Get a source or copy of a website!

First of all, go to any website. For this, I will use YouTube (This website)

Right click on any part of the webpage, just not a video and click 'View Source'

A bunch of code will show up, you need to copy all that and save it into a html file that should be named index.html

Then, upload index.html to your website and you got it!

I hope you're fucking trolling us right now.

tyguy - June 24, 2012, 10:32 am

No I'm not. Some people don't know how to get sources, most people do.

Error2012 - June 24, 2012, 10:40 am

Seriously ?

Yeeah, i hope too hes trolling us.

otherwise... FUU WILL NOT THINK ABOUT WHAT OTHERWISE ;(

Dm0v - June 24, 2012, 10:47 am

Lol, its easy for most people.

Shouldnt this belong in a website section, its not exactly hacking...

UmbrellaHacker.Corp - June 24, 2012, 10:48 am who don't know about this?

who in this website don't know about this?

beachedwhale - June 24, 2012, 10:49 am this looks quite complicated... can you code an auto source grabber tool for me please?

tyguy - June 24, 2012, 10:49 am

All I'm doing is trying to help the newbies. Calm down.

OneForth - June 24, 2012, 10:53 am

Thanks for sharing, but I pretty sure everyone knows about this :P

Thanks anyway,

Are you serious or are you just trolling right now?

Lmfao nice one dude :p

tyguy - June 24, 2012, 11:06 pm

I'm not trolling, people! God damnit!

Snow - June 24, 2012, 11:18 pm

O_o

ah This is very public knowledge.

But it might help someone....doubt it though.

miketh2005 - June 25, 2012, 8:12 am

LOL. Is this a troll? ... What the... next you will be posting a tut on how to navigate to Google.com?
