Thread: [\[Review\]\$27.00 - Beats by Dr.Dre -Tours- \[ManiaCool\]](#)

Righteousness - March 6, 2012, 3:48 pm

Hey guys, the beats that I have ordered finally have came in yesterday. And I am doing my own review on the this product to let you know my own opinions on how good they are.

+++---[Tours with Control-Talk]---+++

--Review--Review--Review--Review--Review--Review--

Ratings are based out of 1 through 10.
1 being the worst and 10 being the best.

Build Quality (How alike it looks to the real ones) :::
9/10

Why:

--Negatives--

Spoiler \(Click to View\)

1. Because the box was really dented up.
2. I found 2 spelling/grammar errors on the box if it were to be seen/read.
3. It does not come with a serial number under the L-Jack.

++Positives++

Spoiler \(Click to View\)

1. Chord length are exactly similar.
2. Color of the cord matches the real ones.
3. 'B' is engraved. And straight. Not turned like a '6'
4. Brushed aluminum.
5. Made out of steel. Not plastic.
6. Control Talk works exceptionally fine.
7. L-Jack.
8. Gold plated jack.
9. Not missing any major logos. Or misspelled brand names on the headphones.
10. Not missing the extra buds.
11. Came with the wire to attach/hook your beats on to your ears. While being active to not have them fall out.

Sound Quality (Sound is compared to the real ones) :::
9/10

Why:

--Negatives--

Spoiler \(Click to View\)

1. The sound isn't as loud as it should be to a real one when fully blasted.

2. Sometimes on the highs the sounds get distorted.
3. The way they fit in your ears are sometimes uncomfortable. (Need to change earbuds to the right ones.)

++Positives++

Spoiler (Click to View)

1. Bass is very in-depth espically for dubstep.
2. Everything to me is fine, except the highs.
3. Sound is clear and cut.
4. Very little to no distortions unless the song(s) have plenty of highs.
5. Control Talk to easily adjust volume or pausing when someone is trying to speak with you.

Overall Quality/Satisfaction (My opinion on how these are good/1:1) :::

7.5/10

Why:

--Negatives--

Spoiler (Click to View)

1. Box really damaged and brings up a lot of questions on why.
2. Shipping time was incredibly and horribly dissatisfying. Yes they're from china, but atleast provide a tracking number, some people would like not to pay but still get a tracking number. $3 is a lot just for numbers to see where your package is currently at.
3. Box smelt horrible, well the inside where the actual beats were located. Smelt like smoke with burnt rubber. Which is also dissatisfying.

++Positives++

Spoiler (Click to View)

1. Very easy to sell. Since they look alike, and really no one knows what to look for on fake beats.
2. High Quality build. Not missing anything important, or anything that would be included inside the box.
3. Wrapping/Placement were awesome.
4. Everything looked very very original.

I myself am very pleased to have purchased these and plan to order more with DHL shipping and not wait almost a month to get what I ordered.

That's pretty much the only downside of purchasing is the shipping, cause it takes forever to get to ones house.

Hope ya enjoyed the review. And I hope you take this into consideration, of purchasing for personal use or reselling to friends or random people.

Will be adding pictures and video later.

Nice review looking forward to the video and pictures.

okay cool i ordered 3 pairs from there
hat was the shipping estimate vs the actual shipping time?

Lucky Jimmy - March 6, 2012, 5:28 pm

Really? The "B"s just look like a circle to me. At least from the pictures on their site.

They do that to avoid copy write laws on the pictures but the actual beats have the engraved "b"

Thanks for answering the questions lol.

I'll have the pictures up hopefully by the end of today. And the video also if possible.

I just got my 27$ tours, they're fucking horrible. Sound quality is not what I expected.

Anyways, great review.

Winterfell - March 7, 2012, 4:51 am

Maybe Customs tampered with your beats?

I don't think so. The package was nice and realistic, but these sound like the 11$ ones.

Lucky Jimmy - March 7, 2012, 1:20 pm

Cool dude. I wanna get me some of deez.

I see that you wrote that the ControlTalk works exceptionally well. You haven't had any problems with it whatsoever? I've heard a lot about the ControlTalk not functioning properly so I'd be interested in your opinion.

Yes, I'd say I abuse it. But that is because I talk a lot to my friends and I get lazy to just take out the earphones, so I press the middle button to pause, or i just spam the decrease volume, to turn it down. But so far its been so good, roughly a good estimate about 25-40 times a day is about how much i spam it.

The red string quality is not the same as the real ones. Someone brought a real pair when i tried selling mine, its different material

Is it a different hue? Or worse quality?

Ha, this is TRUE. But its so hard to label the difference just say that they're used. And if they ask for a receipt, get the fake payapl generator thingy and show them the fake payment.

[: since I'm such a pro at selling and making excuses for my friends and random people buying them off of me.

Honestly this is one of the best reviews I've seen by a beats user.

I never thought I would see the words "best" and "beats" together in one sentence from you!? Ahh but I agree very thorough.

I'm not saying it's a good review, only that it's the best I've seen from a beats user and targeted necessary aspects (such as the missing serial number). It isn't even a decent review in my books but it's probably the best you'll get from a general beats user.

P.S. I wrote out the whole thing on my iPod Touch at "The University of Texas"! (; Haha thanks. [: Just gotta add the pics, but I'm on a college station trip to visit multiple colleges. So there's gonna be a late delay on the pics/video. :(

Also, I've noticed that if it's only my beats only, or the quality of his music. Or his iPhone, but when he turns up the music kind of loud, there gets a static buzz on the earphones. I don't know if it his ears, or what. But he didn't want to buy them from me because of that. It's okay though got another person willing to buy them from me.

That's because beats are over sensitive (real and fake). You'll get the same static with any low impedance headphone/iem when playing very strong signals (such as iPhones at maximum volumes or from amps meant for higher impedance headphones). If that turned him off of buying from you I don't even know why he's considering beats... Lmao
It's the loudness wars.

Lol, I used the excuse of barely getting them. But then again it's all clear and cut for an iPod touch, and anything else. But when it goes to his iPhone it's just static as fuck when he turns them up. But the bass is fine. Just static when he listens to them.

The iPhone uses a stronger built-in amp I believe... Not to mention it could be his source files and beats are of lower quality

We used my own real ones off the official site and they both sound the same. I'm thinking it's his iPhone. Cause it never really does this to my iPod Touch, my friends Zune/ZuneHD, and the older versions of the iPod it sounds somewhat like the originals but you can tell that the fake aren't as loud as the real ones like 100% on real is 90% on fakes

The 2 thoughts I had were that the iPhone built-in amp is stronger or his source files are of lower quality.

Either way, you shouldn't be blasting music loud enough that you hear static....

This ^ ^

Failiure to follow new rules will result to the same action that occured in the SE section.

Fluxie - March 9, 2012, 9:58 am

I don't think that it's allowed to talk about this anymore.

Sol Yurick - March 9, 2012, 10:00 am

These are not allowed here on HF anymore.
