It's like any other Youtube increasing software, if you arent using a proxy, and your logged into your account then yes.

DarkSeven46 - January 16, 2010, 5:07 pm

I could tried to do this myself, but how does it work if the player does not load, Youtube does not count the view if no flash

Did you use the proxy option?

SN1P3 - January 16, 2010, 6:36 pm great but to make it work propley you need a proxy setup on it, like a program called turbo tube

It has a proxy setup on it. Just click proxy and enter the IP.

Mate, You should add import proxy list, so you can have a big list of proxies it goes through.

I'm fairly sure that 1 view per 3 seconds won't work. I've heard that you need to wait at least 30 seconds before they count your view in.

They don't add them straight away.

Lucky for me, your opinion isnt needed.

MorningWood - January 16, 2010, 9:43 pm

Sonic, I dont think its going to work well because you can only use a certain amount of views per IP per day. So using a proxy isn't going to do much except use a different IP. To make it really work you actually do need to have an import list of proxies so it can go through them and get a lot more views w/o freezing the views.

Youtube sometimes bans peoples accounts. That is, if they are trying to get too many views by software such as this.

There is a proxy option built in.
