some directorys for linux soon.

alphadelta12 - July 17, 2012, 5:11 am

Well following all the recent issues I am sticking with this JDB as Technophobic provides quality support and helps out almost immediately whenever I have a problem. Its low cost for the quality of the service too. The JDB always works aslong as you don't mess up the settings.

Mr. Gotti - July 17, 2012, 2:43 pm

All issues reported to me through private message should be repaired. We're still working on adding AtomicReferenceArray securely and FUD, Our system is very smart, Adding this code in isn't easy because of the fact our system generates a unique jar for each and every user aswell as a unique jar each and every time you press "Update Settings" so it will be some time however it will be completed.

No, Google what a Java Drive By is for an example. There is a popup, It is only as discrete as you make it. The generator itself generates FUD Jars, A jar is re-generated each time a user hits their "Update Settings" button, Aswell as each user has their own unique jar. Not like other JDBs which just use a single Jar file to power the whole system.

Not sure what your referring to. In regards to our customers, we're sorry about the couple hours of downtime today, we're resolving some issues with the new server and the host still; I and tech are hoping that these problems can be bypassed much easier in the future so our customers don't end up losing out on their subscription time. The panel is back up, please PM me or add my MSN if you are having any account or panel issues.

Edit: I'd also like to add that after all the little issues with the panel, server, and host have been resolved. We will be doing some major cosmetic changes to the thread layout and the panel. We'll also be doing some major feature changes with the panel that our users can look forward to ;).

FoxyJava wasn't apart of it, but we're sure it can be described as an attack due to your database being leaked and files being deleted off your VPS. Which in-case is an attack and leaves your users stuck in the middle with their passwords leaked in plain text format. Yes, I would take X Tee's advice and change all your passwords ASAP seeing that Anon JDB hasn't even taken the time to correctly store passwords in a database. A big shout out goes to you Anon JDB!

Haha, I love how you come to flame us now when our website isn't properly working. Your obviously trying to make yourself look good, and it isn't helping. Also, what are you referring to when you say, "this type of generator". You act like we're fucking using a VBS file to download and drop our customers files. I will say this again, OUR PANEL IS 100% CODED FROM SCRATCH (PHP AND JAVA).

Edit: Correctly store passwords in the database? What difference would it make if our passwords we're encrypted or not. Essentially, every encrypted password (Using common encryption algorithms) can be decrypted given the right time and processing power. I'm sure your panel isn't using some fancy encryption algorithm.

To answer your so ever stupid question of "Why encrypt passwords". Here is an answer:

Quote:Because, hashing passwords will protect it from attacks from inside the organization. This way people who have access to the database won't know the user's password.

People have a habit of using the same password over and over, and so if your database is accidentally compromised, your organization isn't the one that makes the user's other accounts comprised in other organizations. Now should people do this, no, but they do, and it's a lot easier to hash the passwords, than it is to explain to your customers why someone on the inside got a hold of the passwords and caused damage to several accounts in other systems not related to yours.

If you think that this reason is too exaggerated, you might want to know that it actually happened to Jeff Atwood, Stack Overflow creator. He described how the whole Stack Overflow was compromised in his blog post "I Just Logged In As You: How It Happened".

Edit:

To further answer you question, your other sensitive data should be encrypted as well. A lot of cyber attacks are inside jobs, and I hate to say it, but you have to be paranoid about who can see what information. Anything that you deem sensitive that you don't want people to know unless they are specifically authorized to see that data, should be encrypted in the database. You are right there are times when comparing what can be stolen the password isn't that much of a concern to you. The key is "to you". It is to other people, and should be protected along with the other sensitive data in the system.

Doesn't matter, your partner did take part in flaming uJDB, which does make Anon JDB associated with that immaturity and Foxy can not be singled out just for that. You can turn off this option on the 'Settings' tab in your panel. The "Secondary/Dual Infection" option should be checked as 'OFF'. PM me if you need further assistance.

There are no issues with the panel at the moment and the mailing system on the server is broken. You can extend your account manually by contacting me or Tech.

We're in the process of transferring to a new server. The issues with the mail function (automatic payment system) will be fixed after this switch allowing for instant payments/account setups to continue. I'm expecting the server to be finalized for the panel around 3-6 PM. We're also in the process of adding some new updates to the panel that our users can expect to roll out tonight or tomorrow.

Edit: The liberty reserve checkout button will be ready when the new thread layout gets posted today.

Edit2: The thread layout has been updated, thanks to Greene for the layout. The automatic payment buttons will be back on the thread when the IPN system is working again.

also the unique hits only option thats so if a target hit the url and runs the download then clicks the link again instead of him getting the run again he is just redirected to the site? well ive been unselecting this option till i can at least infect my self.

The youtube website is in dutch because that is where the local server IP is from. Your settings may be incorrectly filled out if the JDB isn't downloading/executing your file correctly (Make sure the applet isn't named: default). If you PM me a picture of your settings or log in details I can have a look at everything!

Fucking bullshit support, answer me every 2 days, I see you guys go online all the bloody time, you just get your payments and then put 1/4 of your effort into dealing with your customers. It doesn't work alright. I've been using jdbys for a long time, I know what a direct link is I know how to set it up I completely understand your settings. It just plain and simple does not work, I've tried it on my computer and 5 of my rat victims, can you freaking respond to me i'm getting seriously pissed off. It's been like half of my membership and I have gotten shitall help. Seriously I don't like raging on someones business but I expect to get a reasonable amount of support. I've seen both lysergic and technophobic go online like a million times in between a pm, and go about reading random posts etc, not giving a fuck about their notification from their customer.. I'm not impatient either I've waited like 1-2 days for each response from you's. ugh.

Sorry, but it's the weekend and we aren't robots. You can't expect me (The only support team member) to sit in front of my computer all day waiting for someone like you to ask for support. If you followed the proper contact methods listed in the thread you couldve gotten a faster response via MSN or Skype. I'm looking into your issue now to verify there aren't any issues with the applet stub code. I'll respond to your PM after this check for further support. Once again, I apologize for the delayed response. I'm usually on top of support during the week, and the weekend is my time off.

Yes the latest JRE is required. I've verified that everything on the panel is working correctly a long with the applet. Coming this week will be some improvements to the support side of the panel (Videos, images, tutorials, FAQ's, hints).

Second, I Asked for a refund due to me not admiring the product as i thought i would.

Third, I was majorly flamed with cussing, calling me a liar and such.

Finnally, I recieved a message saying he was sorry for flaming.

All is good, but will not being buying again from here.

I didn't expect you guys to be robots. My argument is that I have allowed for time in between responses up to 1-2 days, which is in my opinion fair enough considering you are running a business and selling a product. But what also seconds my argument is that in between sending a message to you and getting a response, I notice that your hackforum profiles are active and online atleast 3-5 different times, for each time I make a message... So basically you claim you're not robots, but when you are actually online I notice you aren't responding within that time.. but whatever. I'm not expecting compensation, but clearly its not my side of the problem that is causing it to not work, considering you said my settings are right and i've tried it on multiple computers including my own, brothers, mums and rat victims.

I'm planning on getting the new exploit implemented today or tonight. After the system is configured to allow multiple/different stub codes our customers will start seeing newer methods of infection that can be chosen (JavaAtomicArray, JRE 1.7 Exploit, ect.) allowing for an increased infection rate. I also have a pretty good update list written up right now that i'm going to give over to the developer later.

Lysergic - September 2, 2012, 10:12 pm

Recently I've been getting some of the same PM's with messages like, "The JDB doesn't work". Please make sure your settings are correctly filled out and that your direct link is ACTUALLY direct (This means that when you go to the link in a browser, the executable is directly dropped to your downloads folder). I've tested the JDB myself and the panel is downloading + executing files correctly (Tested using an uncrpyted BlackShades RAT bin). Every settings box has a hover-over "hint" that will help with filling out each individual setting. I'm available via PM, MSN, and Skype for support and sales questions. The panel isn't hard to use and anyone with some common sense should be able to use it. Please don't purchase if you don't feel confident...

The website was down for a little bit due to some panel upgrades and a little bit of a DDoS. Everything is functioning now and i'm happy to announce that the silent java drive-by is slowly being implemented into the panel. Instead of allowing the user to select whether they would want to have the exploit implemented into there applet, the exploit code is automatically added to every applet upon updating your settings. That way, you can still infect victims via silent JDB or traditional depending on whatever one works on there browser/OS. For example, Bob visits an infection page and he is using an out-dated version of Java; he then begins to become infected automatically via the exploit because he is using an out-dated version of Java. However, John visits the same page and has the newest version of Java, he is prompted by the applet security requesting permission for the applet to run (Traditional).

My PC was sent in for repair on Friday and on Monday the repair center received the tower. I'm expecting my tower to be fixed by the end of the week, but who knows when my actual fixed PC will arrive (Could be next week). At the moment I've managed to scrape together my old computer and I will be answering all inquiries today. If you have opened a dispute or scam report I completely understand, you will be refunded if you sent me a PM. Also, if you haven't received your log in information you can always send me a PM with the transaction ID or e-mail ready. I'm really sorry for the delay but it's been hard without an actual PC. I hope these last 2 weeks can be made up for so our reputation still stays in tact.

Edit (10/02/2012 2:38 PM): The website is loading rather slowly at the moment because of some mass traffic being sent to our server. I'll be looking into server upgrades and possible DDoS protection tonight.

Not as easy as you think. There are tools out there that will grab 100 bots and turn them into 100,000 bots that can DDOS a site offline for days, weeks, or months. CloudFlare can even be stripped away, revealing the real IP address of the website.

Knowledge is power, but that doesn't mean you should use it for evil.

Anyways, Anon I really hope it wasn't you downing my website. A reply would be great or I'm going to assume it was you.

Why don't both of you sign some sort of pact. Like u both won't ddos each others sites. Coz none of you are getting any satisfied customer. Both of your customers are complaining about downtime. You both are losing customers. So its better to stop fucking each other and share the customers bcoz both of you have almost same JDB

It's childish to assume something like that. There are other competitors out there, and given both me and my developers absence lately I would appreciate it if you could assume otherwise. DDoS protection is to expensive because we are constantly switching servers to new host providers. There is some months when we use our subscription for 10 days then get shut down.

If you sent me a PM recently i'll be answering it shortly!

Not childish at all, this is Hack Forums. What am I suppose to expect? As of right now, I only see is Anon JDB and xJava. FoxyJava and Anon JDB have had some confixes in the past, which makes me assume it would be Anon JDB trying to get back. As your developer said, hope you can bight the bullet.

Why you keep getting shutdown ??

Well to clear up any feuds it's not AnonJDB. I do not believe in that type of competition and do not even have the time! The reason for shutdowns is because we offer JAR and HTML file hosting.

Yes, the applet is generated with two "stub" codes. One code structure containing the methods for the silent JRE exploit and the second structure containing the traditional methods for infection (Download and execute). If the silent exploit fails to run (Representing that the user may have an updated version of Java or below) the traditional methods are ran, offering a dual-infection between silent and traditional.

There will be some panel updates coming soon and some updates to the support aspects of this project. I'll be implementing some type of support system (Live chat or a ticket system) with the panel because i'm tired of using PM's for communication. In addition, i'll be taking some new pictures and videos of the panel and the new silent feature (When I get my PC back today!).

I appreciate your help, but i can assure you that the problem isn't client-side. As the direct exe host is confirmed working, it's as if there is no silent, and the java pop up is useless (at the moment), I'm sure this will get taken care of but as always we have our doubts.

I'm currently waiting for the server provider to add the extra IP addresses that I ordered to the server. The new IP's will be rotated in for the old ones which will fix some of the detection issues. In addition, some new domains are being ordered for a better hosting experience using the panel. The new IP's and domains will also fix some of the issues that people are having regarding the website/panel being blocked. CloudFlare is currently causing some issues for customers looking to host their applet using our servers (This should be fixed when the new IP's arrive). Finally, i'll be setting up a LiveZilla support chat application today.

You are not required to host the page yourself but it's strongly recommended. We cannot keep up with the cost of domains and IP addresses today (Our domains and IP's are still re-stocked here and there though). The process is as easy as you described, you can clone your desired web content and your page is ready!

Yes this product is still for sale. I apologize for my recent absences. It's been hard to offer the full support that is necessary when the developer is barely on. There have been some communication issues that i'm trying hard to fix.

The IP address for the server has been updated (I've been hearing that the current IP address is detected by some AV's.). The domain name for the panel is going to be updated sometime tonight or tomorrow morning. The current panel URL will automatically re-direct to the new domain name when the update does happen.

Edit: The IP address changes may cause some DNS problems. I cannot control how long the domain host takes to update the new DNS changes. If you are having any problems please make sure it isn't DNS related first, then contact me.

(Dec 10, 2012 05:18 AM)Devoted Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) As far as i am concerned, it is not fully silent. Depends on the version of java you're running.... :!

You could look at it that way. The product still has a "silent" feature but it has not been updated to the latest vulnerability. Our customers can still gain huge amounts of loads through the current exploit (Working on these current versions):

Information (CVE):

<http://www.oracle.com/technetwork/topics/security/alert-cve-2012-4681-1835715.html>

JDK and JRE 7 Update 6 and before

JDK and JRE 6 Update 34 and before

Now, I have been researching the latest vulnerabilities and exploits related to the JRE and JDK software platforms. I will be passing the information onto my developer about the latest Java Zero-Day concerning the unpatched vulnerability in Java JRE 7 Update 9. According to the resources that I have, the vulnerability resides in the Java class, "MidiDevice.Info", a java package that handles audio input and output. Quoted directly from my resource article, "Code execution is very reliable, worked on all 7 version (Assuming Windows 7?) I tested with Firefox and MSIE(Microsoft Internet Explorer) on Windows 7", the seller explained in his sales thread about the exploit (The seller of the exploit, not sure if this exploit is even public yet). It is also not clear whether or not Chrome is affected.

TLDR Version; I'm not sure if we will even be able to get our hands on this exploit soon; but you can be sure that me and the developer will be working hard on making a sort of "home-brew" exploit of our own for this vulnerability. I spilled some drink on my keyboard a couple days ago which was why I was why I couldn't be fucked to answer any PM's or support requests (All of my keyboard keys are sticking making it impossible to type...). Some people we're lucky and got supported over Skype (lil.dd3) or MSN (d-d-3@hotmail.com), only because I had to contact the developer and make payments for the server. Happy to say now that I have a older keyboard with no sticking keys... I will be getting around to answering everyone's PM's sometime today; and the domain name will also be getting updated (Because it is blacklisted by many major search engines, browsers, and AV companies, lol..). Expect some kind of cool panel UI (User Interface) update to come this week. I want to make the panel into a DropBox type click and drag system to make everything way more easier for noobs (No offense!). In addition (Holy shit, getting tired of typing), I will be setting up the LiveZilla support chat system again today or tonight. Finally, i'm currently working on some cool presentation type videos to help people setup their Java drive-by's and to show proof that the silent does indeed work.

And yea it does create link with an IP number and JDB in the title, so that's why you use a domain name. Though for some reason my setup isn't dropping the payload, after accepting the JDB dialog.

If anyone has any ideas it would be great, not slagging this product off, just saying. Have messaged the coder and waiting for a reply.

EDIT: Tried every setting, my server is working fine - connects when manually executing (haven't added local loopback - 127.0.0.1, to the network settings of the server, so that's not why it's connecting), also had another HF member test it too, no luck. Seems the drive-by might be out-dated??

To anyone who has just paid;

You have sent money to someone no longer on the forums. May I ask how you are getting this project if the owner hasn't been on in like 4-5 months?

Sorry for the miscommunication, We have discontinued this project I am very sorry and cannot close out the thread, If a moderator feels like doing so we would appreciate this. I personally will be reopening a new project myself. This user was simply my salesman.

WTF. "Sorry for the mis-communication" Are you kidding me? Look at your signature, you're basically promoting something that is a scam at this point.

The reason I bought this just now was because of your signature, and because it said autobuy.

So what, now I won't get my money back or a JDB?

Thread says autobuy

Technophobic is active

Technophobic has AnonJDB in his sig.

Therefore, I bought it.
