Thread: [I've got my Paypal limited, but does this means I'm permanently limited ? \[Check IMG\]](#)

CacaoBux - February 14, 2012, 7:12 am

Hello,

I've got limited today, and I see this message below when I logged into my PP, so does that means that I'm limited permanently and I can't use PP anymore, or I can lift these limits ?

Kind Regards.

Go to the resolution center and if there's no option to appeal it there's nothing you can do.

That's my resolution center ...

When I click on: "Your account is still limited. Why?" I got the message that I've posted into the first post.

Call them and tell them you need your account unlimited. They do it. tell em you don't know why it got limited. theyll do it right away

I'm not from the USA, and It's a pain in the ass to call them.

So, I found a page where they ask me to upload some documents ...

Do you think that If I complete the final step and upload my documents, they will unlimit it ?

Mr.Steven - February 14, 2012, 7:21 am

No, it's not permanent.

Call PayPal and get it solved.

I can't call them because It's pain in the ass to talk with them really. I only once called them and I was waiting like 30 minutes on the phone, so I'm asking if I complete the last step from the image in my previous post, do you think that they will unlimit it ?

Sure, why not?

Cyber - February 14, 2012, 7:26 am

Yeah i think they will have to look over everything though, They do this to make sure your secure. If they didn't limit people it would make it easier to just spend 10k on someones account. What i'd do is fill out the documents and then wait thats the best you can do man.

I'm not sure if this final step from the image above is related to my current limitation because I never completed the final step since I've got my account and just now they decided to limit it, so if I finally complete it, you're saying that they will unlimit it ?

Kind Regards.

Yes, I think they will unlimit you after you upload the documents

Mr.Steven - February 14, 2012, 7:28 am

Yes sir, just do what they ask you to do and you will be fine.

Tyson_08 - February 14, 2012, 7:30 am

If it is your real account, do not worry; Give them your info & get it resolved.

If its a fake info. account or something like that, maybe you have some problems [Maybe Call/SE]. :)

CacaoBux - February 14, 2012, 7:37 am

So, I'm not permanently limited, and I've got a chance to unlimit my real account, right ?

Momz - February 14, 2012, 7:38 am

I have gotten EXACTLY the same issue. Call them up, that's what i did. The guy told me that mine is permanently limited without a reason. They are BS and thieves.

Only way to find out is to give them a ring and ask to speak to an agent.

Mr.Steven - February 14, 2012, 7:43 am

If it's a legit account then go on and call them, just do it and go from there.

C??????? - February 14, 2012, 7:44 am

Just provide them documents they will unlimit you.

This is what I've got as an email:

So, what does that means ? Am I really permanently limited, and I won't be able to unlimit it ? So, basically I can't use PP again ?

The GRim - February 14, 2012, 8:00 am

I called them and they lifted the limitation but its really a hard thing calling them.

Do you think that I still can get unlimited or this means that I am fully and permanently limited now ?

Calling them is pain in the ass for me. I'm waiting at least minimum 30 minutes before I'm even able to talk with someone of their support. Any other idea what to do now ?

They request from me to give them my ID proof and bill statement, but I'm not sure If I must do it when I recieved an email saying that I'm permanently limited ?

Confused really.???

You will be able to withdraw the money after 180 days. It's the only solution if they wont unlimit it.

Hopsin - February 14, 2012, 8:15 am

Hi,your PP is not permanent limited. You can get it unlimited by sending them legal/legit documents they require OR you can alternative call them.

If they provided you steps to resolve then it means they still want to continue business with you...just follow the steps and you will be fine..

I just saw that these steps that I found are different, shouldn't if they want to continue business with me to provide me the steps of how to resolve it directly into my resolution center not anywhere else but only in the resolution center, right ?

Francium - February 14, 2012, 9:32 am

Ye, I see they have provided you steps in resolution center...

Factor8™ - February 14, 2012, 9:33 am

It's closed permanently.

Francium - February 14, 2012, 9:34 am

Paypal fucked up with another legit user. Hope they come on street soon.

BELLAGIO - February 14, 2012, 9:45 am

Bro, There's no way to fix this. Those "follow these steps" shit is bullshit. You have been perm limited.

Just make a new paypal, Make sure it's legit & verified.

L?st - February 14, 2012, 11:15 am

The red thingie you marked there, means it is permanent.

Check my PayPal post, wrote pretty huge thing about they limiting me, check my threads.

RUS7Y - February 14, 2012, 1:52 pm

Yes, that means your account has been limited for 180 days.

Wardenkeeper - February 15, 2012, 5:18 pm

Hit me up in skype (shubg) so we can resolve this case as soon as possible. I can help you, because I had the same problem.

Kind regards.

Receiver - February 15, 2012, 7:04 pm

the same fucking thing happened to me....

unfortunatly i called them and still they refused.. said the transactions were sketchy...

Cobra Strike - February 16, 2012, 1:56 am

No matter what people say that's a permanent limit. I've got the same on 3 PP's. Even after 180 day's it'll still be limited..

it's still limited because after 180 days you can actually request a check. That way they will send a check to the information thats on the paypal account.
