Here is a source i wipped up as board, its not multithreaded, but you will learn a thing or two (noobs)

Here's a demo

Monitor clipboard for links

[Video: <http://www.youtube.com/watch?v=E2fY0QdnDh0>]

Here's the link - just say thanks!

In the description of the youtube video, Mediafire link.

No virus scan provided its a source, just deleted the exe (i forgot).

well you should get a virus scan but all in all it looks good, keep it up

Deceptive - February 5, 2012, 4:21 pm

Code new System.Net.WebClient().DownloadFile("C:\Picture.png", "http:///link.com/image.png");

Wow deceptive you so fucking l33t man, except i used

New Bitmap(New IO.MemoryStream(New WebClient().DownloadData("Whateverlink here")))

Plus the parsing for the google links... One day you may actually help some one... watch it man.. LMFAO

Hahah when your involved im always mad :P

Yea mostly cuz their fucking nobs :P

EDIT: waits for the next exciting installment of "shit post" by Deceptive :) "You know its coming, its just a matter of time!"

Im just going say this is completely a beginner's project. If you can explain the entire concept of the app with 1 line then its not a good program and anyone can do it. FizzyMenthos quit raging he didnt mean anything from it

The reason i never wrote a wright up is due to this being one of those quick makes when your board, and the ONLY reason i posted is so other can cab the source and lean a few little things from it.

And yea anyone can do it hence the included source :P

And me and deceptive have a love hate thing going on :P

like most it will never end and only get better :)

And saying that being able to explain a program in one line make it "not a good" program shows what you know.... I could describe Gyazo in two words not even a full line and people would know what its all about.. "screenshot tool" << Their simple and you get the idea...

Also it dose say Basic on the video title, i thought that would of gave it away??
