Change $sql to this:

Code $sql = mysql_query("SELECT SUM(`at`) FROM `User`") or trigger_error(mysql_error()); Then tell me what it says afterwards :D

He made a mistake in the code.

PHP Code

```
<?php
$sql = mysql_query("SELECT SUM(`at`) FROM `User`") or die(mysql_error());
```

The reason for the aforementioned snippet is that the error will contain a boolean when triggered, this way we will be able to determine what the error is and resolve the issue.

```
$sql = mysql_query("SELECT SUM(`at`) FROM `User`") or die(mysql_error());
Change the '9 to the snippet code ("

Oh sorry, I did make a mistake :(

Yeah that is what I was trying to do, it makes it easier to determine the error I'm pretty sure :D

FantaŠec - July 11, 2012, 3:02 am

It says Error now, nothing else, any ideas?

There's obviously a mistake in your query, most likely to do with the table and/or column. It should say more than just "Error" though.

FantaŠec - July 11, 2012, 3:08 am

Everything is correct though, thats the problem :/

Able™ - July 11, 2012, 3:27 am

I am working in this now, I will get back to you when I have found it :D

BadGame - July 11, 2012, 6:46 am

put ds b4 the the sql query

PHP Code

```
<?php
```

```
mysql_select_db("DATABASE_NAME");

btw, the php errors lets you know where to correct,

Warning:

PHP Code

```
<?php
```

```
mysql_fetch_array()

expects parameter 1 to be resource, boolean given in

Means $sql is returing

PHP Code

```
<?php
```

```
FALSE
```
