Thread: Donated £1000 to cancer research UK!

Alex M. - May 8, 2012, 1:34 pm

Hi there would just like to share this with you guys, This is the right section as it is a bragging right IMHO :)

I did a local charity run, And managed to get £1000 in sponsors, There was one generous guy who I have known most of my life who sponsored me for £500 alone so that was a massive help!

I am 18 years old, And I am actively volunteering for stuff like this because I like to do my bit to help those that have this horrible illness. And I hope that we find a cure soon! This is the most I have earned so far so i'm quite proud that I could do my bit.

Cancer is serious, And I would like to urge you guys to donate too!

You can donate on their official website: <http://www.cancerresearchuk.org/>

Thank you guys for taking the time to read this, I am quite proud of what I achieved. :)

Cool story bro. And now send me the money?

prodigyhf - May 8, 2012, 1:37 pm

Well good for you. I personally would have ran away with the cash. ?

"Cancer research" where the rich doctor gets all the money.

indicud - May 8, 2012, 1:40 pm

I'm almost positive they have cures.

They can't release them because they would lose a lot of money if they did.

Congratulations! You've done a great thing and that's awesome you've managed to get so much money to donate.

Congrats on donating. However, I believe that its a scam in a way. Think how many years its been going over here in the UK and no cure has been found yet? Makes me wonder.

Don't listen to anyone above, treatment is coming along in leaps and bounds. People think Cancer only needs one cure but in reality there are hundreds of types of cancer all of which need separate treatments.

Wanna know what your doctor will do with your money? Test if buying a new car will cure cancer.
Sorry for being rude but it is a scam =/. Anyways it's still really kinda.

DaFreak - May 9, 2012, 6:28 am

(May 8, 2012 01:38 PM)Valderino Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) I personally don't believe in cancer research at all. Cancer research isn't a charity, it's a business and people make millions off of scamming people into believing that they donations when in fact they're just going to sell the medication for back breaking prices anyways.

Not to mention, that there's less incentive to find a cure when you know you can rely on donations.

Now I feel like a dick, but good for you OP. It's nice that you're doing something nice. :)such a good point, diabetes was cured but the us govt paid 35m for them to keep quiet.

AmlRight - May 10, 2012, 7:41 am you are a good guy! high five!

I donate 100$ every year to charity.
Donated this year to the Touhoku Japan earthquake.
