I know, I know... Lucky star review really? Yes really, I decided to do this one because although as much as it is well known a lot of people have still yet to watch it. So let's do this shit

Plot

Plot and lucky star is 100% contradiction. Lucky star is almost famous just for the simple fact there is no real plot. Sure I guess you could boil the plot down to bunch of little girls doing random shit but really it's not all it is about but at the same time it is what it is all about. Not following, of course not it is lucky star.

Review

Lucky star is a great anime. It manages to make fun of otaku culture trends without seeming insulting to the said otaku viewer. The way they manage to do this is absolutely amazing; the execution of this anime is just fabulous. The way they are able to give great character development is incredible in such an anime. Although the development is not all that deep there still is character development for each character which is still a great feat in itself. They constantly make comments about what type of person "insert name: is. It really is something amazing. The art style is cute and charming and very appealing. It really is a nice anime to watch visually. For those people who have not seen this anime it is the perfect anime to sit in bed with some sticky egg rice and watch on a cold rainy day. This anime is very famous for its references to other anime such as Full Metal Panic and Haruhi. The only real thing I have had to say about this anime is the lucky channel. You will know why once you see it however despite this I strongly recommend watching this anime!

I saw this on my thread and since I just started watching it I believe you've got my attention.

Also reminded to finish FMP.

Thanks for the review.
