Thread: iCrypt gold = dead?

furunculus - August 1, 2012, 8:19 am

Is anybody else able to reach iCrypt's server for login/updates?

Or is the app now dead?

Di???c - August 1, 2012, 3:58 pm iCrypt is dead. So I believe you have to look out for another crypter :-)

furunculus - August 13, 2012, 7:08 am that is great since it had a "lifetime" of use...

Bottom line any app you need to log into is a farse. any app should be able to run as is without authenticating to a server. Updates are a different story.

So iCrypt is a gank. I spent 60 on this half a year ago.

The average crypter will only last a few months, which is why i never pay for lifetime.

HappyBox - August 13, 2012, 12:32 pm

You purchased a "lifetime license". This means you have the license for the lifetime of the crypter. No one ever said it was for your lifetime.

And how long did you wanted to use it??? 5 years???

furunculus - October 25, 2012, 11:40 am well seeing how it was "up and running" for last 4 years. a couple months would have been nice.

no trust exists & thats ok.. but uphold your end of a deal.

-and no icrypt cant be cracked because it called home to a server to keep it alive. so no server, no app.

If somebody knows of a real app,... pm me.

updates could be via stenogonographic images sent via mail..
this is not that hard people.. you dont need a damn server sitting someplace updating malware waiting to be taken offline.

what iCrypt was, was a pure gank. *for me

Lifetime, You thought it was YOUR lifetime? No.

The lifetime of the product. =D

It's an app that makes your deteactable file undetecleable.

Let's say you have a keylogger, and want to use it on people. Most people use an AV, right? What a crypter does is that it "bypasses" the AV so it looks legit. ?

Socket error 11004 - Valid name, no data record of requested type :/

DrewDrops29 - April 4, 2013, 12:22 pm

the crypter was detected way to fast , even after he said its fud lol
