I figured I would say congrats since now one else did lol.

Seriously though, it is good that you are looking for a job, just don't get too comfortable there!

I know that, nobody here that I see actually has a irl job. Most are marketers with online income. I decided against that and want to work IRL instead of on the interwebz, plus the social aspect is great as is the discount for employees ?

This is one of the worst Bragging Rights threads I've ever seen. I don't even see why you would be bragging about applying for a job.

Because he took a step to maturity today. He applied for a real job in effort to earn income. I don't understand why pretentious people need to put him down. The working experience is worth more than the money alone, and will benefit him in life.

OP: Congrats and best of luck!
