This isn't really a safe password program because if someone RATs you then they can keylog and log into the program.

If someone keylogs you, they can log your every key stroke so idk how your gonna hide your password. You still have to type it in Thats why you get Keyscrambler.

Or you have an option to generate the password, since it isn't typed then.

If anyone has an external accessory called a "Nostromo," program a key to be a macro for passwords. Programs cannot log the Nostromo, so it's good.

Oh sheet, we got a heckur in here! Your answer: Virtual Keyboard, Zemana Antilogger, KeyScrambler, MUltifactor authentication, etc..

Ofcourse, following your theory no program is safe.
