Thread: Am I screwed?

Omg - July 23, 2012, 8:39 pm

Not sure which section this should go, anyway I know this guy in real life and he basically wanted to sell me something I wanted. I soon found out he scammed me out of my $475. I got really mad so I hacked his Facebook. Stupid enough I forgot to use a VPN or a web proxy. I did a bunch of shit in it and he knew it was me. After the account was hacked, it was suspected as hacked so he had to recover. I went and logged into my own Facebook, it has all my information and stuff.

He told me this:

"I have notified the Police and hired an attorney. I took screen shots of my page and have turned them over to the Police and my attorney as evidence and the Police is now investigating with Facebook about the IP address records of where the hacker has criminally gained access and defamed my account. My attorney has advised me that you have committed a serious felony offence of cyberhacking. The mountain of incriminating evidence against you has already been collected and is being processed at this point. My attorney has also advised me that I can persue money damages in civil court, as well, for defamation of a non-public figure. The Police is currently acquiring an arrest warrent for your name at the Queens Criminal Courthouse where my attorney is following the process as well. Shall I decide to prosecute and press charges, you will be tried as an adult in criminal court, convicted of these serious felonies and you you can be looking at the next several years in state prison. P.S. As you know, The Police is especially interested in convicting hackers who are associated with the group "Anonymous", as you have shown to be."

Unless he's joking, youre screwed..

Omg - July 23, 2012, 8:48 pm

if i delete my facebook and change my ip will it help?

Screeb - July 23, 2012, 8:49 pm

Unless you have a dynamic IP, no. They have your IP already, and depending on what you did to his FB, theres a ton of eveidence

Rozyn - July 23, 2012, 8:51 pm

Umm since when was it illegal to hack FB and get jail time lmfaao

Also magnet the bitch, cancel your internet, and unplug your modem XD

Omg - July 23, 2012, 8:52 pm

I'm in horrifying stress right now. I just finished high school and heading to college to become a registered nurse and this will ruin my career! I need someone to help me what should I do?!

I logged into both same IP's on that asshole's account and my account and that evidence. Even if I unplug my internet they would still trace me. Plus we know each other in real life and live next to each other 30 minute drive.

MaVelli - July 23, 2012, 9:00 pm

Sounds to me he's blowing smoke up your ass. No one steals 500 bucks and calls the police and hires an attorney over a facebook hack. your best bet is to just ignore all this bs and forget about this retard. lifes to (not long) to chase down every idiot who gives you the finger.

Alside - July 23, 2012, 9:02 pm

Dude you are not goin to go to jail for hacking a Facebook. And also show proof that he scammed you out of almost 500$ and he could be looking at a hefty fine as he would most likely get a fraud charge:)

There is simply no evidence of him stealing my money. Just to be at the safe side, I am gonna delete my Facebook. I'm very worried at this point.

No evidence. :(

Alside - July 23, 2012, 9:04 pm

Do not be worried NOTHING IS GOING TO HAPPEN TO YOU THE LATLW HAS BETTER THINGS TO DO THEN HEAR SOME GUY WHINING ABOUT HOW SOMEONE HACKED HIS FACEBOOK.

That's not how the law works though. If someone committed a cyber crime and the guy suspects someone is responsible they can prosecute them if they wanted too.

I wouldn't be able to sleep at night over the fear of police coming to arrest me...

His post was very serious. This will ruin my life!

What do you guys suggest I really should do?

sam2011hacker - July 23, 2012, 9:13 pm

go hide somewhere LOL

what u can do is u can permanently dealeat his facebook id by using a death certificate method if its working. i dont remeber if its got patched and call ur isp and cut ur internet plan and if u have a static ip then u r lucky

u a strong vpn or private vpn for 1 month. this can help u out

Social engineering is great but, in cases like this its highly doubtful. I could be arrested anytime anyway right now and I don't know how to get out of this.

Destroy your hard disk.

If you receive a notification of the police, just deny everything.

Chance of success, hmmm maybe 80% ~ 85%, anyway, good luck.

Grand Pootis - July 23, 2012, 9:21 pm

Destroying your HDD wouldn't help.

ISPs keep records and would be subpoenaed.

Additionally, somebody implied that having a dynamic IP would help. Not true.

You did commit a crime, but it's doubtful you would get any stringent sentence.

I've done research people getting arrested for hacking a Facebook account.

Grand Pootis - July 23, 2012, 9:25 pm

You can get arrested. That's only if you are suspected of a crime.

Sure, you can go to jail. I doubt the feds or state, depending on where you both live, would care enough to pursue you

He might, though, and he could have the leg up in civil court.

Dr?ke - July 23, 2012, 9:30 pm

Omg bro you better cover your asshole in jail. He sounded pretty serious.

Grand Pootis - July 23, 2012, 9:32 pm

I already told you that I doubt you will be criminally prosecuted.

It is civil court I would be worried about. It wouldn't be his call to criminally prosecute you, but it would be to civilly prosecute you.

He can ask for you to be prosecuted, but he can't actually do it, as the hacking was against facebook.

Nevertheless, you may get criminally prosecuted. For something so minor, it would be more than likely just a slap on the wrist, but you'd be a convicted felon.

Ichi - July 23, 2012, 9:32 pm

Unless he fucking with you, you're fucked.

This won't do you any good if they already have your IP and evidence of you hacking but what you can do is

- 1 - Wipe HDD at least 7 times
- 2 - take computer and smash it and burn the remains
- 3 - Delete your interes
- 4- change your name
- 5 - leave town

You're welcome

x6c_ - July 23, 2012, 9:33 pm

I read some time ago about a boy who was interrogated, they tried to break, but held firm to deny everything.

They had to drop and dismiss the case...

Nothing will happen, just be sure it has nothing incriminating on your PC in case this is seized.. (for that reason I mentioned destroying the hard disk).

Sorry the bad english.

Well, yeah if you don't wipe your hdd then there will be more evidence against you.

You say you're scared, but won't kill your hdd because you had so much important info on there. Well, if you don't wipe you could be fucked and if you do wipe then you lose your shit. So, pick one. ?

Build a shell on your router. When built, make few connection to it from this shell. When it's done update your firmware from router and pluggit off. This will blow your router and will make impossible to find any info from it. Then called your company gone and say someone hacked your router and blow it. Get a new one and you're safe. Easy?

And of course clean your PC from any hack. The best is to use a program that makes a full format so police cannot restore deleted stuff from HD

He scammed money that's true. But still you can do what you want and will be 100% safe. If police come one day you just have to say i was hacked. Don't know nothing about all this.

darkreaper - July 24, 2012, 5:01 am

You're fine.

Addictionz - July 24, 2012, 5:08 am

You're not going to go to jail over hacking Facebook accounts. I have hacked many accounts without a VPN and nothing has happened. If you were to hack an account with financial information then I can understand why he would pursue charges, stop overreacting.

Funny enough i social engineer'd this guy i knew and got his retarded ass to go to a phisher page and snag'd his yahoo then took over his facebook after that. posted screen shots all over his facebook so his friends could laugh. this kid being apart of my gf's family or w/e. anyways he did in fact call the cops. i got a letter in the mail saying they wanted to speak with me about an investigation. I tossed the shit in the trash. haven't heard another thing about it. Not saying i will never but i mean if they have my address and it was important enough they could always call me. I did happen to threaten his life after i recieved the letter perhaps that's why i've not heard anything about it since then. not really sure. I wouldn't sweat it tho. but ya i learn a valid lesson that day. when you do something worth doing on here. leave the bragging out of it....long as you know its all that matters. t.c.

Just because they went quiet doesn't mean anything. You have internet....which can easily be monitored, very much like this post. You've basically claimed and admitted to everything on here.

If you are sentenced to anything, it would probably be probation/house arrest for a while. Don't get me wrong, they can charge you with:

- Conspiracy to commit cyber fraud
- Conspiracy to steal passwords (that phish you did)
- Slander (depending on what you said)
- Breaking and entering (by logging into an account you had no permission to be using)
- Cyber-Criminalism

I honestly don't know how I would react.

I would probably use DBAN and do a 32 pass format. Then smash the HDD and get a new one. Not to mention, pull all power from the machine and remove the RAM (prevent RAM forensics). I would also do what I could about getting a new ISP or changing my IP if your under 17 or 16 hes blowing smoke out of his ass, you'll be charged as a minor if you are under 17/16 (depends on ur stats law of when u become an adult), i assume its your first offense so you will get probation, along with court fee's, and i doubt he would be able to sue you for money damages because you didn't cause him any monetary loses by being able to figure out his password (you didn't "hack" shit) unless the FB page belong ot a business and the act caused them to lose traffic or money on their site. but all in all, yea your fucked. i suggest you download dban and do a 35x passover on ur HDD, that way all they have is IP logs, and IP logs are not enough to stand up in court (a judge has ruled this during the whole mega upload thing about feds wanting to go after users for downloading from the site).

Lol... There trying to pin you to the "HACKERS ON STEROIDS!!!!"? Just be like I don't know who anon is and what money has he spent on facebook that make's it worth getting a charge for? Fuck kids that think everything can be solved with calling the lawl.

TheDarkCampaign - July 24, 2012, 10:01 pm

Alright, let's be honest here... Is this guy bill gates? Like seriously, he's gonna spend that much money to hire an attorney, because you hacked his facebook in response to him scamming $500 off of you? Doesn't seem very likely to me... And for future reference don't confess to something on a public website asking how to NOT get caught when you're doing the thing most likely to get you charged in the first place.

memory - July 24, 2012, 10:13 pm

@OP, you'll be fine. They don't care that you 'hacked' a Facebook.
The only time they care is if it's something government related.

The Monarch - July 24, 2012, 10:16 pm

NO YOUR NOT SCREWED! he conned you out of money, while hacking is against the law it causes no tangible damages. if anything you have the upper hand. if you do go to court ask for a public defender and counter sue. you might possiably be able to get a settlement without having to go to trial. if you do go to trial he will be found guilty of theft and you will be found guilty of a misdemeanor computer crime. where he will go to jail and you will get a 5000$ fine.(in ohio at least) :P think it through next time.

anonmosity - July 24, 2012, 10:23 pm

Hes shown to be anonymous, yet the guy knows who he is... that means you're not anon

Mine is in the state of New York lol

MattSharp - July 26, 2012, 3:19 am

Um yea. If you're not pulling all of our legs, i would suggest completely formatting your hard drive. That way, when the police accuse you of such crimes, you deny having any involvement and say you think you yourself got hacked. They will get a search warrant and look through your computer - which had a clean install about a week ago if you get me ;) ;). Theres no way they can pin anything on you without hard evidence. Then for the cherry on top of the cake, say that this man, the guy whos pressing charges, is trying to toss the coin on you because you were about to go to the police with information that he scammed you. BOOM. Mate, lets be honest, i've read this whole thread and it sounds like you were having a bit of fun, much to my amusement haha. Cheers mate

nate3779 - July 26, 2012, 12:11 pm

Believe me we have all been caught doing something and been told "alerting the authority" or something but your fine FB is not that bad and do what MattSharp said, that will put this to bed!

mrbeard - July 26, 2012, 1:15 pm get nudes of his mom/sister and tell him you are going to hang them around places where he hangs out if he doesn't drop charges and tell him stop snitchin wtf kinda kid is this? is he close enough for you to go to his house and beat him down?

Zagura - July 26, 2012, 4:29 pm

Better go to his house and kidnap someone of his family members then tell him that you will cut "kidnapped person's" head of if he don't drop the charges. Best of luck to you!

deadmans96 - July 26, 2012, 4:36 pm

you're screwed and What do you want for me ??

Orienzor - July 26, 2012, 5:45 pm

He's full of shit, sounds like he went through a lot of trouble to make himself sound like an asshat. Cops don't care about Facebook hacking man, seriously? Unless you hack the COPS facebook pages, they're not going to bother with you.

Seriously, Ring them up anonymously and tell them 'my friend just hacked my facebook account' And see the reaction you get.

tres - July 26, 2012, 6:07 pm

The police won't care about a Facebook hacking unless you have hacked a high profile somebody. He is just using scare tactics to try and frighten you and/or extort money out of you. Just remember to use a VPN/SOCKS next time and you'll be fine.

-DownFall - July 26, 2012, 6:13 pm

Sorry this is probably inappropriate, but when I died laughing the first time read it...
I mixed up the work defamation with defecation - in other words you took a shit on his account.

patricke123 - July 26, 2012, 10:19 pm

Oh man cross your fingers and wish for a good luck....He took your money you can use that as pay back...don't ne afraid if you get asked by cops just tell them you wanted to get your money back from him that's why you did it ...

No one steals 500 bucks and calls the police and hires an attorney over a facebook hack. your best bet is to just ignore all this bs and forget about this retard. lifes to (not long) to chase down every idiot who gives you the finger.

Amen!!! This guy knows whats up!!!

Love it!

But yes, best of luck to you, he seems like a complete waste of time to be worrying about it

ExciteD - July 27, 2012, 9:17 am download dynDNS fast...or chang your isp =internet service provider

kenjoe1230 - July 27, 2012, 9:24 am

I wouldn't call it hacking if you just used security questions, nothings gonna happen

I just did that and the operator laughed his ass off slasherxtrem - July 27, 2012, 3:27 pm

post his facebook and i PERSONALLY will tell him he is full of shit. ur good to go ;) trust me, i have done lots worse and been "turned over to the sheriffs department" countless times..

Nixros™ - July 27, 2012, 3:56 pm

Okay, So your telling me your going to get screwed by posting shit on a skid's facebook? but yet he scammed out out of 500$ you have nothing to worrie about

Monsey - July 27, 2012, 7:20 pm

Dig a hole in you backyard and chuck the computer in it, then burn thermite on it.

When the fuss comes knocking simply say you haven't had a computer for years.
