Thread: Best JDB Service? HELP | SPARKY | uJDB | ANONJDB | What is the best?

????A?? - August 3, 2012, 5:47 pm

My question is what is the best paid Java drive by service, I've seen many on HF such as Sparky Java here: <https://hackforums.net/showthread.php?tid=1983453&highlight=jdb>

As well as uJDB here: <https://hackforums.net/showthread.php?tid=2634712>

I thought there were more.. I remember seeing more back in the day, but does anyone know which JDB service is the best?

Thanks.

Update: I found Anon JDB <https://hackforums.net/showthread.php?tid=2030065> Does anyone know which one of these are the best? Thanks.

I could do a FUD java-driveby with my generator, I am currently not selling the generator at the moment as I'm implementing netseal to it.

But I could do single generates of custom sites for a few dollars, or really cheap if you wish?

????A?? - August 5, 2012, 2:37 pm

If anyone knows which of the JDB services I have posted are the best please let me know.

None is the best,go get a free fud java driveby link and upload it to a free host,hide the link or get a domain that directs to it.

I'd suggest you not waste anycash on skidware.

FoxxJava.

The developer actually knows what he's doing.

Thanks for the info, I will keep looking into them, hopefully others can share they're opinions

You forgot about FoxxJava, unless you don't like FoxxJava. May I ask why?

- Don't think Sparky is for sale anymore.
- Anon JDB is down and got hacked.
- uJDB is a new product on the market and I believe he's been having issues with his servers. Not 100% sure though, might wanna read through his sales thread.

AnonJDB is still for sale and it's down at the moment for a server transfer.

FoxyJava is currently online and the last time we ever had a server transfer was over 6 months ago. But then again, we have a dedicated server. Always running smooth and if you have an issue, just private message me ?.

If you wanna demo, shoot me a PM or add me on Skype, zerosniperhex. I'll show you on Teamviewer. Our demo account will be up soon though.

Yes, all his domains are blocked by:

- ESET
- Google
- Malware Bytes

??s?? - August 13, 2012, 7:18 pm

Yeah at the moment our host values are marked as phishing sites.

We are working on getting new domains to offer you guys. Until then you can still use uJDB to generate a .ZIP containing the JDB files so you can upload to your own site.

You could easily go with FoxyJava and get hosting, domains, and generate a .zip containing the JDB files without getting blocked by antivirus ?.

Been doing it for about 6 months with these domains I have. Unlike you, Sparky, and AnonJDB, I don't purchase .info or .in domains. I spend that $10 - $15 for my customer's domains. All about quality, but no one else understands that. It's okay, you'll learn eventually. See, been doing this for 2 years. I know what I'm doing and I'm not willing share my secrets.

Don't understand how you can say that when NONE of my domains are .in or .info lol.

The only domain that is a .in is uJDB's main site, and that is intentional.

Jiszle - August 14, 2012, 3:51 am

I had sparky and it was absolutely horrible, the owner promises tons of features but never delivers. The jdb didn't even work for weeks and weeks. I assume he fixed it but I was done with that POS long ago.

Leg?nd - August 14, 2012, 4:53 am

I've only had anonjdb, but I must say, it does the job.

????A?? - August 14, 2012, 9:05 am

I just want something with a lot of domains/urls to chose from with website cloning of course, tthat isn't going to get blocked after I send...

Well just like what JHFire said or better known here now as illuminatus.

SparkyJava is utter horrible promised updates made threads about progress on the updates after a months nothing just disappeared.

AnonJDB haven't heard a thing about them but not sales trashing here just making a point they are using iframe to execute the jdb.

UJDB haven't got this yet but i'll be glad to purchase this in sometime if i feel it's worthy :)

FoxyJava - 5/5 Rating for this not being bias here but i own 3 products but not uJDB and as a customer i'm giving my experience on these JDB'S that i own but Foxy is hereby the best compared to these 2 Sparky and ANON coder is selling it for 2 years now with a vast knowledge in JDB's/Java unlike some and keep's updating it if your gonna invest money buy this one don't be like me and waste money :)

This is just my opinion since i'm a customer of the 3 products. Well i was a customer of Foxy in late last year don't really recall the version but i don't know what he has updated now :) If Swaqqpack was here it would be the bomb and vuzia too. Well :) Good Day.

Dentist of Detroit - August 25, 2012, 5:41 pm

Alright, I bought both foxy and anonjava last week:

Foxy is great overall, fast response, illum is a great guy and everything works fine. A few things are broken right now, like website cloner and adobe flash secondary option, but it's bound to be fixed soon and you can clone sites manually. Hosting works great.

Anon is also good, but when trying to "get" someone they had norton and it popped up pooping all over the place. So my main gripe with this is that it isn't FUD.

Soon all the urls will be blocked, and the fact that anon just straight up isn't fud is disgusting.. I'm probably just going to have a custom JDB made.. Idunno

I wish one of these JDB services were actually good.

I wish one of these JDB services were actually good.

Some of them are good, you're just not willing to try them ?.

Plus getting a custom one made can be between $5 - $10 and depending who you get it from it might not work or it might not last long. Which means you'll be continually purchasing a custom made one, when you could just go with a generator. With a generator you'll also get more features and if you get a good one, you'll continue getting those features and updates.

Honestly, I think either you're too cheap or you're too concerned about domains. If you're concerned about domains, spend the $10 to get one, get hosting that is $5 a month, and get a generator that allows you to actually generate and download the files (.jar and .html). Unfortunately, FoxyJava is the only one that allows you to actually download the .jar and .html files.

Now you've spent $15 already and now you need a custom built JDB that will cost you $5 - $10. That is about $20 - $25 you just spent and you'll continually need to spend the $5 - $10 for the custom built JDB, seeing that your custom JDB will get unfud eventually. When you could just spend a flat fee and have the maker of the product worry about updates.

And plus, some of those people who sell the customer JDB are just using the same source or just selling a JDB service using a JDB service that they weren't suppose to sell. Either way, you'll probably be paying for something a lot more people use and it won't be 100% custom.

You probably won't believe me though and that is okay, but I've been doing this a lot longer ?.
